RENT CHURCH MUST PAY TAX.

Atty.-Gen. Webb Holds They Must Be Used Only for Religious Purposes.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, June 6.—Dist.-Atty. Wachhorst today received an opinion from Atty.-Gen. U. S. Webb that churches are not exempt from taxation if they are rented for concerts and lectures. The opinion extends only to these churches which rent their premises for purposes other than religious worship, and does not decide whether a church shall be exempt from taxation if it is used for lectures when a rental is not charged and an admission fee which goes to the owner of the premises is not charged.

GERMAN STEAMER CAUSES SUSPICION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW ORLEANS, June 6.—The unexpected arrival here today of the Hamburg-American steamer Furst Bismarck and the announcement that she would take on miscellaneous freight for Mexican ports aroused speculation as to whether there might be significance in the vessel's movements.

An agent of the Department of Justice tomorrow unofficially will inspect the cargo which the vessel will take here.

Medford Folks Compelled to Celebrate in a Steam-Heated Building.

Rain Falling Continuously in Other Parts of Oregon for Twenty-four Hours.

Farmers in Sacramento Valley Are Hard Hit by an Unusual Storm.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PORTLAND, June 6.—In Portland rain has fallen almost continuously for twenty-four hours past and the weather is raw and cold. In Southern Oregon this was the coldest June day on record, according to advices from Medford, where a rose carnival was in progress, which was driven by the cold into a steam-heated building. Eastern Oregon points again reported snow flurries, cold weather and heavy rains today. Reports from all points in that section told of winter weather rather than summer. Eastern Washington conditions were similar to those of Eastern Oregon, while in Idaho a considerable fall of snow over night was reported. Throughout the Pacific Northwest the weather is pronounced almost unprecedented for June. For tomorrow the local forecast is showers. Rising temperatures are predicted within forty-eight hours.

SACRAMENTO IS STORM SWEPT.

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) June 6.—A storm of unusual intensity for this season of the year broke over the Sacramento Valley early today and rain continued steadily throughout the day and until a late hour tonight. The prediction was for further rain Sunday morning with clearing weather in the afternoon. Up to 5 o'clock tonight but seven-hundredths of an inch had fallen here. A snowstorm raged in the high mountains and the rivers fell rapidly.

Farmers were dolefully mournful over the loss that the rain would bring, but unless the storm continues to an unprecedented length, it is probable the damage will be slight. All cherries have been picked in this section. On the other hand, peaches and apricots are still too green to feel the effects of rain unless followed by extremely hot weather.

Hay will suffer somewhat, but feed on the ranges will be largely benefited by the storm. It is probable the feed so obtained will offset the loss in the hay districts.

One source of worry to the fruit handlers is the loss of three or four days in shipping. The season will be set back to normal should a few more delays be met.

RED BLUFF CUT OFF.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RED BLUFF, June 6.—A big snowstorm here today and last night has stopped traffic completely. Not a wheel is turning in this vicinity.

IOWA TORNADO KILLS SEVEN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SIOUX CITY, June 6.—The tornado which swept across Northwestern Iowa last night killed seven and injured a dozen, some seriously, according to reports received in Sioux City this afternoon.

The known dead are:

P. W. YETUMA, Sanborn.
PATRICK DOUGHERTY, Sanborn.
McNUTT, child, Archer.
BISLAND, child, Archer.
WILLIAM BILLS, Sanborn.
HOWARD BILLS, Sanborn.
WILLIAM M'DANIELS, Marcus.

The tornado hit Sanborn about 5:30 o'clock last night, leaving ruin and death in its wake.

Near Archer the storm tore the child of John Bisland from its father's arms and dashed it to death against the side of the farmhouse.

Near Hospers the storm struck the farm home of James Allen and five members of the family were injured and the buildings wrecked.

DAMAGE AT SANBORN.

SANBORN (Iowa) June 6.—Two are dead, one missing and two injured in a cyclone which struck this vicinity last night. Property damage is estimated at $150,000, practically all of the east end of this town having been levelled by the wind.

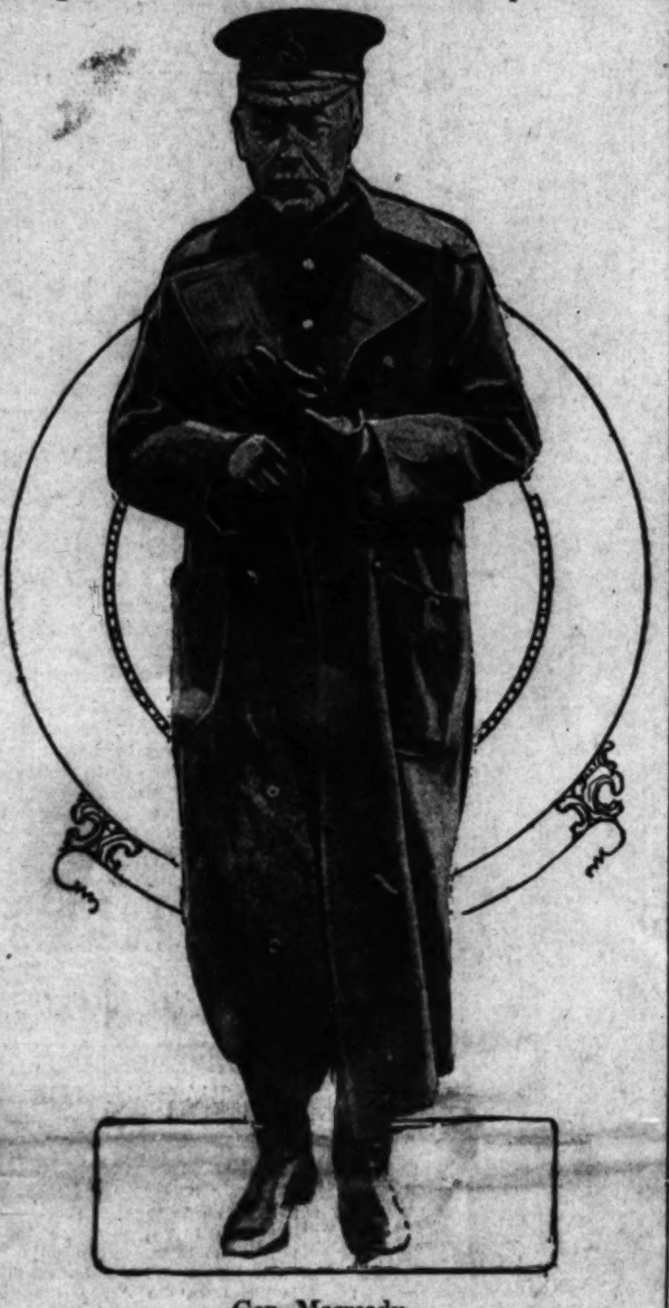
Two elevators, the city water tower, the electric light plant, and a lumber yard, were swept away by the storm, which struck here about 6 o'clock. The fact that there were fatalities did not develop until today, when the bodies of Mrs. Fink and Yetuma, a lad of 16 years, were found in their ruined homes.

The Black River Falling.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BLACK RIVER FALLS (Wis.) June 6.—The water in the Black River has fallen three feet since last night and unless there is a further downpour of rain, no serious flood conditions are expected.

England Relies on Him to Keep Order.



Gen. Macready,

Commander of the English troops in Belfast, who will be called upon to quell the Ulster volunteers in case of an uprising over home rule.

Unionists.

ULSTER'S BUSINESS HURT BY POLICY OF CARSON.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, June 6.—Nothing has been done toward settling the Ulster question, although views were interchanged by Prime Minister Asquith and Opposition Leader Bonar Law during the Whitsuntide holidays.

Mr. Asquith holds that the Unionists in the House of Lords should embody their ideas of a settlement in the amending home rule bill, which will be introduced there next week.

The Unionists reply that by so doing they will commit themselves to an acknowledgement that the home rule bill must pass, which they refuse to do, although now its passage is automatic, whatever the Lords may do.

But the real crux of the Ulster situation now is the anxiety of the business community because of the desolating effects on Ulster commerce and banking of the uncertainty brought about by Carson's policy.

Between the scared business men on one side, who want a settlement, and the Ulster volunteers on the other, who have been assured that they shall have an opportunity of "going for" the Catholics with the connivance of the British army and police, Carson is on the horns of a horrible dilemma.

Another unforeseen element, the National volunteers, looms up very large to upset these calculations. The Ulster volunteers draw $1 a day each from wealthy Englishmen who have put up a fund of $5,000,000. The National volunteers pay their own expenses and correspondents of Unionist newspapers report that they number already 100,000 men. In Londonderry the National volunteers equal the Orange volunteers in number and are as well armed. Gen. Macready is in charge of the English troops at Belfast and reliance is placed on him to maintain order.

WOULD BAR THE ORGAN AND PIANO FROM CHURCH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BLOOMINGTON (Ind.) June 6.—Pipe organs, pianos and kindred musical instruments have no place in a church, according to a report adopted today by the synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of the United States and Canada, which is meeting here.

Dr. H. G. Foster of Omaha, Neb., reporting for the Committee on Psalmody, reiterated the position of the church as opposed to instrumental music in the house of God as a corrupt form of worship. The report concluded.

"Since the purpose of God, in the present dispensation, is to develop and perfect spiritually, the musical instrument, which is of necessity typical and emotional, must be done away with."

MILITANT IN TROUSERS TRIES TO ENTER PALACE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, June 6.—It has just become known that the militant suffragettes nearly succeeded, the other day, in entering Buckingham Palace dressed as soldiers in full regimentals. A hansom cab containing a smart young "officer" drove up to the palace gates, where there was a cordon of policemen on guard. Just as the "officer" stepped out of the cab a detective attracted by the tight-fitting trousers, recognized "him" as a well-known suffragette connected with a family of prominence. The driver of the hansom cab was ordered to right-about-face. The name of the young woman has not been divulged.

TWO ARMIES IN IRELAND, HUNDRED THOUSAND EACH

England Sends in a Third to Prevent a Clash, But Will It Obey Orders?

Sir Edward Carson on the Verge of Nervous Prostration to Keep His Volunteers of the Orange from Engaging the Nationalists of the Green in Mortal Combat. More Arms and Ammunition Smuggled Into Belfast.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, June 7.—That the Ulster volcano may break at any moment is more and more coming to be feared by official England. The news that one hundred and fifty thousand guns had been sent into Belfast yesterday has caused a genuine, though suppressed, sensation in government circles. The conspiracy to laugh down the volunteer movement in Belfast has failed. Official England now understands that the Ulster men are bent on business of the most terrible sort; that they mean to sacrifice life and property rather than consent to home rule without the consent of the governed.

LONDON, June 6.—The "Ulster situation" is near the crisis stage again. Indeed, it has never ceased to be an open sore since the wild panic created by the wholesale resignations of the officers of the army when ordered to Ulster last winter.

From time to time, there have been open preparations for war. Within the past ten days there have been thousands of rifles smuggled into the hands of the Orange volunteers and their daily drilling and rifle practice has been so constant as to have been lost sight of as a matter of news.

Today the situation has all the tension of civil war. No one knows just what is about to happen. Not a direct threat has been made since the final passage of the home rule bill by the House of Commons, but still the government is not wholly lulled into a sense of safety thereby.

It is known that Sir Edward Carson, during his visit to Ulster this week, spent all of his time keeping the volunteers in check. He met a condition of affairs that frightened even himself, and it took his utmost persuasion to pacify them until such time as he must necessarily report that he and his colleagues in the House and their allies among the Lords can do no more to stay the empowering of the Irish Parliament.

The Lords may amend the Home Rule bill, but that is all they can do. The House may or may not act on the amendment. If they do and accept, well and good; it will stand. If they do not, the amendment will be lost and the bill as passed by the Commons will automatically become the law of the land.

TWO ARMIES IN IRELAND.

Tonight there are two armies in Northern Ireland, each over 100,000 strong, according to the claims of the respective leaders, and each anxious to get at the other, while neither is the recognized force of the government. The Ulster volunteers, constituting the first army, are drilled to the hour and straining at the leash. The green ranks of the Irish Nationalists are equally well prepared and as anxious for fighting. To stay these two the government has its regular army in close proximity, but can it be depended upon? That is the question that is agitating those who know; that is the question that must be answered and answered soon.

If the Ulster volunteers are the myth the Irish leaders all claim; if they were organized merely to act as coercers for the Unionists in their efforts to block the passage of the Home Rule bill and terrify the Liberals and their cohorts, then there is no real danger in the present crisis. If, on the other hand, they are men of red blood and ready to do all they have openly boasted they will do, then England stands on the threshold of a bloody civil war, and the throne is in danger.

GOVERNMENT PROMISES.

The government has announced that it will preserve order in Uulster at any cost, and is prepared to act upon the first evidence of aggression. If shooting starts action will be quick and decisive. It hardly seems possible that one untoward act can do other than plunge all England into a struggle that will rock it from end to end.

Carson claims that his cause has the support of the colonies and says that they and America have contributed large sums toward financing the army and preparing for the war that is to come. Redmond declares that this is untrue. That the colonies are with Ireland in its fight. The press tonight is silent. No one seems to want to predict what will happen nor when.

CHURCH OPPOSES NATHAN.

Catholics Urge Boycott of Fair Because of Appointment of Rome's Former Mayor.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 6.—The appointment of Ernesto Nathan, former Mayor of Rome, as Royal Commissioner of Italy's exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition has stirred up a storm of protest among the American Roman Catholics and the opposition to Signor Nathan has reached such a stage that America, leading Roman Catholic paper, is editorially advocating that the Catholics boycott the fair.

The paper asks Catholics not to have any part in the exposition, not to lend it any support and not to give it any encouragement. It opposes Nathan on the ground that as the head of the anti-Clerical party in Rome he has insulted all that is dear to Catholics

REBELS FIGHTING REBELS IN CITY OF HERMOSILLO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NACO (Sonora, Mex.) June 6.—According to private advices received here intense excitement prevails in Cananea tonight following the rumors of street fighting in Hermosillo between the Maytorena and Pesqueira factions. No definite details are given, but it is believed here the final break between those factions has come about. Cananea has been in a disturbed condition for several days, due to the arrest of Frederico Platt, prefecto of that city, on a charge of cattle stealing, which his friends say has been trumped up. Platt was taken to Hermosillo Friday under strong military guard, to stand trial. He is one of the strongest supporters of Maytorena in northern Sonora. Military officials in Cananea claim to have the situation well in hand.

VIOLENCE IN THE STRIKE OF WESTINGHOUSE MEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PITTSBURGH, June 6.—The first disorder attending the strike of the 10,000 employees of the Westinghouse interests in the Turtle Creek Valley occurred tonight when a workman was assaulted while entering the East Pittsburgh plant. One of the assailants was arrested. All the saloons in East Pittsburgh have been closed.

Police officials are preparing for any eventualities which may arise on Monday, when a pay of $150,000 will be distributed among the Westinghouse workers.

President E. M. Herr of the electric company today announced that no strikebreakers would be imported. He also said that the strikers' organization—the Allegheny Congenial Industrial Union—would not be recognized by the company.

HUERTA PROMISE MINUS STRINGS.

Will Waive Technicalities in His Resignation.

Carranza Expects to Refuse Plan for Armistice.

United States Prefers Natera to Villa as Army Head.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NIAGARA FALLS (Ont.) June 6.—No strings are attached to Gen. Huerta's promise to resign the Mexican presidency as soon as his country is "politically pacified." His delegates to the mediation conference took occasion today to say publicly that he does not intend to hide behind any technicalities.

In following the newspaper accounts of the conference here, the Mexican delegation reached the conclusion that their recent statement setting forth the attitude of Gen. Huerta toward demands for his retirement had been misinterpreted in some quarters. It had been said that under the language of his pledge to retire when the country was politically pacified Gen. Huerta might insist on holding office until all guerrilla bands were dispersed. On that account another statement was issued by the ranking member of the Huerta delegation.

It follows:

THE HUERTA STATEMENT.

"Mr. Rabasa of the Mexican delegation has been asked what is the interpretation given by the Mexican delegates to the word 'politically' in their statement declaring that Gen. Huerta is prepared to withdraw provided that at the time of his withdrawal Mexico 'shall be politically pacified,' and if he thinks that an agreement between the two contending parties would not be considered as fulfilling Gen. Huerta's condition.

"To the above question Mr. Rabasa answers that the expression used by the delegation does not mean that Gen. Huerta demands the material pacification of the country, nor the dispersal of the last of the groups of bandits which over-run many parts of it, making the revolution a pretext for their lawlessness; but that peace shall be assured by political means which will guarantee for the nation that maintenance of law and order which is indispensable to the exercise of constitutional functions. The object in view is peace. The condition is that that object shall have been achieved. If an agreement instures that end, the condition is as well fulfilled by it as by any other means."

The American delegates met today with the mediators, but consideration was given only to questions that arose before the matter of Constitutionalist participation became the important issue. It is said that some progress was made.

TENTATIVE PLANS.

A plan now practically agreed upon provides for the elimination of Huerta and the setting up of a new government with both the Cientificos and Constitutionalists equally represented, and with a neutral holding the rank of President. Should the Constitutionalists decline to participate it is thought the United States still would have to carry out its part of the bargain.

In that event it is not impossible that this country may unexpectedly find herself the ally of the present Mexico City government in harmoniously bringing about the change. Meanwhile if the Constitutionalist army continued in the field it is not difficult to see how it might become the foe of the United States.

This situation is believed here to be the cause of a great deal of embarrassment to the Washington administration. The American delegates have considered this question and it is not doubted that this is responsible for their anxiety to have the chief Constitutionalist cause represented here as soon as possible.

Some comfort is being derived here from the fact that Gen. Carranza has placed Gen. Natera at the head of the army nearest Mexico City. Should it be necessary for an American force to proceed from Vera Cruz to the Mexican capital to aid in establishing a provisional government—and such a course is a possibility—the Americans would rather have Gen. Natera at the head of the approaching Constitutionalist army than Gen. Villa.

NAMING OF NATERA.

Gen. Carranza's course in naming Natera to such an important command, however, is believed to augur well for the future. By this act it is said he intended to serve notice that he could be trusted to proceed with orderliness. Should Natera press on and enter Mexico City before any action is taken here to prevent it, he would probably treat with greater humanity than has Villa the Federals who were unfortunate enough to be captured.

On what the prediction is based is not known, but mediators and American delegates say an answer to the latest note to Gen. Carranza probably will be received by Tuesday.

CARRANZA REPLY MAY BE NEGATIVE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) June 6.—The pending proposition from the A B C mediators embodied no specific request that Gen. Carranza discuss either internal or international questions, it was said today on authority. It merely requested the participation of the Constitutionalists in the Niagara Falls conferences to settle the Mexican difficulty, nor did it specify that an armistice between the revolutionists and the Huerta troops must be established, according to the version given here.

In the belief of those here who are in a position to know Carranza's ideas, and in accordance with semi-official statements coming from the Constitutionalist headquarters, Carranza will make a negative and positive reply. He will agree, it was predicted, to entering the negotiations to attempt a settlement of the international difficulties growing out of the Vera Cruz incident, but will decline positively to sit in conference with Huerta delegates for discussion of the internal affairs of Mexico. An armistice also would be refused, according to Carranza's local agents.

Gen. Carranza was reported as having departed today from Torreon. He will spend the night at Parras, former home of the Madero family, proceeding tomorrow to Saltillo, where his new provisional government will be established. It was said that Gen. Villa remained in Chihuahua City and did not go south to confer with Gen. Carranza at Torreon regarding the effect of the new central military zone which Carranza created for Gen. Natera. Constitutionalists here asserted that the creation of the new division would not alter Gen. Villa's plans for the attacks on several central Mexican cities, although these cities are located in Natera's zone.

WORKING ON ANSWER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TORREON (Coahuila) June 5.—Gen. Carranza's answer to the test question sent him by the South American mediators today was being prepared. Carranza, his staff and escort arrived here after a night spent on the desert, twenty miles east of here, where the train was delayed by a washed-away bridge.

Heavy rains also are reported as having delayed traffic from the north. If Gen. Villa does not arrive from Chihuahua City by tonight, Carranza will leave written orders for Villa and continue his journey to Saltillo, which place he is most anxious to reach. Gen. Villa was reported here as having left Chihuahua City on a special train bound for Torreon to meet Carranza.

The Constitutionalist commander-in-chief was given a demonstration upon his departure yesterday from Durango. Several thousand school children lined the tracks over which his train was to pass and stood for several hours in the sun to wave him a farewell.

HUERTA REVIEWS HIS MILITIA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, June 7.—Provisional President Huerta today reviewed the employees of the various departments of the government who are organized militia.

A summary court-martial was called together this morning to try Sergeant Juan Diaz of the Eighty-ninth Regiment, who late last night killed Second Lieutenant Alfredo Lopez de Mendoza. The charges brought against the sergeant accuse him of an attempt to revolt and with killing his lieutenant. It is thought the prisoner will be executed Monday morning in the presence of the entire garrison of Mexico City.

LAW AND ORDER FOR COLORADO.

BUSINESS MEN TAKE STEPS TO ABOLISH CHAOTIC CONDITIONS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, June 6.—Delegates from 22 counties met here today and effected the organization of the Colorado Law and Order League.

In resolutions adopted it was urged that a law and order league be formed in each county to elect delegates to a State convention and to take such action to secure the election to office in the State government, and representatives and Senator in Congress "as will afford a guarantee that the State will not again be called upon to mortgage the future of her people," or "suffer humiliation in the company of her sister States." These resolutions follow a long preamble on the strike situation.

ORDERS ISSUED BY GEN. HUERTA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, June 6.—The Mexican government notified the Brazilian Minister today that all the properties belonging to the Waters-Pierce Oil Company have been returned to their owners and that the government will pay for all oil fuel taken from the Pierce company for war purposes.

In addition, the Standard American Dredging Company has been authorized to remove and use its machinery that has been held by the government in Salina Cruz since the landing at Vera Cruz.

The Wolvin steamship line has been authorized to operate freely, and instructions have been sent to the port authorities in the gulf to give all protection and facilities to the vessels.

Orders have also been issued for an investigation of the killing of the American, C. B. Hoadley, in the state of Jalisco about a month ago.

President Huerta today ordered set at liberty Max Blum and George Duval, American citizens, and Gregoria Alcarez, the Filipino attached to the United States battleship Florida, who have been in jail here.

The Foreign Office further informed the Brazilian Minister tonight that after an investigation of the case of Samuel Parks, private in the Twenty-eighth United States Infantry, who is believed to have been executed, 'the general military commander in Mexico has been instructed to proceed against those who appear to be responsible for the disappearance of the American."

Farmers in Valley Where the Indians Are Rampant Flee to the United States.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NACO (Sonora, Mex.) June 6.—Of the sixteen American farmers residing in the Yaqui Valley, eleven departed recently for the United States. Those who still remain have signified their intention of leaving shortly.

The agriculturists claims that it is impossible to sell their crops because of the depredations of the Yaquis, and that they realize every day the danger to their lives. Since the Indians were informed the farmers intended leaving, they have not further molested the Americans.

The Yaquis are continuing their campaign along the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad and also on the Toniche branch.

SENATE FAVORS SHORT SESSION.

TRADE COMMISSION BILL MAY BE ON LEGISLATION TO BE PASSED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Preparations were made today in the Senate to take up anti-trust legislation as soon as the Panama tolls exemption repeal bill is disposed of next week. The Interstate Commerce Committee voted to report out for the present a bill creating a Federal trade commission, and the three anti-trust bills passed yesterday by the House were received by the Senate and sent to committees for consideration. There they probably will rest for several weeks at least.

Chairman Newlands of the Interstate Commerce Committee said today he would report the trade commission bill to the Senate early next week and attempt to have it made the unfinished business. If he succeeds, the bill will come up immediately for discussion, and the long debate that even the optimistic Senators see ahead will begin.

Few Senators on either side of the question of trust legislation are predicting how far the Senate will go toward passing measures equivalent in scope to the House bills. There is a strong sentiment to pass merely the trade commission bill and adjourn, the belief being that such legislation is sufficient for the present. Whether this spirit will prevail is a matter for speculation.

Chairman Newlands issued this statement:

"The committee determined today to segregate the trade commission from the supplemental legislation and authorized me to present an amendment in the nature of a substitute for my original bill for a trade commission.

"The committee concluded to name the trade commission the Federal Trade Commission instead of the Interstate Trade Commission, in order to clearly distinguish it from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"The fear expressed that this bill will inaugurate a wholesale inquisition of the 350,000 corporations of the country is groundless. This power is substantially the same as is now possessed by the Bureau of Corporations, and certainly the powers of that bureau have not been exercised in such a way as to annoy the honest business of the country.

"The committee will continue its consideration of supplemental legislation regarding interlocking directorates, holding companies, railway securities, etc., and its action may be in the line of amendments to the trade commission bill, or of separate legislation."

Although no record vote was taken in the Commerce Committee today, several Senators are known to have been opposed to any motion to put any sort of trust legislation before the Senate at this time.

BRANDEGEE'S STATEMENT.

Senator Brandegee, a Republican member of the committee, tonight issued a statement saying:

"In view of the widespread business depression and the apprehension which prevails in commercial and financial centers, I regard the projection of these questions concerning the further inspection and regulation of business by the Federal government into the Congressional arena at this time as a grave mistake.

"I think that a worried and exasperated Congress, which has been in continuous session for more than a year should not be forced to enter upon the discussion of all these intricate and controverted questions in midsummer on the eve of a nation-wide political campaign. I think the agitation and debate will not tend to restore confidence to the distracted and drooping business of the country. I think the best service Congress can render is to pass the appropriation bills and adjourn and let the country have a rest and if possible recover its own wits."

LIGHTS BLAZE WELCOME TO ADMIRING THOUSAN

Glowing Spectacle Never Before Equalled Is C nation of Celebration of Completion of Magni Boulevard System Connecting Van Nuys, Owens and Surrounding Territory.

WHEN at 7:30 o'clock last night the turning of a switch at Owensmouth caused bright lights to blaze forth along thirty-one miles of one of the finest highway systems in California the people of San Fernando Valley and the men of Los Angeles who have spent millions in constructive work there rejoiced. It was the consummation of the development of an ideal suburban farm community, where beauty, utility and comfort have been added to exceptional natural endowment.

The thousands of people who were there to see and admire, beheld a broad level territory, dotted with luxurious homes and fine public buildings, thriving towns, paved boulevards interlacing it all and connecting it with Los Angeles. By day they saw the beauty of the young orchards and bountiful crops of various kinds, the broad boulevards bordered with tens of thousands of rose bushes in bloom and ornamental trees.

Then, when the sun had set behind the western mountains and the fading light began to blot out the land a new and in many respects more wonderful perspective of the recently-developed valley was brought to view. In a twinkling the whole countryside was aglow. Down the shining surface of Sherman way and the newly-completed State highway as far as the eye could see stretched the illuminating electroliers. No outdoor electrical display ever attempted in California could compare with it.

GLOWING PROCESSION.

It was a never-to-be-forgotten spectacle, when a thousand or more automobiles started from Owensmouth for Van Nuys traversing the State highway in a brilliant scintillating procession of glowing lamps. The brightly-lighted highway combined with the headlights of the cars produced an illumination that made the rising moon look pale by comparison.

At one point south of Owensmouth where the road winds and turns in graceful curves the lights of half a thousand cars were visible at once and the enthusiasm of the admiring visitors increased.

The celebration was a successful culmination of suburban community development unsurpassed anywhere. A new standard of comfort and progress had been established. The territory surrounding Van Nuys and Owensmouth, with its artistic buildings, and its completed system of lighted boulevards was declared by many men of State-wide prominence last night to be the last word in modern farm life.

Actual development began a little more than three years ago when the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company purchased 47,500 acres of land that had formerly been comprised in a great ranch. Van Nuys was subdivided as a townsite and has been virtually sold out. Owensmouth was opened a year later. In building the towns and developing the farm lands the company spent money unstintedly.

In welcoming to the celebration the 2500 people who assembled at Owensmouth, George Hanna, in the name of the board of control of the Suburban Homes Company, spoke as follows:

PURCHASE OF THE TRACT.

"Nearly five years ago the board of control, composed of five men of affairs, known far beyond the confines of Los Angeles—Gen. H. G. Otis, O. F. Grant, Gen. M. H. Sherman, Harry Chandler and H. J. Whitley—purchased what was then known as the Van Nuys and Lankershim Rancho, comprising 47,500 acres, a portion of which you have traversed today. Mr. Whitley was unanimously selected by his asociates on the board for the all-important position of executive in the field, and after a long hard campaign, he has made good in a striking and effective manner. At that time the tract was for the most part one vast wheat and barley field, about $1,000 acres in one field being planted to these crops.

"This great tract was purchased with the idea of cutting it up into small holdings in order to provide homes for the thousands who are always looking for just such opportunities.

"Promptly succeeding the original purchase by these nervy business men, many others were admitted to par-

POLICE IN VERA CRUZ FIND MEXICAN CONSPIRACY

BY GEORGE ADDISON HUGHES.

[BY MEXICAN CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

VERA CRUZ, June 6.—Rumors of impending trouble are rife as a result of reports circulated today that an uprising of natives was scheduled for the city simultaneously with an attack by Federals. Secret service men are tonight searching for a Mexican who is declared to have offered $5000 in gold for 100 American army rifles and 50,000 rounds of ammunition. Forty-seven former Mexican customhouse officers have left port, after having refused to accept employment under the Americans. Customhouse offices will be established by Huerta at Tierra Blanca, San Francisco, Depena and Soledad and the new issue of double duty for imports meant for the interior must be met. Details of Huerta's resignation are beginning to filter through here and the Spanish papers today print the preliminaries to the actual announcement.

ADMITS REDDING MURDER.

Kermeen in Jail at Tombstone, Ariz., Confesses to Crime Committed in California.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

REDDING, June 6.—Walter W. Kermeen, in jail at Tombstone, Ariz., charged with the murder of J. F. Harrell, a Los Angeles bank clerk, has confessed to the murder of Frances White, a woman of the tenderloin, at Kennet, April 15, last, according to a telegram received by Dist.-Atty. Chenoweth today from Sheriff Harry C. Wheeler of Tombstone. The woman's body was found in a house with the door padlocked, her head crushed by a hammer.

Kermeen was reported to have confessed to the murder of Harrell, but he pleaded not guilty in the Arizona Supreme Court. The Shasta county authorities will take no steps toward his extradition, however, until the outcome to the Arizona trial is known.

PREHISTORIC SKELETONS.

Bones of Four Indians Who Roamed in California Ages Ago Are Unearthed at Berkeley.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

BERKELEY, June 6.—Mute evidence of a race that lived and died before the white man came to California was found beside Strawberry Creek on the University of California campus yesterday afternoon, and this morning in the skeletons of four Indians, one of them a woman, buried there perhaps centuries ago. The discovery of the first body was made by workmen who are excavating for an addition to the Faculty Club.

The excavation continued with redoubled caution until all four bodies and a number of articles that had been buried with them had been brought to light.

The bodies were discovered in a turn of Strawberry Creek, which anthropologists of the university have in the past found to have been a favorite burial place for the prehistoric western races.

Rose Queen and Maids of Honor Well Sprinkled by Drizzle at San Francisco Fair Grounds.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—Portland's rose queen, Miss Thelma Hollingsworth, and her court of sprightly maids of honor, took possession of San Francisco today. Two unfortunate events failed to take any of the enthusiasm out of the day's events.

First, it drizzled all day, but the girls rode through the city as the guests of the Women's Board of the Panama-Pacific Exposition and paid a visit to the fair grounds in defiance of the weather.

Second, Queen Thelma was to have raised the first flag to the peak of the exposition's 222-foot flag pole, the gift of the city of Astoria, Oregon, but mechanical difficulties which delayed the raising of the pole made this impossible.

GOV. HODGES VINDICATED.

Wichita Woman Decided not to Be Entitled to Damages She Sought Against Executive.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) June 6.—Mrs. Luella West of Wichita, Kan., is not entitled to damages from Gov. George H. Hodges of Kansas for an alleged assault and battery, a jury decided today after deliberating two minutes.

Mrs. West alleged while on a visit to the Governor's office on April 8, last, the Governor struck her during a shuffle for possession of papers in the case of Frank Sullivan, a convict, to secure whose release, Mrs. West had called at the executive offices.

Gov. Hodges denied the charges. In his instructions to the jury Judge Dana contended Mrs. West had no right to the papers.

CLOVER SWELLS BEGGAR'S PURSE.

USES LUCKY FOURTH LEAF IN CLEVER SWINDLE.

Builds Up Large Trade in Seed Guaranteed by Him to Produce Much-Desired Plant, Then Leaves Suddenly When Patrons Begin to Harvest Ordinary Variety.

The Four-Leaf Clover syndicate has collapsed and a beggar, becoming a capitalist, has moved out of the city. The four-leaf clovers had brought good money to him, estimated to be more than $2000.

By the records that a private detective agency has of the man, he came to Los Angeles a beggar, a "panhandler" who "rustled the pave," or went up and down the street soliciting alms. With a meager capital that he acquired, he purchased a new suit, a cheap Panama hat done in the moment's most dashing style, and retired to the countryside.

There he secured a great quantity of clovers. Then he organized the syndicate. He told a great many people of the great profit to be realized in raising four-leaf clovers. There was a great demand for them, he said, for everyone wanted the lucky foliage, and it was simplicity itself to sell the clovers for $1 to $5 each.

His argument was plausible. With proof, he showed the prosperity of a New York syndicate similarly at work. It was an untouched commerce, a virgin field of trade.

He had, he said, a great quantity of seed guaranteed to produce clover with four leaves. This was very expensive seed and he must sell it at a high figure, but he would sign a contract to buy all the mature clover plants at 75 cents each.

He found a prosperous trade. The seed sold well. To the skeptical about his seed, he would show a great box of growing clover, and each leaf had four petals. It was convincing, and most profitable.

So the seed was sold in quantity. Hundreds bought it and established incipient gardens in their yards. And now that it is about time for the leaves to show their real shape, they all develop into the customary and luckless three leaves. So the syndicate disbanded. In the rooms the man occupies on Crocker street was found the sample box of plants. Close scrutiny was given the leaves, and each developed a fourth leaf, cunningly attached with skilful fingers, dexterously bound with a dainty strip of green court plaster to make the squad of four.

The man had fled four days before his rent expired. He left only three papers. One was a bill from a drug store, asking for payment for some green court plaster. Another was a letter from a Santa Ana rancher, offering to provide more clover plants at the rate of 10 cents a hundred. And the third was from a seed store, announcing that Frederick Wilson was indebted to the company for twelve bags of clover seed.

It is known that Wilson is an alias.

chance; they are the results of days and nights of unremitting toil.

"The master minds who compose this Board of Control possessed the ability to plan and the skill and determination to bring the great project to its splendid consummation. They have from the first had the benefit of the tireless efforts and long and successful experience in similar great undertakings of one of their number—H. J. Whitley. As executive leader in the field in this vast enterprise, he has given his time and talents in unstinted measure, always backed up and reinforced by the ready official sanction and the powerful support of the board as a whole.

"Men in a position to know have pronounced this among the most gigantic enterprises and one of the most stupendous undertakings of its kind ever inaugurated and brought to a successful consummation in the United States; and as it is a Los Angeles project, we all may well be proud of it.

IN FUTURE YEARS.

"Last of all comes another subject—never a dry one—which deserves mention. When this tract was offered to the public, no promises of a water supply were made by the Board of Control save the single one that water might be obtained from wells to be dug by the purchasers themselves. There was no hot air and no hot water in the promises; but all the same, the water is coming. It is here now at our very gates, and it is Owens River water in mighty abundance, and the cultivators can secure it in the same manner as water can be secured on adjacent lands covered by the famous conduit.

"Conditions will be the same and prices the same here as upon adjacent lands—not a whit better, not a whit worse. The prices to be paid for water upon all these lands will be the prices fixed by the public through the city government. There is nothing to explain away, nothing to conceal, nothing to apologize for, nothing to excuse in this regard.

"And when an abundant supply of Owens River water shall have been distributed over these fertile lands, what a mighty future will be created in the great domain of production through the intelligent efforts of those whose fortunate lot is cast in this superb vale of the San Fernando."

The celebration began at Van Nuys at 3 o'clock with a concert by the Van Nuys band from the balcony of the Johnston piano and organ factory. A pleasing feature of this part of the programme was singing by the school children of Van Nuys.

Visitors were then given an opportunity to inspect the factory with all the departments at work. This is the only organ factory west of Chicago. It employs 100 hands now and at full capacity requires 250 men.

The public buildings and beautifully developed homes near by were viewed, then by automobile and electric trains more than 2000 people proceeded to Owensmouth. More music was furnished there and at 5:30 o'clock a barbecue was served on great tables out of doors, near the office of the Suburban Homes Company.

The culmination of the programme was the turning on of the lights on the entire thirty-one mile circuit, the glowing parade back to Van Nuys and an hour of carnival merrymaking at that town.

The spectacle created by the turning on of the lights and the glowing parade from Owensmouth to Van Nuys elicited unqualified admiration. The people could not restrain their enthusiasm and exclaimed again and again as new turns in the road revealed attractions hitherto unrevealed.

Many compliments were heard for the skill (born of long and varied experience in farm subdivision and town building) with which the splendid project seen in this development has been managed by the able field executive of the board of control, Mr. H. J. Whitley, who regards this as the crowning achievement of his life.

Prominent men from many California cities were present, advocates of good roads being there in force. Nearly all the members of the board of control and others interested in the company were included in the gathering. Los Angeles was represented by members of the City Council, officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California, and many hundreds of automobilists. Others from away were: N. D. Darlington, State Highway Commissioner; Supervisors Pridham and Woodley of Los Angeles county; Mayor Oscar Ford; Highway Commissioners Samuel Evans and H. P. Campbell; W. V. Darling, A. J. Stalder, H. P. Zimmerman, J. W. Brown, K. S. Carlton, Riverside city and county officials; Thomas Burke, secretary of the Bakersfield Board of Trade; Harry McCray and a delegation of about twenty others from Bakersfield.

SAD HOME-COMING.

Body of Successful and Honorable Mining Man Taken Back to Pennsylvania for Burial.

The widow, son and daughter of the late Robert D. Grant, who died here on Thursday evening, left at noon yesterday to take the remains to their old home in Sunbury, Pa., where the funeral will be held. He was but 49 years of age and died as the result of a stroke of paralysis.

The deceased began as a telegraph operator on the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1880; came west in 1881 and followed his calling as a railroad telegrapher in New Mexico, Wyoming and Montana until 1889, when he entered the offices of the Parrot Silver and Copper Company at Butte. Eight years later he was elected general manager of the company and in 1899 conducted the negotiations which resulted in the sale of the Parrot Company to the interests which formed the Consolidated Copper Company. He went to Salt Lake and bought an interest in the Sioux Consolidated Mines, and after seventeen years of successful development there sold to the Reed Smoot interests and removed to Los Angeles. Here he organized the American Mines and Exploration Company, and with Phillip Wiseman developed the Shannon Mines at Clifton, Ariz., and built their smelting works. With Seeley Mudd, he negotiated the sale of the Ray Consolidated Mines at Kelvin, Ariz., and became a stockholder, selling his holdings for a large sum several years ago.

He was known as a man of absolute integrity and of good companionship, and was modest and unassuming. He was a member of the Episcopal church.

SCORE MISRULE OF DEMOCRATS.

Representatives Tear Mask from Pretensions.

Ex-Gov. Folk's Appointment Called Political.

Extravagance and Hypocrisy Are Excoriated.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The House ran the gamut of political and governmental controversy today in the general debate on the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill.

Representative Mondell, Republican, of Wyoming, charged the Democrats with extravagance, asserting an apparent reduction of some $30,000,000 in the bill was due to arbitrary cutting off of appropriations needed in the latter half of the next fiscal year.

Representative Gillette of Massachusetts attacked "political appointments" of the administration, directing his criticisms principally at the appointment of former Gov. Joseph W. Folk of Missouri as counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission and Robert L. Metcalfe of Nebraska as a member of the Panama Canal [illegible] Committee.

Republican Leader Mann said Folk was appointed "chiefly because he was a Democratic candidate for the Presidency who failed to be selected."

In the course of the discussion Chairman Fitzgerald of the Appropriations Committee, read a letter from President Wilson, relating to the Panama commission. Republican Leader Mann immediately called attention to the House rule requesting the President and department heads to address all official communications to the Speaker.

"These secret and personal communications from the President and members of the Cabinet to chairmen of committees of this house are one of the grossest abuses of the present conduct of the government," said Mann.

Representative Rainey of Illinois spent more than an hour in an effort to show the House that importations of Argentina corn, on the free list in the Underwood tariff law, are not a menace to American corn producers.

GREEKS RESENT CARNEGIE REPORT.

ATTACK ON THE STATEMENTS GIVEN OUT BY PEACE COMMISSION ON THE WAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 4.—An attack on the report of the Carnegie Peace Foundation Commission, which investigated alleged atrocities in the Balkans was issued at the Greek Legation here today by Charge Vouros, as preface to a report soon to be printed by the Greek government in this country to refute the charges of atrocities made against the Greek army by the commission.

The statement issued today devotes much space to recounting atrocities alleged to have been committed by Bulgars.

"The detailed statement of the Greek government in reply to the various charges and insinuations in the Carnegie Commission's report will be widely disseminated within the next few weeks and will be put into the hands of the public men and the newspaper and magazine editors of the United States," the statement says. "It will be illustrated with photographs and made convincing by its fidelity to every detail. The report gives extended and detailed proof of Bulgarian atrocities committed against the Greeks at the time when Greece and Bulgaria were allies. It will represent the Greek government's earnest effort to correct the injustice done to the Greek nation by the Carnegie Commission's work."

HARTFORD (Ct.) June 6.—After sharp competition with German firms the Pratt and Whitney Company of this city, one of the oldest tool and machine factories in the country, according to an announcement made tonight, has secured a million-dollar contract from the Chinese government to make and equip a Chinese arsenal of up-to-date type. Expert Chinese machinists are coming to the local plant to supervise the contract and to learn the proper manipulation of the machinery. Later, it is understood, China will establish a chain of arsenals throughout the pher Cradock, commanding the British warships at Vera Cruz. The first paragraph about Admiral Cradock, which the department suppresses, is that he complained, when informed that the Americans were about to land, that Admiral Fletcher had promised to give him ample notice, of any movement, and that this had not been done. Consequently, he said, he would stay inside the harbor, keeping the cruiser Essex where she was and taking his chance of getting hit by stray bullets.

The second reference to Admiral Cradock was merely that he came aboard Admiral Fletcher's flagship and asked for permission to send the cruiser Berwick to Puerto Mexico. This was readily granted.

Admiral Fletcher's report shows that he made every effort to do as little fighting and damage as possible and that he used force only where necessary. He repeatedly tried, through messengers, to reach the local authorities and to ask them not to fire on the American forces in order to avoid useless bloodshed.

Another suppressed portion of the report reveals that Admiral Fletcher was prepared to make the attack on Mexico more general than merely the occupation of Vera Cruz. At 9:40 on the morning of the first day of fighting he instructed Commander Cone to make the battleship Utah ready to proceed on signal at full speed to Puerto Mexico. The purpose of this precaution is not revealed.

FLETCHER'S STORY OF VERA CRUZ.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Rear-Admiral Fletcher's own story of the occupation of Vera Cruz is told in tthe first detailed report of the navy's operations on the east coast of Mexico made public today by the Navy Department. The report tells of Admiral Fletcher's receipt of the historic cablegram early on the morning of April 21, ordering him to seize the Vera Cruz customs-house; of the swift descent of marines and bluejackets from the American warships upon the port and the bloody fighting that occurred when they met with resistance from the Mexican Federal soldiers and irregulars.

The admiral refers particularly to the work of the cruisers Prairie, Chester and San Francisco, which, moored inside the breakwater, covered successive landings of marines and bluejackets.

FROM THE REPORT.

"Initiative and clear judgment was required on the part of the commanding officers," says the report, "and the results showed in a striking manner the efficiency of the ships under their commands." The three vessels were under charge of Commanders Moffett, Stickney and Harrison.

The report says:

"When the cablegram of 8 a.m. of April 21 to seize the customhouse was received, Commander Stickney went ashore and personally notified the American Consul we would land to take charge of the customhouse. Gen. Maas, the Mexican military commandant, was notified by telephone from the consulate.

"At 10:30 a.m. the Prairie reported 'Am ready,' and I directed Capt. Rush to land his brigade and carry out orders. At 10:45 a.m. the Prairie signaled 'Battalion has shoved off.' The landing force of the Florida shoved off at the same time and were joined by the Panama contingent of marines from the Utah. At 11:45 a.m. signal was received from the consulate, 'cable station O.K.' and this meant that the cable station was in possession of our forces on shore and that communication with Washington was assured. At 11:50 a.m. a signal was received from Capt. Rush on shore that headquarters had been established at the Hotel Terminal and signal station set up there. At 11:55 a.m. Capt. Rush signalled 'telegraph and postoffice occupied and doing business as ever.'

"This was followed by 'Firing in town; no casualties as yet,' and at 12:21 p.m., 'Commence firing on shore; Federals have commenced firing on United States troops.' I signalled Utah, 'Send your battalion ashore; urgent; you may steam in closer.' At 12:41 p.m. Rush reported his first casualties.

"Immediately on landing the marine regiment under Lieut.-Col. Neville advanced up Calle de Montesinos, seizing cable office and detaching one company to seize the power plant north of the Terminal station. The head of the marine column had advanced to Avenida Bravo when at 11:57 a.m. they were fired into from all directions.

"In the meantime the Florida seamen battalion under Lieut. Wainwright had advanced and seized the customhouse and custom-warehouse, postoffice and railroad terminal. They were under steady fire from the enemy in houses.

"The Prairie opened fire at 1:10 p.m., with three-inch guns on the enemy's mounted troops in the sandhills beyond the city, range 2500 to 3000 yards. The second shot fell among their troops and drove them beyond the sandhills.

"Sharpshooters in the naval school building and the new market had been firing steadily on Pier No. 4, where all of our boats were landing. Chief Boatswain McCley, in charge of three picket launches, armed with one-pounder guns, put out toward the naval school building. When within a few hundred yards the launches opened fire simultaneously with one-pounders at the windows of the naval academy. They thus drew the fire of the Mexican forces and the Prairie opened fire with three-inch battery over the heads of the launches, silencing the fire of the Mexicans. The picket launches in their gallant dash were hit many times with rifle bullets and three times with one-pounder shells from the naval academy. Chief Boatswain McCley was wounded in the leg and one was fatally wounded.

"The brigade signal station on top of the Terminal Hotel was exposed to fire from Mexicans in all directions. The signal quad under Ensign McDonnel, remained at its post during the twenty-four hours fighting and though three of their men were shot while signalling, communication between brigade headquarters and the Prairie was never interrupted.

"Desultory firing continued until midnight with occasional shots throughout the night. The dead and wounded were sent aboard the Prairie.

"At 9 p.m., the San Francisco entered the harbor and anchored 300 yards north of the Prairie. She immediately landed her battalion of two seamen companies, which reported to brigade commander on shore. The Chester entered the harbor at 12:05 a.m., April 22, and anchored off Sanidad pier.

"Rear-Admiral Badger with five battleships of his fleet came to anchor in the outer harbor at 2:45 a.m. After explaining the situation to the admiral, he decided to land his forces and the steamer and marine battalions of the Arkansas, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Michigan and New Jersey landed at 4 a.m.

"Early in the morning of the 22nd efforts to get in communication with the authorities were renewed.

"Our forces advanced steadily through the city, entering houses from which they were being fired upon, and disarming the occupants. The Chester, from a favorable position commanding the southern part of the city, shelled the enemy out of houses along the water front, Old Ft. Santiago and from the vicinity of the military barracks. By 11 a.m. our forces were in complete possession of all parts of the city and fighting had practically ceased.

"The following signal was sent to the cruisers Chester, Prairie, San Francisco and to brigade headquarters on shore:

"'The division commander desires to express his appreciation and admiration for the splendid and efficient work of the naval brigade in their capture of the city of Vera Cruz and the efficient support given them by the cruisers in the harbor reflects a great credit on the accuracy of fire of their gunners.'

HANGS HERSELF WITH AUTO VEIL.

HUSBAND RUNS AGAINST BODY OF WIFE SWINGING IN BOUDOIR DOORWAY.

Despondent as the result of a mental breakdown, Mrs. Minnie L. Garber, wife of C. A. Garber, assistant sales manager of the Union Hardware and Metal Company, committed suicide at her home, No. 3604 South Main street, last night, by strangling herself with an automobile veil swung over a door.

Several months ago Mrs. Garber displayed symptoms of mental derangement and was taken to the Talbot Sanatorium, No. 431 North Normandy avenue, where she remained until a few weeks ago, when she was discharged.

When Garber returned home last night, Mrs. Garber failed to respond to his greeting, and the husband thought that she was visiting neighbors, until later in the night he ran against the suspended body upon opening the door of her room.

Patrolman Jackson of the University Station was summoned and cut down the body.

Before taking her life, Mrs. Garber prepared her husband's supper and laid the table in the dining-room.

The dead woman was about 43 years old and came here with her husband from Pittsburgh, Pa. She had no children, but had three brothers, one of whom lives in Pittsburgh.

The body was taken to the Bresee Brothers undertaking rooms.

FORSAKES GAIETY FOR SIMPLE LIFE.

GIRD WHO MARRIED BIGAMIST DONS GINGHAM APRON AT LITTLE HOME.

Reatha Watson, the attractive young Burbank girl who became the second wife of Lawrence Converse, bigamist, spent yesterday in making gingham aprons, some blue-checked and some pink-striped. They are to be her uniform in the future.

Her mother says she is going to keep her at home from now on. Perhaps a picture show now and then, and once in a long time a run into the city for shopping and possibly a matinee, but that is all the gay city life that Reatha Watson is to taste.

She made a pact with her mother, Mrs. W. W. Watson, yesterday that she will do most of the housework and much embroidery during the months to come. She resurrected three large centerpieces that she will embroider. They had been stowed away in a cedar chest for two years.

Indefinitely, the young girl who occupied an expensive suite of rooms at the Alexandria Hotel is to confine herself to domestic work in the little Burbank household. Mother and daughter were very happy together last night.

No activity has yet occurred towards the prosecution of the girl for her escapade with Converse, the confessed bigamist. Mrs. Watson does not believe that any prosecution will follow, and says that her daughter has left the gay circle of which she has been a spectacular member.

Affairs in the Converse household remained stationary yesterday. Not yet has Mrs. Converse agred to a reconciliation with her husband. For the sake of the children, and to avoid greater inconvenience to him, she permits him to stay at the home.

PROMISES SENSATION.

Man Accused in Insurance Suit Says He Will Bring Criminal Action.

J. K. Tennant, who is accused of stock-juggling in a suit brought Friday in the Federal Court involving the affairs of the Western Underwriting and Mortgage Company of San Diego, yesterday declared that in a few days he will furnish a sensation that will be a boomerang to some of the complainants and attorneys. He asserts that he has evidence of criminality which he will turn over to the Federal Court and to the Appellate Court.

Tennant says the suit was filed by San Diego attorneys as an eleventh-hour move on the stockholders, where annual meeting is to be held next Tuesday in San Diego. He asserts that the same case has been adjudicated by Judge Sloan at San Diego and he held, according to Tennant, that there was no fraud.

Tennant denies that he is guilty of any fraudulent practice. He explains the charge that he sold the company stock and appropriated the money to his own use by saying that he traded a contract and business of the California National Life Insurance Company for 200,000 shares of Western Underwriting stock. This stock then became his own property, he said, and if he made any money by disposing of it that was his own business.

MOTOR HITS TRUCK.

Driver Fatally Injured as His Car Is Caught on P. E. Track After Missing Train.

In a collision between a motor truck and a Pacific Electric freight motor yesterday, Ralph Quincey, of Los Angeles, driver of the truck, was probably fatally injured and the big Moreland grain truck demolished.

The accident occurred at La Rica crossing, near Baldwin Park, on the Covina line. There is a deep cut in the roadway at this point, caused by the floods. The truck driver waited for the passing of a passenger car and started to cross as soon as the train had cleared the crossing. The freight motor, which was following immediately behind the passenger train, struck the truck amidships. The electric motor left the track, cut a trolley-wire pole in two pieces, and ran its nose into the sand.

Quincey was placed on board a passenger car and rushed to the Pacific Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. He has a wife and child living on Hobart boulevard.

BARKIS ROLE OF CARRANZA.

He Is Willing to Join the Mediators If, If, If.

Wants to Solve the Internal Problem by Himself.

Will Discuss Wilson Occupation of Vera Cruz Only.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Unofficial reports were current in Washington today that Gen. Carranza, chief of the revolutionary forces in Mexico, was willing to participate in the mediation conference at Niagara Falls on condition that there should be no armistice between his forces and the Huerta government, and that Mexican internal questions to be considered should concern only such affairs as had been developed by the American occupation of Vera Cruz.

Department heads seemed to be confident that Gen. Huerta would not attempt to blockade the port of Tampico against the delivery by the Cuban steamer Antilia of arms for the Constitutionalists. The American State Department, it was pointed out, was fully satisfied of its right to prevent such a blockade of the port by Huerta's ships.

It also was made known that a conclusion had been reached that this government had no authority to intervene in the delivery of ammunition at Tampico, in view of the circumstances which have arisen since the United States accepted the good offices of the South American mediators for the composition of Mexican difficulties.

President Wilson was in communication with American representatives at the Niagara Fall conference during the day, but nothing was made public concerning the interchanges of views. Secretary Bryan conferred with the President and was accompanied by John R. Silliman, the American Consul General, who so narrowly escaped death at the hands of Mexican Federals at Saltillo. The President directed Mr. Silliman to make a written report of his experiences and enjoined him to keep silence in the meantime as to his treatment at the hands of the Mexicans.

Both Culkins and Mrs. Klein pleaded guilty to a statutory offense. Klein told the court this morning that he was ready to forgive his wife and take her to the home he had built for her in Sacramento. Judge Plummer intimated that he would probably send the woman to a reform school.

Good News for Sufferers From Kidney Diseases

The kidneys, from their delicate construction and the filtering work required of them, are more susceptible to disease than any other organ in the wonderful machinery of the human body. The most deplorable feature of kidney disease consists in its subtle and delusive character, and so insidious are its ravages that many victims do not even suspect its existence until the advanced stages have been reached. Few people, after reaching the period of maturity, are in possession of absolutely healthy kidneys; it follows that the greatest care and vigilance must be exercised to keep these organs free from the dangers that constantly beset them.

Since the discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy about thirty-seven years ago, many sufferers from kidney diseases have been benefited by its healing properties. Many physicians consider it an excellent remedy in the treatment of diseases of the kidneys, liver and blood. Get it today. It is sold by all druggists in 50-cent and $1.00 sizes.

Other Warner's Safe Remedies are: Safe Rheumatic Remedy; Safe Diabetes Remedy; Safe Nervine; Safe Asthma Remedy; Safe Pills. REBELS PLAN NAVY.

Gen. Obregon Would Purchase the Battleships Idaho and Mississippi From United States as a Nucleus.

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) June 6.—The Constitutionalists may attempt to purchase the American battleships Idaho and Mississippi if a proposal telegraphed to Gen. Obregon by Constitutionalist Agent Lelevier is favorably received. Lelevier stated that he feels sure he could raise sufficient money for the purchase of one of the ships in Sonora and Sinaloa.

Once purchased, he claims the problem of effectually policing the West Coast would be solved, and all actions of the Federals be made negligible. The latter forces still have one armed gunboat, the Guerrero, and several smaller vessels.

American Schooner Sunshine Lands Three Million Rounds of Cartridges for Villa's Army.

Cook to learn the character of the charge.

Capt. Brown of the Sunshine had made his vessel fast to the customhouse wharf and she had begun to discharge her cargo. After the flag lieutenant made his report to the admiral the latter decided he had no authority to interfere and the unloading of the ammunition continued until the entire consignment was deposited in the customhouse.

FASTER TRAINS THORNTON'S AIM.

AMERICAN MANAGER OF ENGLISH RAILROAD WILL TRY FOR EXPRESS RECORDS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 23.—The railroad world here is watching with much interest the efforts of H. W. Thornton, the American general manager of the Great Eastern railroad, to speed up the services of that line. That much of the ill-feeling, which greeted his appointment has worn away is indicated by the fact that he has been appointed a member of the general managers' conference, the first time that anyone not a British subject has been elected to that organization. Thanks to the efforts of the new general manager the towns served by the Great Eastern are now getting their Sunday papers many hours sooner than in the past.

Railway experts predict that Thornton will have no difficulty in bettering the times of the express trains of rival lines as the Great Eastern does not have to surmount the same gradients as its competitors. One of the curious anomalies of British railways is the great difference in average train speeds on the various lines. Physical limitations account for much of the low speed on the southern lines, but the gradients and length of non-stop runs on the Great Eastern will give the American expert an excellent chance to make some express train records.

RECONSTRUCTION NOW IN PROGRESS.

CONFIDENCE BEING RESTORED IN "HOME BUILDERS."

Local Corporation May SCoon Undertake Construction of Building at Spring and Eighth Streets. Management Is in Hands of Capable Expert.

With an able and experienced expert in business affairs in charge, work of reconstruction and restoration of confidence in the "Home Builders," the local building corporation of this city is now in progress, and proceeding in a very favorable manner.

A short time ago it was decided by the directors to place the management of the corporation in charge of one man, to avoid friction, which existed because of the fact that with the exception of the fifteenth member, the board of the company was equally divided into two factions. It was difficult to proceed in the business affairs of the company without a deadlock resulting.

Frederick H. Oliphant, an expert auditor and accountant, was chosen for the position of manager. Having occupied a number of responsible positions in his line, he is regarded as an exceedingly well fitted man for the position.

Having gained his first experience as secretary of Isaias W. Hellman, the well-known Pacific Coast banker, who is president of the Farmers' and Merchants' National, he afterward was employed in expert work in the Philippine Islands under President Taft. Subsequently, he was engaged in similar work at New York City. He has been in Los Angeles for about a year and a half.

That indications are that arrangements will be made soon to start work on the office building of the "Home Builders," which for some time they have been planning to build on the corner of Spring and Eighth streets, was the assertion of Oliphant yesterday.

"The company is showing a profit, although not always in cash, it being necessary to pay off obligations," he said. "Prosperity week has brought increased returns to the "Home Builders."

"A survey of the company's finances shows it to be in good condition, with gross assets of over $2,000,000, and a net worth of over $1,500,000. This would indicate a book value of over $1.50 a share, although before concluding this absolutely, it would be well to wait for the detailed report of the company's finances, which is now being prepared for submission to the directors and then to the stockholders."

The report which is being prepared by Oliphant and his staff, will thoroughly consider all the assets and liabilities of the company and their value, he stated.

The completion of the proposed building would mean that the company could increase its revenue greatly through receipts from office rent, etc., and the move is one which all concerned in its affairs have been anxious to see undertaken as soon as possible.

Trouble in the ranks of the "Home Builders" broke out a few months ago at the time of the annual meeting of the stockholders. The holders were divided into two factions, and each elected seven representatives on the board, while the fifteenth member was selected by the two factions conjointly.

The insurgent contingent was led principally by a one-time Congressman, known as McLachlan, while the other faction was composed of the former management, headed by Guy A. Wymans, who was formerly president of the company.

It was pretty generally conceded at the time of the annual meeting that the company's affairs were in comparatively very good shape, and the dissatisfaction appeared largely due to other causes.

"Home Builders" formerly was located in the Mason Operahouse building, but its offices are now in the Washington building.

SOME SPEED, THIS, FOR ENGLISHMAN.

BIRMINGHAM INVENTOR STATES HIS TRAIN CAN GO 500 MILES AN HOUR.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 23.—While experts continue to discuss the practicability of M. Bachelet's aerially-suspended railway, J. Esson, a Birmingham manufacturer, announces that he has invented a train which will travel 500 miles an hour, 200 miles an hour faster than the Bachelet train.

This latest invention is of the monorail type, but has one of the Bachelet features, inasmuch as it will fly after attaining a certain speed. It does not rely for levitation on magnetic repulsion, but on the principles of aviation. It will be a hybrid of a street car and an aeroplane with an overhead trolley and propellers. The model is driven by electricity. The inventor claims that it can attain a speed of 500 miles an hour with ease and safety, and he expects to give a demonstration soon with a working model.

The train is connected with the cable at either extremity by rods terminating in flanged wheels, these rods serving to convey current to motors fore and aft. The inventor declares that the train is so designed that when it has attained a sufficient velocity it will lift itself from the velocity buffer springs and fly. This he claims will mean a huge saving in maintenance charges.

PEACE CENTENARY BALL.

Plan for Gorgeous Spectacle Under Way in London as Preliminary to Big Celebration.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 25.—An Anglo-American peace centenary ball as a preliminary to the celebration of the 100th anniversary of peace between English-speaking peoples, is proposed by the British committee for June 10, next. It will be held in Royal Albert Hall, where, it is expected, several thousand British and American guests will present a gorgeous spectacle.

The arrangements are in the hands of a committee headed by the Duchess of Teck, Mrs. Walter Page, wife of the American Ambassador, and Princess Arthur of Connaught. There are half a dozen Duchesses, a long list of other titled ladies, and many prominent Americans on the committee. Among the Anglo-American women participating will be the Duchess of Marlborough, Countess Granard, Cora, Countess of Strafford, Lady Randolph Churchill, Viscountess Acheson, Lady Bateman, Lady Speyer, Mrs. Ridgeley Carter and Mrs. Victoria Woodhull Martin.

Some of the striking features of the ball are suggested in the following programme:

Part I—Processions illustrating the making of America.

At 12 o'clock the lights will be lowered and Columbus with his two captains will be seen standing on the poop of the Santa Maria, the ship from which he first saw America. Below him on the floor will be seen a procession of the aboriginal inhabitants of America; then the Elizabethan settlers with Sir Walter Raleigh, followed by the Pilgrim Fathers, the Dutch, the French, William Penn and the Quakers, and finally the signatories to the treaty of 1814.

Part II—Britannia, followed by representatives of all British countries, colonies and states. Britannia will stand on a raised platform, and the British states will be immediately followed by Columbia and the representatives of the forty-eight United States of America. Columbia will take her place on the platform by the side of Britannia, and will receive congratulations from representatives of foreign countries on the attainment of 100 years of peace.

WOMAN AS RACING PILOT.

English Woman Can Now Literally Drop in on Her Friends from Aeroplane.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 25.—Mrs. Mary Buller, who has taken up flying as a profession, is planning to drop in literally on her friends for afternoon teas from the flying ground, where she is stationed as a racing pilot.

Mrs. Buller has just returned from France, where she underwent a long course of training in preparation for her present post as flying representative of an aeroplane manufacturing concern. She has entered for the aerial Derby around London and will be the first woman who has ever competed in this race. Mrs. Buller says she never loses her head, but frequently loses her temper when she gets into a tight place. She has been flying for three years and has never had a serious accident.

She explains that she was forced into the flying game, but by circumstances she could not resist. She was living quietly in the country near Shoreham on a farm, part of which was acquired for an aerodrome, and later a waterplane station was erected near her home. This proximity proved too much and Mrs. Buller soon took up flying, first as a fad, but as she increased in proficiency she adopted it as a profession.

SIXTH OF STATE'S WEALTH FROM ORCHARD PRODUCTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 6.—R. J. Bentley, president of the California Fruit Canners' Association, gave the following resume of California's splendid fruit prospects:

One-sixth of all the wealth that will come to California in 1914 from its crops and from the mines will be from orchard products. Accepting as true the value of all products at $476,000,000, there will come from the orchards about $82,000,000.

As a whole the orchardists will have a prosperous year. The reflex of their prosperity will be developed in every line.

There will be a shortage in the quantity of prunes, but on the whole the prune raisers will receive about as much money for their crop as usual, prices being unusually high. There is a big crop of peaches, with rather low prices, but the quantity of the crop will even things up for the producers.

The orchardists will contribute their full share to the general prosperity of California in 1914.

The magnitude of the financial return from fruit is astounding to those not in one of the many branches of the fruit trade. Here is what the orchards of the State should produce this season: Canned, $12,500,000; dried, $15,000,000; green, $18,000,000; citrus, $35,000,000; olives and oil, $2,000,000. Total, $82,500,000.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, June 6.—A com promise amendment to the tolls re peal bill, drawn by Senator Simm for the administration forces Senator Norris for Republican tors, will be offered when the comes to a vote in the Senate.

The new amendment embodie of the original Simmons ame ment, recommended by the Interoceanic Canal Commiss well as the more emphatic tion in the amendment propos Senator Norris several days a substitute for the com amendment. The strength develo for the Norris amendment, larly on the Democratic side, fluenced the administration to modify their amendment.

The compromise reads:

THE COMPROMISE.

"That the passage of this act not be construed or held as a or relinquishment of any right United States may have under treaty with Great Britain, ratified 18th of November, 1901, or wise, to exempt the vessels the United States or its citizens the payment of tolls for through said canal, or as in any waiving, impairing or affecting right of the United States under treaty, or otherwise, with respe the sovereignty over the own control and management canal and the regulation of the tions or charges of traffic throug same."

A vote on the amendment bill may be reached late on day. So far as leaders know, few Senators expect to speak subject. An effort may be made the bill is disposed of to resolution to arbitrate the tolls exemption question with Britain.

Senator Norris, Republican parliamentary maneuvering, aided by a ruling of Vice-Pre Marshall, which some Senators was a tactical error, had forced point of vantage his resolution viding that nothing in the shall be construed as a surrend the United States of its right exempt coastwise vessels from Democratic leaders, after canv ing the situation, are said to found that the Norris resolution enough votes in its support to it a dangerous quantity to their gramme.

Senator Works of California against repeal and with Hitchcock and Thompson, the repeal bill should be amende providing that neither the of the act nor the collection from American ships should the United States of the right empt American vessels from any future time.

Upton Sinclair and His Fellow-Anarchist so Mild in Tarrytown We Regret Mentioning Them Yesterday.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TARRYTOWN (N. Y.) June 6.—Twelve members of the Industrial Workers of the World, arrested here a week ago, while proclaiming their rights of free speech, were brought here today from White Plains jail and their cases temporarily disposed of without a sign of the disturbance for which the anxious village fathers had carefully prepared.

The local police magistrate denied the motion of their counsel that they be allowed to appear before a grand jury, but to give them time for further legal maneuvers he postponed their cases until next week, Friday.

Bail for each of the twelve was set at $200.

Alexander Berkman, who had promised to bring hundreds of sympathizers from New York, Paterson and Passaic, arrived in town with Upton Sinclair and half a dozen others.

Berkman explained the absence of a large band of I.W.W. followers, saying he "expected them later."

CHILDREN GIVE NATURE EXHIBIT.

PRIZES AWARDED EFFORTS OF YOUNG NATURALISTS.

Amateur Zoo, With Youthful Ballyhoos, Adds Zest to Event at Grand-Avenue School — Trained Animals, Collections, Paintings and Mural Decorations Shown.

Excitement was rife in the Grand-avenue school yesterday afternoon, when prizes were awarded for the big nature study exhibit held throughout the day.

Pet foxes, rabbits, dogs, pigeons, birds, snakes and snapping turtles composed the amateur animal exhibit, while "professionals," consisting of monkeys and baby ostriches from the public zoos, and birds from the Audubon Society, completed quite an imposing array in the front yard. Several small youths "ballyhooed" the special features of the exhibit, and seemed to know what they were talking about as they explained to visitors natural history facts such as that "garter snakes have no poison, but kill by constriction," and other technical inside information.

No casualities are reported, but "Kelly," the baby ostrich, tipped over his cage while "rubbering" in fascination at some nearby snakes, and a monkey pulled a bunch of fuzz out of a white rat before the latter could make his escape from the cage into which he had strayed.

Within the building, the walls were covered with artistic posters, nature study drawings and water colors of animals, birds and insects, and there were excellent collections of butterflies, mounted wild-flowers, stuffed birds, animal skins, bird feathers and bees.

Features of special interest were the silkworm exhibit from Gates-street school, showing the development of silk from cocoon to the spool; the collection of mounted birds, butterflies and minerals of Rutherford Moore; the friezes of colored flowers and animals cut and pasted, which decorated all the rooms; the nature map of Guy Wadsworth, accurately platting a section of a suburb with regard to certain trees, plants and birds' nests; a carrier pigeon trained by Carl Skofield; a collection of most artistic animal posters, done by the colored children of Fifty-first-street school; Homer Weber's collection of shells from abroad; Fred Guiol's skeleton of a cat, mounted and articulated by him; an excellent drawing of a group of animals by a little Chinese boy, Haro Chan; and a trained fox, the property of Tessie Mischler.

Prizes (authoritative nature study books) and honorable mention were awarded as follows: Best school museum—Prize, Western avenue; honorable mention, West Vernon avenue. Best individual collection—Prize, Clifford Grant; honorable mention, Rutherford Moore. Animal industries of commercial value—Prize, Gates street; silk worm exhibit; honorable mention, Western avenue, bees. Exhibit of nature drawing and painting—Prize, Selma avenue; individual winner drawing, Haro Chan. Nature photography—Prize, West Vernon-avenue school; individual prize, Fred Guiol, for mural decoration and originality. Live animals—Prize, Logan street; honorable mention, Avenue 62. Individual live anima—Prize, Tessie Mischler, fox; honorable mention, carrier pigeon, Carl Skofield. Shell collection—Prize, Homer Weber. Note book—Prizes, Violet Norris and Ethel Pratt, Parsifal Spencer; honorable mention, general excellence as young naturalist.

The judges were Director F. F. Daggett of the County Museum, Dr. Hector Alliot, Prof. C. F. Holder, and Mrs. W. N. Sarver, curator of the bird section of the Ebell Club.

LOVE LETTERS OF A HUSBAND.

Schumann-Heink Hears them Read in Courtroom.

As They Weren't Sent to Her She's Aggrieved.

Rapp as Don Juan in an Off-Stage Drama.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 6.—A letter purporting to have been written by Mrs. Catherine E. Dean of New York to Madame Schumann-Heink, threatening her with a damage suit if the singer linked Mrs. Dean's name with that of William Rapp, Jr., today was introduced as evidence at the trial of Madame Schumann-Heink's suit for divorce from Rapp. Rapp was said to have inspired the epistle.

Practically the entire session was consumed in reading letters bearing on the case. With the exception of Mrs. Dean's letter all of them were written by Rapp. They were filled with endearing terms and pet phrases, expressive of his affection for Mrs. Dean.

Repeatedly the spectators in the courtroom heard counsel read fond expressions.

"I look up to you and worship you—" read the lawyer. "Please sign yourself Nonnie again, not Katie or any other name. Nonnie is to be sweet and sacred."

"All my thoughts are of you, you are the goal, the sine qua non. Do you believe that, you best little rascal, faithfully your Billy."

The letter reading which formed the principal part of the court proceedings followed the testimony of a nurse, Miss Frances J. Ashton, who lived in Mrs. Dean's apartments for six months, and who testified to frequent marks of affection for each other exhibited by Rapp and Mrs. Dean.

Counsel for the defendant sought in vain to stem the tide of the epistles by declaring that no attempt would be made to combat them and that therefore the letter-reading should be limited. Madame Schumann-Heink's counsel declared that the letters were essential to their case and the court ruled that the taking of evidence should not be limited.

Through the reading of the messages Rapp glared at the placid features of Mme. Schumann-Heink, who seemed absorbed in the recital and listened intently to the reading.

When the letters had been made part of the evidence court was adjourned for the day.

Madame Schumann-Heink has several other witnesses who will be heard when court reconvenes on Monday. The defense has not yet outlined the testimony which it will present, but has indicated that a counter-attack on the complainant will be made.

BAYREUTH TRIP OFF.

The trip to the Beyreuth Wagnerian festival, where she was to sing on June 15, has been abandoned by the diva, it was announced late today.

A letter identified by Miss Ashton as having been sent by Rapp to Mrs. Dean was introduced in evidence. Some of its sentences were:

"Dear Nonnie: This morning brought me a windfall—three letters from you and a postal from my baby."

"You are just simply 'Nonnie.' God watch over you and keep you. I do not pray, but that wish is as near a prayer as I can come."

"I am falling in love with you all over again and long to have you at the head of my modest little home here. Your little heart and hands shall control everything."

The closing words of another letter read by the attorney were:

"You are the one woman who can give me happiness once my soul is at peace with itself. Your darling, Billy."

A letter was introduced in which Rapp asked Mrs. Dean to write a hostile letter to Madame Schumann-Heink and to threaten her with a suit for damages if the diva coupled Mrs. Dean's name with that of Mr. Rapp. In the latter, Rapp gave an outline of the letter which he wished to have written to Mme. Schumann-Heink in Chicago.

A letter couched in similar language and received by the singer from Mrs. Dean was later introduced.

Miss Ashton told of having seen Mrs. Dean kiss letters which she said came from "her Billy."

"What did you see Mrs. Dean and Mr. Rapp do?" she was asked.

"I saw them hold hands; they kissed each other and sat in each other's laps," was the reply.

"JUST NICE."

"Is Mr. Rapp fat or thin?"—by [illegible]. "Not so thin—just nice."

She also said she had frequently seen him "out walking with Pluto, Mrs. Dean's dog."

Pluto, the dog, also appeared in the deposition of Lillian Schmidt, janitor of the Dean apartment house, who told of being hired by [illegible] Harrison, the actor, who was said to have also been frequently a visitor there, to take the dog out [illegible].

The girl testified she saw Rapp at the Dean apartment wearing an apron and fixing the stove. She declared that Mrs. Dean asked him to get some meat and called him "Billy."

"[illegible]," said the girl. "Mrs. Dean showed me a letter from Mr. Rapp. [illegible] the letter, and I presumed I did not see it. She let me read the letter. I don't remember what it said, but it ended 'your loving Billy.'"

NO HOPE FOR FRANK.

Georgia Judge Finds It Makes no Difference Whether Convicted Man Had Been Pronounced or Not.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) June 6.—Judge B. H. Hill of the Fulty County Superior Court today sustained the demurrer to the motion to set aside the verdict by which Lee M. Frank was found guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan, a factory girl. The motion was based on the claim that Frank's constitutional rights were violated when the verdict was returned during the condemned man's absence from court.

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Let your sore, swollen, sweaty feet spread out in a bath of "TIZ."

"Just couldn't wait to take my hat off"

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "TIZ" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "TIZ" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "TIZ." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "TIZ". It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25-cent box of "TIZ" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.—[Advertisement.

"GOULD FAMILY" SIGHTSEEING.

OFFICIALS OF ALLIED ROADS TO VISIT LOS ANGELES.

Traffic Men Are Filled With Astonishment at Magnitude of Exposition and Declare They Will Do All in Their Power to Further Interests in the East.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 6.—One hundred and fifty members of the "Gould family" were the guests of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition today and were shown all the sights in the exposition enclosure. They have come here to get information at first hand of the scope of the exposition in order that they may properly prepare to handle the enormous traffic expected during 1915. The "family" is composed of officials of the Western Pacific, Denver and Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific and their allied lines and have come from all the large eastern cities along the route of these railroads.

The visiting officials were filled with astonishment at the stupendousness of the exposition and to find the buildings so far toward completion. They promised to boost the great enterprise with all their might on their return home. Tonight a ball was given in their honor by the Transportation Club. At 9 o'clock tomorrow morning the "family" will leave by special train to San Jose, where they will be the guests of Paul Masson at his valley home. Monday, a visit to the Western Pacific terminals at Oakland is planned. At midnight Monday they will leave for Los Angeles via Del Monte for breakfast and Paso Robles for lunch and Santa Barbara for dinner.

They will arrive at Los Angeles at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night and on Wednesday will take a trolley trip to the beaches and Mt. Lowe. On Thursday they will visit Catalina Island and returning will go to San Diego via the Santa Fe on Thursday night. They will return by the Santa Fe on Saturday and will then separate and return to their homes. There are about 150 in the party.

Included in the "Gould family" are the principal officials of all the Gould lines. Prominent in the party are J. M. Johnson, vice-president of the Missouri Pacific and Denver and Rio Grande; F. W. Wadleigh, passenger traffic manager of the Denver and Rio Grande and Western Pacific; C. L. Stone, passenger traffic manager of the Missouri Pacific; H. M. Adams, general traffic manager; J. N. Githens, assistant to the vice-president; W. P. Hughes, secretary to J. N. Githens; W. S. Pinney, secretary to vice-president, St. Louis; A. T. Stewart, general freight agent, Kansas City; E. H. Calef, general freight agent, St. Louis; A. R. Malcolm, assistant general freight agent, Omaha; A. S. Edmonds of Philadelphia, T. A. Helm of Dallas and L. D. Knowles of Kansas City.

SO THEY DRUG THEMSELVES.

English Police After a Man Charged With Sneaking Poison Into the Jails Filled With Wild Dames.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, June 6.—For conveying into Holloway Jail letters and drugs to a militant suffragette, Grace Roe, a summons was isued today against Arthur Barnett, clerk to Mr. Marshall attorney for the Woman's Social and Political Union.

The case evoked much interest in view of the charges brought by Mrs. Mildred Ella Mansel, one of the organizers of the militant society, who declared on June 2 that militant suffragettes were being drugged in order that they might be forcibly fed.

The campaign of the arson squads of the militant suffragettes was continued today when the women set fire to and destroyed a fine mansion near High Wycombe in Buckinghamshire, about thirty miles from London. The mansion was filled with valuable furniture and objects of art. The usual suffrage literature was found about the grounds. The house adjoined the historic parish church which is believed to have been the real objective of the women who were, however, unable to obtain admittance.

Nuptials.

TROTHS ARE PLIGHTED IN GLOW OF SUNSET.

WITH the rays of the late afternoon sun falling across the arroyo-bank garden, which furnished a charming setting for the wedding, Miss Isabel Watson, daughter of Mrs. William R. Staats of Pasadena and Stuart O'Melveny, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. O'Melveny of Los Angeles, were married yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Staats, No. 55 North Grand avenue, Pasadena.

The driveway was closed and along the terraces rugs were spread, porch chairs, settees and tables were placed for groups of friends and on the parterre a buffet table for serving refreshments was provided.

At 5 o'clock Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Arend's orchestra, announced the approach of the bridal party, which came down the stairway, through the living-room and sun parlor, across the garden to the vine-covered pergola, where the ceremony was performed by Father Glass of Los Angeles.

The ushers were Paige Monteagle of San Francisco, Jack McFarland, Sayre Macniel, Maynard McFie, and Morgan Adams of Los Angeles. The bridesmaids were Misses Theodora Robbins, Dorothy Bailey, Jane Stimson and Helen Staats, and Miss Clara Watson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. All wore gowns of fluffy pink in silk tulle, and lace and picture hats. Each carried a shepherdess crook tied with rose-colored tulle, which held great clusters of Killarney roses.

The bride wore an exquisite gown of white satin, with rare antique lace and tulle and carried a shower of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Orange flowers fastened her veil.

The groom was attended by his brother, Donald O'Melveny. After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Staats with Mr. and Mrs. Henry O'Melveny and the bride and groom, received the guests, and after congratulations supper was served. The bride's table was in the dining-room, with covers for sixteen, and the rose-color scheme was carried out with hundreds of pink carnations and Killarney roses.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. O'Melveny, Jr., left for their wedding journey and will be at home on Serano street after October 1. No Pasadena bride has received a greater number of costly gifts than those displayed yesterday and the wedding, at which there were present 150 guests, was unusually artistic and charming in all its appointments.

HUB PREACHER SHOCKS STRAND.

ELDERLY BOSTON CLERGYMAN TOO FAMILIAR WITH GIRLS IN LONDON.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, June 6.—The Rev. John Henry Couland, an elderly clergyman from Boston, was arraigned in the Bow-street Police Court today, charged with "insulting behavior whereby a breach of the peace might have been committed."

Witnesses testified that he held up traffic in the Strand and put his arms around girls' waists.

Magistrate Dickinson, whom the defendant addressed familiarly as "My dear judge," gave him a severe talk, cautioning him thus:

"The cause of it all is your drinking. The next time you come before me I shall take no pity for you."

Then the magistrate bound the defendant over to keep the peace.

This was the Rev. Mr. Couland's second appearance in police court. He arrived on the River Thames Thursday and landed at Gravesend. There he seemed to be overjoyed to be ashore again and made things lively in the streets. Evidence then taken indicated that he patted girls on the back and otherwise made himself disagreeable. A fine of $2 was imposed.

Free Life Readings To All Who Write at Once

The well-known London Astrologer, Prof. Roxroy, has once more decided to favor the people of this country with Free Test Readings of their lives from his new address in The Hague, Holland.

Prof. Roxroy's fame is so well known in this country that he hardly needs an introduction from us. His power to read the lives of people, no matter at what distance they may be, is described as simply marvelous. Even Astrologers of lesser reputation all over the world acknowledged him to be their master, and follow in his footsteps. He tells you what you are capable of, and how you can be successful. He mentions your friends and enemies, and describes the good and bad periods in your life.

His description as to past, present and future events will astonish and help you. All he wants is your name (written by yourself,) your birth date, and sex to guide him in his work. Money not necessary. Mention the name of this paper and get a Trial Reading free.

Herr Paul Stahmann, an experienced Astrologer, of Ober Niewsadern, Germany, says:

"The Horoscope which Professor Roxroy worked out for me is quite according to the truth. It is a very clever and conscientious piece of work. As an Astrologer myself, I carefully examined his Planetary calculations and indications, and proved that his work in every detail is perfect, and that he is up to date in his science."

Baroness Blanquet, one of the most talented ladies of Paris, says:

"I thank you for my Complete Life Reading, which is really of extraordinary accuracy. I had already consulted several Astrologers, but never before have I been answered with so much truth, or received such complete satisfaction. With sincere pleasure I will recommend you and make your marvelous science known to my friends and acquaintances."

If you want to take advantage of this special offer and obtain a review of your life, simply send your full name and address, the date, month, year, and place of your birth (all clearly written,) state whether Mr. Mrs. or Miss, and also copy the following verse in your own handwriting:

"Your advice is useful,
So thousands say,
I wish success and happiness;
Will you show me the way?"

If you wish you may enclose 10 cents (stamps of your own country,) to pay postage and clerical work. Do not enclose coins in your letter. Send your letter to ROXROY, Dept. 73-N, No. 24 Groote Markt, The Hague, Holland. Postage to Holland 5 cents.

BANK SOLVENT, BUT SUSPENDS.

EARL GREY REPORTED LOSER IN BIG LONDON FIRM.

Speculation in Grand Trunk Stock Said to Have Caused Undoing of Big Promoting Company, One of Whose Directors Was Slated for Union Oil Director.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, June 6.—Chaplain, Milne, Grenfell & Co., Ltd., a well-known firm of merchants and bankers in Princes street, suspended today.

The company was registered in 1899 to take over the business of Morton, Chaplain & Co. (formerly Morton, Rose & Co.) Its authorized capital is $1,750,000.

The firm is an old-established one, with high reputation and excellent family connections. It conducted general and private banking and a company for promoting business. The directors include Ernest Chaplain, G. Grinell Milne and R. W. Skipwith.

The failure is believed to be the result of large operations in Grand Trunk by Arthur Morton Grenfell, formerly a member of the firm and whose dealings recently have been the subject of much gossip. It is said several Canadian and other companies wherein he was interested are involved. Earl Grey, whose daughter was Grenfell's first wife, is reported among the heavy losers.

Powerful banking and other interests have been working for some weeks to re-establish Grenfell's affairs in the interest of many stockholders of the companies he controlled. The firm recently issued a notice that Grenfell had not been connected therewith since February 17.

The affairs of the bank were largely involved with those of the Canadian agency, limited, which is controlled by Arthur Grenfell.

He and the Canadian agency had been engaged in a campaign for the purchase of a controlling interest in the Grand Trunk Railway, but when those securities depreciated, the obligations he had created were taken over by a strong group of financial houses in order to protect the many stock exchange firms involved.

The bank's losses through loans to Grenfell and withdrawals of business consequent on his operations caused the bank to suspend. It is believed, however, to be entirely solvent, but time will be required to liquidate the assets in order that depositors may be paid.

The total of the deposits is understood to have been greatly diminished in the last month and the amount outstanding is believed to be about $1,250,000.

Further failures in connection with this one are not expected. Arthur Grenfell recently formed a syndicate for the purchase of a controlling interest in the General Petroleum Company of California, and Earl Grey has been in California in connection with the negotiations. Grenfell is retiring from the transaction, which will now be carried through by members of the group.

The Grand Trunk transaction attempted by Grenfell is considered as one of the most daring stock operations launched in years. In the notice posted on the doors of the bank, which has been surrounded by a crowd since morning, the firm expresses regret at having to suspend, and states that its books have been placed in the hands of chartered accountants to prepare a statement.

The members of Grenfell's family are coming to his assistance in the settlement of his affairs.

EFFECT ON UNION OIL.
BIG DEAL NOT INVOLVED.

Although there was a tendency toward bearish sentiment regarding the Union Oil deal in local financial circles at first advices regarding the failure of Chaplain, Milne, Grenfell & Co., the more conservative, when placed in possession of the facts concerning the financial disaster, were not inclined to view the situation pessimistically.

Arthur M. Grenfell, whose speculations appear as the principal cause for the failure of the big London banking firm, was among those slated for the directorate of the British Union Oil Company, Ltd., which is to be the holding company for Union Oil of California when the refinancing deal is completed. It is understood, however, that arrangements were made for his retirement from the company, as well as from the Western Ocean and General Petroleum syndicates, before the suspension was announced.

There had been an impression that the London firm was financing the deal, but W. L. Stewart, president of the Union of California, yesterday denied that this was the case. He stated that the failure would not have the slightest effect on the deal.

A director of the General Petroleum similarly denied that the failure would have any influence on the British deal for that company.

The extent to which Earl Grey may be financially involved in the transactions of Grenfell is not believed to be very great, if worth consideration at all. None of the names of the other members of the syndicate have been mentioned in connection with the failure.

Union Oil stock showed only slight weakness, which might be explained by other causes.

MOVIE SPIRITS OUT OF ASHES.

Picture Theater on Site of Hotel Maryland.

To Be Feature of Permanent Future Structure.

Tod Ford Plans Residence for His New Site.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, June 7.—From the ashes of the burned Hotel Maryland is to rise—not a phoenix, but a "movie" theater.

It is not the intention to change the plans for a new hotel, but workmen yesterday began a reconstruction of the tennis courts into what is to be a novel place of entertainment. The theater is to have walls of vines and palms and the sky for a roof. The concrete floor of the court will be covered with rugs and in place of the conventional opera chairs there will be easy chairs and tables at which refreshments will be served.

This open-air theater, which will be the only one of the kind in Southern California, will probably be opened the night of the 16th inst., when a Scottish Rite banquet is to be held in the unruined part of the hotel, with Palmer Day, assistant manager of the hostelry, in the role of manager.

The plans for decorations are elaborate. The long pergola on Colorado street will be converted into an ambulatory, lined on the inner side with boxes.

LEANS AGAINST WALL.

Boxes will be constructed on the ruined portion of the courts against the three-room wall of the building, part of a wing that is standing. In the center of this space a room will be constructed for the cinematograph, while the screen on which the pictures will be projected will be placed on the west side of the inclosure.

Potted palms and bay trees are to be distributed throughout the court and the canvas sides will be artistically covered with greenery. Uniformed bellboys will act as ushers and pretty waitresses will serve refreshments while the pictures are shown. There will be an orchestra pit.

The theater will be incorporated as a part of the new hotel when it is built, if present plans are carried out, and used in the winter as well as in the summer. The latter part of the season last year the tennis courts were practically turned into an open-air ballroom, the tennis players going to the Hotel Huntington for their games.

STILL ANOTHER.

Announcement was also made yesterday of plans for another motion picture theater. It is to be called the Colonial, and, it is announced, will be on East Colorado street. It is to be erected by the Pasadena Theater Company, which has just been incorporated with a capital of $50,000, and with A. S. French, Lincoln Clark, Eric Kobbe, Ben H. Lester and A. A. French as directors. The theater will also be a vaudeville house and will, it is said, have a seating capacity of 1200. It is to cost $60,000 and several storerooms will be constructed in the same building.

GIRL STUNNED BY LIGHTNING.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN JACINTO, June 6.—The entire back country was visited this week by an electric and rain storm, lasting about twelve hours. Rain fell to a depth of one inch in some portions of the valley, while in other sections the precipitation was not sufficient to lay the dust.

Lightning struck in several places, but no damage is reported from that source, although the rain did considerable in the country lying south of Hemet. The 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Sanders was stunned by a flash of lightning while returning to her home along a country road.

An electric storm at this season of the year is very unusual, and it is unwelcome, for there are thousands of acres of grain and hay in process of harvest.

STATE OFFICER ASKS LENIENCY.

WOULD LET CONFESSED SWINDLER DOWN PRETTY EASY.

Guilty Man Aids in Running Down Gang of Crooks—High-Salaried Office of General Manager of Public Utilities May Be Abolished. Auto Bus Service.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, June 6.—The unusual spectacle of a prosecutor asking leniency in the case of a prisoner who pleaded guilty to the charge of being a party to swindling a rancher out of $4000, was presented in the Superior Court today when Asst. Dist.-Atty. Dreshmeyer of Santa Clara county made an appeal to Judge Densmore on behalf of George Volpe.

A light sentence was asked on the ground that Volpe had aided in running down an organized gang of bunco men with headquarters in the San Francisco saloon of Paul Necci, who is said to be the leader of the gang, and who was arrested but vanished after putting up $1500 bail. The cases were tried at San Jose.

Dreshmeyer was outspoken in his declaration that the San Francisco police were implicated in shielding Necci and others.

Volpe, who assisted in tricking John Ferrara of Arlington out of $4000 in a deal for the latter's ranch, was sentenced to five years in San Quentin.

For his part in the crime Louis Gorio was two years ago given a ten-years' sentence. Ferraro placed $4000 in a tin box, the alleged ranch buyers putting up a like sum as a guarantee of good faith. The box that Ferraro was asked to deposit in the bank was later found to contain a quantity of iron washers, the gangsters having cleverly switched boxes with him.

WOULD ABOLISH OFFICE.

The East Side Betterment Association is out for the abolition of the highest-salaried position in the city, recommending at its meeting last night that the position of general manager of public utilities, created less than a year ago and carrying a salary of $250 per month, be done away with. This office figured somewhat as an issue in the Mayoralty contest last November and its resurrection at this time comes as a surprise to the political wiseacres.

The Riverside Auto Bus Company, under the management of J. N. Braun, will be doing business within ten days. The local company, organized for the purpose of providing transportation for that portion of the city known as the East Side, which is without trolley accommodations, will have an interest in the project to the extent of $1200.

KICK AGAINST BARRIER.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN GABRIEL, June 6.—The proposed building of a protective barrier in the wash at the Masonic Home by the board of directors of the home has engendered a lively neighborhood wrangle, which made the last session of the City Council an exciting one. Some of the people living in the vicinity of the home are vigorously protesting against the barrier, claiming it will place an obstruction in several streets. The directors believe that their plan is a most feasible one, and it has been decided to hold a meeting on the grounds of the home, with the board of directors, the neighboring property owners, and City Clerk Stouffer, and Trustee Johnson of the Streets Committee to settle the question at a date to be decided upon later.

MANHATTAN WANTS PIER.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MANHATTAN BEACH, June 6.—The Manhattan Pier and Beach Association considered the question of a municipal pier last night. A suggestion was made to have twin piers of 1000 feet each; one at the end of Center street and one at Marine avenue. This proposition, however, did not meet with support. The meeting was practically unanimous for the Trustees to call an election as soon as possible for the issuance of $75,000 in bonds to construct a 1500-foot pier. The suggestion was also made that its location should be left to the wishes of the people.

H. Gard, J. D. Gard, W. H. Gard, John H. Gard and Geo. H. Gard.

SIX OF THE GARD BOYS ROUND OUT LONG LIVES.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, June 6.—The six Gard "boys" are planning to hold a big celebration as soon as William, second youngest of the brothers, recovers sufficiently from a remarkable operation that he recently underwent at a Long Beach sanatorium. William Gard is 72 and ordinarily as spry as a boy, but the past few weeks he has been critically ill and the doctors agreed that an operation alone could save his life. Gard, with four of his brothers, lives in Monrovia, but he passes a good deal of his time in Long Beach and it was at a Long Beach sanatorium that the operation was performed.

Owing to the patient's weakened condition, due to his physician's refusing to allow him to eat for several days before the operation, the surgeons were afraid to administer an anaesthetic except locally. Local anaesthetia was used, and Gard, fully conscious, conversed cheerfully and easily while the man of medicine opened his side and removed fifty-four gall stones. Then the surgeon made a second incision and remedied an adhesion to the larger intestine which made egress of food from the patient's stomach difficult. This alone would have eventually caused death.

Before the operation little hope was held out for Gard's life, but he rallied and this morning at 3 o'clock his brother, J. D. Gard, returned from Long Beach to his home in Monrovia, with the joyful news that "Will" was out of danger and could be expected to be on his feet again within a few weeks.

The ages of the six brothers range from 68 years to 84. Five of them have lived in Monrovia for many years, George H., the "baby" of the family, residing in Ontario, Cal. Besides the six hardy brothers there is a sister, Hanna, who is 74 and lives at Downey. The combined ages of the seven total 520 years.

BLAMES LEGISLATION FOR RAILROAD TROUBLES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, June 6.—Former Senator W. A. Clark today visited the Panama-California Exposition grounds and enthusiastically went over the plans with G. A. Davidson, president of the exposition, and H. O. Davis, for the Montana building which Senator Clark is giving to the exposition.

If Clark's visit had any significance with regard to railroads he refused to say so and the trip appeared to be a jolly lark for him and his young grandson, W. A. Clark, who proudly piloted his grandfather to the movies tonight.

When seen this evening at his private car, Clark talked of the Montana building for which he has donated $10,000, and spoke of the great progress made in the fair buildings since his last trip. Regarding the railroad extension to San Diego he said that there would not be much done in railroads until there is fair legislation. He then spoke of the many thousands of railroad employees let out recently from different roads, and said "and it is all because the Interstate Railroad Commission will not allow that little raise of 5 per cent."

He said that the Babcock road, which is the La Jolla road for which it has been reported the Salt Lake has been negotiating as an entrance here, would not be very desirable as it would have to be entirely rebuilt. He also denied any knowledge of a report that the Salt Lake is negotiating for the Pursell right of way which is through Escondido.

Clark said he thought that a great many persons are coming to the fair next year and that this largely accounted for the falling off of tourist travel this year. He said he left the plans of the Montana building largely to the officers of the fair so as to conform with the mission style of architecture adopted by the entire exposition.

He arrived here this morning in his private car which was attached to the Owl and will leave on the Owl tomorrow morning. He said he expects to make another trip to the Coast and over his possessions in Arizona and Montana in October upon his return from France where his family is now.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PARTY PLANS ALL-NIGHT STAY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, June 6.—The Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce will send an expedition to the top of Mt. Santiago (familiarly known as "Saddleback") next Saturday to exploit the attractions of this majestic peak and permit automobilists and mountain lovers to learn the features of the trip.

The party will leave the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Santa Ana at 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning, proceeding in automobiles to the foot of the government trail in Trabuco Canyon, from which point the ascent will be made with saddle and pack horses.

The expedition, which is limited to twenty, will reach the top of the mountain about 5 p.m., thus enjoying the evening view, and will remain on the peak over night, returning Sunday. The view from Mt. Santiago, which is about 6000 feet high, is excellent and an automobile road to the top is considered practicable.

FIRST-CLASS OFFICE.

Postmaster L. L. Shaw has received notice from Washington that the Santa Ana postoffice will become a first-class office on July 1, the receipts of the postal window for the year ending March 31, having gone over $41,000. The substantial prosperity and growth of the city is shown by the growth of the postoffice. For the year ending May 31 the office handled over 6,000,000 pieces of mail. During the year $122,281.73 was the total of money orders issued and $86,445.78 the total amount cashed.

HALF A CENTURY UNION'S MARTYR.

DIES SAME DATE HE'S WOUNDED FIFTY YEARS A-GONE.

Glendale Veteran Who Ever Smiled from Wheel-chair Now Rests Under Sod of Forest Lawn. Masons of Los Angeles Entertained With Field-Day Sports.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDALE, June 6.—Just fifty years to the day since the battle of Piedmont, Va., which was fought June 5, 1864, where he was shot through the hips and left an invalid for life, Joseph Morrison died at the home of his nephew, Hadley G. Brown, No. 1215 Lomita avenue, of cerebral apoplexy, superinduced by the old wound.

For half a century, with never a word of complaint, he was completely paralyzed from the hips down and for the last thirty-one years got about only in a wheel-chair. His cheerful smile was a feature of every day in Glendale.

Born May 20, 1844, he enlisted in August, 1862, as a private in the One Hundred and Sixteenth Ohio Volunteers and served until he was disabled. He died June 5, and was buried yesterday in Forest Lawn Cemetery. Services were conducted by the Rev. C. R. Norton, pastor of the Methodist Church of Casa Verduga in the Pulliam undertaking parlors, after which the local veterans of the G.A.R. took charge. Morrison had been drawing a pension since Congress provided for the veterans, which was increased to $72 a month about twenty years ago.

MASONS DISPORT.

The Unity Lodge of Masons at Glendale entertained the Golden State Lodge of Los Angeles with a field day, yesterday at Verduga Park. The two lodges were represented by 500 members. Baseball, croquet and other field games were enjoyed, and as a joke, H. M. Miller, Chief of the Police, was called upon to make several mock arrests.

The affair was in charge of Worshipful Master R. C. Sternberg of the Unity Lodge and H. E. Betz, Worshipful Master of the Golden State Lodge, was also on hand.

TIME LIMIT ON PASSES.

That the Santa Fe Railroad is to make a sweeping change in the issuance of passes to employees is the report that has gained considerable credence here, with the alleged statements of officials to employees that the time limit on all foreign-line and local trip passes is to be but thirty days, whether the employee desires a longer trip or not. Officials of the road deny knowledge of such an order, but consternation reigns among the 2000 or more men and women on the pay rolls of the railroad in San Bernardino.

In the past passes have been issued to employees on leave of absence with liberal limitations. It is understood that the road is to reduce to a minimum the number of passes issued to employees and to confine them as much as possible to the regular two-weeks' period of vacation, which the company allows on full pay.

KILLED BY BEER BARREL.

S. O. Harris died last night as a result of injuries received a few days ago when a 300-pound barrel of beer fell on him, badly crushing one of his legs. Harris was unloading a wagon of kegs at the Bublitz Bottling Works on West Third street when the accident happened. The funeral was held today. As a result of the shock he sustained he could not talk following the accident, and he passed away without telling how the accident happened.

CHERRY FESTIVAL.

About forty automobile loads of boosters, headed by the officers of the local Chamber of Commerce, went to Yucaipa Valley today, where the annual "cherry celebration" was in progress. The local delegation was joined at Redlands by about fifty machines and the crowd took Yucaipa by storm. As a feature of the visit the cherry growers presented each person attending with a fine box of cherries.

CITRUS BELT MAKES A KICK.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, June 6.—In a resolution concurring in the protest against the moving of the State citrus fruit experimental station from Riverside county to the proposed site in the San Fernando Valley, the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce has joined with the Riverside and Rialto chambers in the movement to prevent the change.

The protest is based on the fact that the real citrus district of the south is the San Bernardino Valley and Riverside and the east end of Los Angeles county, as set forth in the resolution.

It is asked that the experimental station be situated either in San Bernardino or Riverside county for the mutual benefit of the majority of the citrus fruit growers.

Removal notice: The California Title Guarantee Company has moved from 329 West Third street to 315 West Fifth street, ground floor, main entrance of Metropolitan building.—[Advertisement.

"As Fine Peaches and Apricots As I Have Ever Seen"

—R. H. Beazley

Mr. Emil Firth,
346 Broadway,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Sir—My two sons and I came to Perris Valley in October, 1911, and moved onto 42½ acres. When I found I could make money here, I bought 37½ acres more.

I have farmed in Iowa, Indiana and Nebraska, also in the San Joaquin Valley and near Compton, and Fullerton, California, and will say that this is the best.

We have never tried anything but what will grow here.

Grapes pay well. Perris Valley has Concord, Sultana, Cornichon, Muscat and Rose of Peru grapes.

We have peach, apricot, plum, pear and apple trees.

They are raising here as fine peaches and apricots as I have ever seen anywhere.

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) R. H. BEAZLEY.

DECLARE ITALIAN IN SWINDLE RING.

IS ARRESTED ON COMPLAINT OF PURPORTED VICTIM; PAST RECORD SOUGHT.

Charged with being a member of an organized gang of swindlers, Frank Manfredi, an Italian, 35 years old, was arrested last night on complaint of Nick Macrsish, an Austrian, who says he was buncoed out of $840 on the pretense that he would be allowed to marry Manfredi's beautiful sister. Owing to the number of complaints received at police headquarters during the last few days, Detectives Zeigler and Fitzgerald were detailed to make an investigation.

At the Plaza last night the officers picked up the trail of Manfredi and followed him to his room, where he was arrested.

Macrsish asserted that he met Manfredi and another Italian on April 29 and incidentally informed them that he not only possessed a bank account but was looking for a wife.

The Italian answered that he had been made sole heir of $10,000 left by an alleged deceased uncle in Salt Lake, but as he himself was immensely wealthy, he was looking for some honest man to relieve him of all his wealth.

At the same time Manfredi displayed a "flash roll" and was about to press it into the hands of the astonished Austrian, when the second Italian demurred and demanded evidence that Macrsish was a prudent man.

The victim admitted that he had saved $840 in the last three years and was told to produce the actual money in order to convince his seeming benefactor.

When the unsuspecting Austrian returned from the bank with the money the Italians made a pretense of placing it with the supposed inheritance and succeeded in getting away with Macrsish's funds.

The stories told by the prisoner and his accuser agree in many details, but Manfredi asserts that it was his companion that made away with the bank roll. The detectives have evidence that Manfredi has been connected with a number of crimes and are making a complete investigation.

ROASTS JOHNSON MACHINE.

Democratic Candidate, Cheered by Party Sympathizers, Pledges Business Methods if Made Governor.

Two hundred Democrats assembled last night at Hamburger's Cafe and cheered Fred H. Hall of Bakersfield, one of the leading Democratic candidates for Governor, and applauded the name of President Wilson.

The banquet was held in honor of Hall, who is now touring the Southland in the interest of his candidacy fos the Democratic nomination.

Joseph Mesmer introduced Fred W. Morrison, who in turn introduced Hall. He said, if elected Governor, he will endeavor to abolish many of the useless commissions that the present administration has so abundantly provided. He declared that these commissions are not only a drain on the treasury of the State, but they burden and distress the people in the legitimate conduct of their affairs.

"I am strongly in favor of laws that will further the interests and better the condition of the workingman," said Hall. "Laws that have some real meaning and that would be of some practical benefit, that are not intended to hoodwink the laborer for political reasons.

"If I am elected Governor I shall endeavor to relieve the burdens of taxation wherever it is consistent with good business judgment. I further promise you and all the people of California I will see to it that the affairs of the State are handled in a business-like manner."

He attacked the Johnson machine for its wanton extravagance, riddled the shallow pretensions of the Armageddon battlers and said it is high time the level-headed citizens of this State oust the "creators of the most powerful political machine California has ever known."

Short talks were made by R. F. Del Valle and W. Ona Morton.

BUST DEVELOPED ONE OUNCE A DAY

A New Simple Easy Home Method That Gave Me Quick And Permanent Success

Judge from my picture as to the truth of what I say to you—that the crowning feminine attribute is a bust of beautiful proportions, firmness and exquisite development. Then ask yourself how much you would like to have such a photograph of yourself, showing the glory of womanhood with its lines of infinite charm and grace. It would be worth far more than a two-cent stamp, would it not? Then let me give you my message—let me tell you of what I have learned and let me give you recent pictures of myself to prove what I say—for if you will write me today

I Will Tell You How—Free!

I will tell you gladly and willingly. Why should any woman neglect an opportunity to escape the pain and heartache of being skinny, scrawny, angular and unattractive in body? Misery is not our heritage. Nature planned that you—a woman—should have the rich, pulsing lines of warm, living flesh molded after the mother of us all, the description of whom perfumes our sacred literature with love and admiration for the divinity of woman's form. For why should there be that pitiful aspect—the face of a woman and the form of a man?

Write To Me Today

I don't care how fallen, or flaccid, or undeveloped your bust now is—I want to tell you of a simple home method—I want to tell you how I gained perfect development. No physical culture—no massage, foolish baths or paste—no plasters, masks or injurious injections—I want to tell you of my own new method, never before offered or told about—insuring immediate success and permanent beauty.

Send No Money

Just write me a letter—address it to me personally—that's all. I believe you will bless me through years of happiness for pointing the way to you and telling you what I know. Please send your letter today to the following address:

THE WEATHER.
[Official Report.]

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, June 6.—[Reported by Ford A. Carpenter, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.80; at 5 p.m., 29.78. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 55 deg. and 64 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 76 per cent.; 5 p.m., 50 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity 6 miles; 5 p.m., south, velocity 8 miles. Highest temperature, 66 deg.; lowest, 53 deg. Rainfall for season, 23.56 inches. Barometer reduced to sea level.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.—The pressure conditions remain unchanged east of the Rocky Mountains. The hot weather in the Mississippi Valley and the brisk winds in Southern Kansas and Oklahoma continue to form the most striking features of the weather map. Showers are generally reported over the western half of the country, except in the southern portion. It is cooler over Nevada and Utah. At Modena the temperature dropped 22 deg. A well-defined area of low pressure is entering the Pacific Northwest, centering over Southern Oregon. It is seldom that a depression of so pronounced a character enters the western coast so late in the season. Showers have already resulted along the California coast as far south as San Francisco. The eastern extension of this low area will probably give Los Angeles and vicinity showers Sunday.

STATE FORECAST.

For Los Angeles and vicinity: Probably showers Sunday; light to moderate southwesterly winds.

For California south of the Tehachepi: Unsettled Sunday; probably showers.

STATE FORECAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Unsettled weather with showers Sunday; light southwest breezes.

Sacramento, Santa Clara and San Joaquin valleys: Unsettled weather Sunday; probably showers; light south airs.

California south of the Tehachepi: Unsettled weather Sunday; probably showers; light southwest airs.

ARIZONA FORECAST.

WASHINGTON, June 6. — Forecast for Arizona: Fair in south, showers in north portion, Sunday; Monday, fair and warmer.

NORTON OPPOSES TEST OF MERIT.

OFFICIAL VILIFIED BY EARD AGREES TO EXAMINATION FOR PROMOTION.

A. J. Hill, who was transferred by the Board of Supervisors ten months ago from a deputyship in the District Attorney's office to the position of County Counsel, yesterday agreed before the Board of Supervisors to take a promotional civil service examination. All of the Supervisors, with the exception of Norton, accepted Hill's proposition.

Hill denounced two local newspapers for "deliberately misrepresenting my position toward civil service." He said these papers had carried on a systematic campaign of vilification and misrepresentation relative to the attitude of several county officials toward civil service and he then proceeded to tell the Board of Supervisors that he has always been in hearty sympathy with the true principles of civil service.

Civil Service Commissioner Alexander criticised Norton's position, which he declared is a change of front. A month ago at a meeting of the commission, he said, the same proposition was discussed and Norton expressed no opposition.

The commission offered a suggestion that Superior Judges Rives, Myers and Wilbur be asked to conduct the examination for County Counsel, and this suggestion was adopted, only Norton voting "No."

Yesterday's proceedings were attended by a second wrangle when the commission presented drafts of proposed salary ordinances for the County Registrar's office and the mechanical department of the county. Norton opposed any increase of salary for County Registrar McAleer, a competent official, who is receiving a deputy's salary.

Supervisor Woodley told Norton the members were not dealing in personalities. The proposed ordinances were referred to the County Counsel to be drafted and returned to the board for final action.

READ WAR STIRS LIKE BEAUTY CONTEST.

Decorative Wrappers a Striking Factor in the Bakery Contest.

Picturesque Struggle on for Supremacy in the Getting Out of Los Angeles' Half-Million Loaves a Day, but Not to Be Increased Nor Prices Reduced—Millions of New Capital.

you see it announced—"the thing in wrappers"—do not something new in dainty Likewise, don't jump to that there is a new in town if you see a be- face, topped by a Gains- hat, set in a garnishment of matter.

it is for you to stop, look for there is a bread war of the new-fangled variety where there is no blood- and a strict attention to the if not to ethics.

olden days a bread war was fashion, with prices and the ultimate consumer temporary benefits. But advent of the new variety conscience, the old cut-and-slash methods into the discard in favor the more devious, but also process by which the business is undermined making the public cry for either because they are better, or because they are advertised.

Angeles's consumption of baked averages 250,000 loaves In other words, the bread made seems almost to its clientele, for this con- figures out at two and one- for each family. About quantity of bread is baked the out-of-town trade, mak- daily output half a million And those who should know Los Angeles bread is about in the world and still im-

It goes into effi- is the stock in trade invade a new field, with profits in mind. But the occupants of the baking field hereabouts are not scared, not by a little bit. They are willing to have it out with the newcomers on the premise that the "devil take the hindmost."

NO CUT IN PRICE.

But there will be no cut in price, neither an increase in the size of the loaf which you get for a nickel or a dime, as the case may be. Both prices and loaves are now standard, for the reason that trust methods long ago caused the bakers to hew close to the line in profits.

Instead, the pedal is nowadays put down hard on the psychological appeal. Women are the predominate buyers of bread. Consequently, the bakers cultivate the esthetic and the sanitary in their offerings. They offer bread hermetically sealed—at least some of the advertisements say so—in oiled paper, with stickers binding the paper at vantage points. Also some bakers offer loaves to whose wrappings baby ribbon gives a dainty touch.

As for advertising, the constant dropping of water, as is well known, will wear away a stone. The bakers now have advertising campaigns under way which are all adaptations of this proved premise. They are telling, constantly telling, that their bread is the best. They are keeping their bread before the public. They want everyone to know it by name and they want the babies to cry for it.

Also, the bakers are giving attention to their internal finances. The efficiency engineer has invaded the bake shops. He has told the bakers if they had not before arrived at the conclusion, that they can cut distribution costs by employing automobiles. Consequently one concern alone recently contracted for seventeen automobiles and as soon as delivered will discard its thirty horse-drawn wagons.

Other slipshod business methods have also been taboo. For instance, there is now but little dealing in stale bread, for the reason that your bakery has a traffic director. This man knows the dealers; he also knows the consumers. It is his work to see that no more bread is baked than there is a market for. He charts out the day's baking from agents' returns. He knows, for instance, that during the summer season there is always an increasing demand for sandwich bread. But he does not countenance a large baking of sandwich bread when the Obsession.

DISPUTED DEBT SETTLED AT A TERRIBLE COST.

Realty Operator Shoots President of Creamery Company, Then Slays Self After Hunting Two With an Exaggerated Idea that They Owed Him Money. Tragedy in Auto Near Homes of Intended Victims.

GEORGE E. PLATT, president of the Los Angeles Creamery Company, is at the point of death with a bullet in his abdomen and C. P. Deyoe, a real estate man, who shot him, is dead by his own hand as the result of an altercation between the two men early yesterday morning.

F. O. Jean, a contractor and neighbor of Platt, owes his life to the failure of Deyoe to find him. Platt and Jean were marked for death by Deyoe, who hunted them in his automobile yesterday. He had an exaggerated idea that the two men were trying to defraud him of commissions. This exaggeration became an obsession, and when Platt refused to pay the mooted claim yesterday he shot him.

The tragedy had been brewing for six months. Deyoe, aged 42 years, a realty operator in the Columbia Trust building, carried a revolver with him on the way to his office yesterday morning. Deyoe lived with his wife at No. 5352 Lemon Grove avenue, Hollywood. He made it a point to drive his machine past Sixth and Ardmore streets. Platt lives at No. 520 Ardmore and Jean resides at No. 452 Ardmore.

INVITES PLATT TO RIDE.

Being familiar with the time Platt starts to his office, Deyoe reached Sixth and Ardmore while Platt was waiting for a street car. He invited Platt to ride. Jean was nowhere in sight, although Deyoe looked up and down the street for him.

Deyoe asserted that Platt owed him $630 as commission on the purchase by Platt of the Scorpion ranch near Owensmouth, eighteen months ago. Platt denied the obligation.

"Jean owes me money, too," said Deyoe. "If it hadn't been for me he wouldn't have built your house for you. He is trying to beat me, too."

Platt resented the remark about his neighbor, Jean, who recently finished a $15,000 home for him on Ardmore street. This heightened the rage of Deyoe and he drew his revolver with a threat. Platt had entered the auto, which was driven east on Sixth street to Catalina, where Platt, seeing the gun, jumped from the machine and started to run. Deyoe shot him in the back and then turned the gun on himself as Platt fell. Deyoe died instantly and Platt was rushed to the California Hospital with what is thought to be a mortal wound.

Jean asserts that he did not know Deyoe.

Platt is married and has two daughters, Nellie, aged 22, and Ethel, aged 20. He has long been prominent in business.

When Mrs. Deyoe heard of the shooting she was prostrated and taken to the Receiving Hospital. She is now at home.

Deyoe had been dogging Platt for six months for the commission on the Owensmouth ranch. He had been after Jean for several weeks. The house which Jean built for Platt was recently occupied by the Platt family.

VICTIMS.

"I was at Sixth and Ardmore when Deyoe came past in his auto," said Platt in the hospital. "He asked me to ride and I climbed into the car. He asked me for the commission on the ranch, as he has asked me time after time before. I didn't owe it to him and declined to pay. Then he said something about Jean, my neighbor and friend, and when I replied he drew the revolver. I tried to grab the gun as I was getting out of the machine, but failed and as I half stumbled in my effort to get away he shot."

Lloyd Herron, a collector, saw Deyoe start to leave the halted machine and then turn back and shoot himself through the head.

Dr. E. C. Moore, who is attending Platt at the California Hospital, made an X-ray examination yesterday, which showed the course and lodgment of the bullet. The missile entered the right side, pierced the right lobe of the liver, ranged across the vertebrae, and lodged in the abdomen near the left side.

Dr. Moore said last night that an operation was impossible, owing to the weakened condition of Platt, but that if no change for the worse occurred during the night the bullet will be removed this morning.

INDIAN ALUMNI MEET.

Reviving college days with songs and yells and recounting old campus gossip, alumni of Indiana University held their annual reunion last night at Christopher's. Hon. N. W. Fitzgerald, class of '69, spoke and read an original poem, and vocal solos were given by Mrs. R. D. Owen and Fred Pochne. Several letters of greeting were read. Officers of the local alumni are Albert F. Vandergrift of the Polytechnic High School, president; Everett Shepardson of the State Normal School, vice-president; Frances McCray of the Los Angeles High School, secretary-treasurer.

Particularly California.

PROPOSED LAW MEANS DEATH TO INDUSTRIES.

Farmer and Fruit Grower Face Vital Issue in Eight-Hour-Minimum Wage Act, that With Tariff Lowered and Cheap Competition Abroad Would Annihilate Many Interests and Cripple All.

ALREADY faced by lowered tariff and competition from other States and countries where labor is infinitely cheaper than it is here, the proposed eight-hour-and-minimum-wage law is very far from being a political issue with the farmer and fruit grower of California, for once on the statute books and in force not only would it necessitate a great curtailment in needed farm and orchard help, but in numberless instances the cost of production would be so greatly increased that entire industries would be wiped out and thousands of well-paid men thrown out of work. It would hit California particularly.

This in a marked degree applies to the great citrus fruit industry of the State, which would at once receive the hardest blow in its history, one beside which the questions of freight rates, refrigeration charges and even of tariff—vital as these are—would pale into insignificance. The cost of growing a box of oranges and lemons would be so greatly enhanced that any margin of profit now existing would in thousands of cases be immediately wiped out and replaced by heavy losses, creating conditions which would sound the death knell of many thousand acres of land as producers of citrus fruits.

The fact that the Citrus Protective League is moving to lay before all interested in the industry what the enactment of this law would mean to the citrus fruit industry—to growers and labor employed alike, that Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade are taking steps to enlighten the voter of the ultimate effect it must have upon land values, labor used, unemployment certain to result and the menace it holds for fruit growing of all kinds throughout the State; that wherever the facts are fully understood and appreciated by fruit growers, packers, shippers and the labor they employ great alarm is felt as to the ultimate outcome and effect upon their labor and industry; all but serve to emphasize the extreme gravity of legislation of this character and of this bill in particular.

No agricultural or horticultural industry of like importance in any part of the world begins to pay such high wages to the labor it uses as does the California citrus fruit industry; no class of agricultural labor enjoys a higher standard of living than those employed therein, and this in marked contrast to the wages paid and the standard of living of labor employed in other countries in the production of competing fruit.

CHEAP FOREIGN LABOR.

In Spain field help is paid 20 cents a day, skilled packing-house help up to 60 cents a day, lads helping, 15 to 20 cents per day; food consisting of the barest necessities—cured codfish being a staple item of diet—and living quarters are very primitive.

In Sicily labor is on about the same basis as in Spain, running from 20 to 60 cents a day, as against $1.75 to $3 a day in California. Spain and California are the world's greatest orange producers; Sicily and California the two greatest lemon producers. The higher labor cost in California is readily apparent, even under existing conditions, the proposed new act would increase this cost over 50 per cent. in the production of a box of oranges or lemons.

C. C. Teague, manager of the Limoneira Lemon Company of Santa Paula states that based on the company's 1913 pay roll the act if in effect would have increased the labor cost on every box of lemons they shipped between 25 and 30 cents; and the increase in the case of oranges would be in about the same proportion. Not only this, but such an act would without question fail to raise the standard of labor employed, a fact which experience in other countries has fully demonstrated.

It costs 50 cents a box to produce a box of oranges in Florida, in Spain 30 cents, and in California 85 cents. In Florida 30 cents of this is for labor and in California 40 cents, while in Spain the fruit is largely grown by peasant farmers who rent the orchards and carry on the work with the assistance of their women and children, thus reducing labor cost to a minimum of but a few cents a box. The California product thus has the competition of lower labor to meet,

PURPOSES TO PROVE MAN'S ANCESTORS APES.

Distinguished European Scientist, Now Los Angeles Visitor, Will Soon Go to Congo and Undertake to Secure Hybrid "Missing Link"—Scientists Here Suggest Experiment Station on Southern California Island.

AWAITING completion of plans which will take him into the heart of the Congo in Africa, to experiment with anthropoid apes in solving the problem of the origin of man, Prof. H. M. Bernelot-Moens, one of the greatest living naturalists of Europe, specialist in embryology, paleontology and anthropology, is making his home with friends, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. W. R. Bruns of Rampart street at Wilshire, in this city.

The creation of a new kind of being, one that will bridge the chasm between the monkey tribe and the human, and one that will solve the problems of Darwin, Haeckel and other noted scientists of the century, is the great object in life of Prof. Bernelot-Moens, who is a native of Holland, but who has traveled and studied in all parts of the world and written a number of highly important works on subjects too deep for the ordinary reader.

This distinguished scientist headed at one time an expedition into Nubia, backed by the French government, and on this made exhaustive studies of anthropoidal apes, as well as natives om that African country. For a time he was connected with the Pasteur Institute of Paris and has received numerous decorations for work accomplished. His next expedition will be backed by the Prince of Monaco, the French government and a number of scientists.

In the problem of human development, Prof. Bernelot-Moens has proved experimentally that birth can be brought about independently of the mating of the sexes, by purely artificial and mechanical means. In this manner, animals not only of the same species, but those of different, nearly related species have been crossed, thus producing a hybrid.

It is the absolute belief of Prof. Bernelot-Moens that in this manner the lower orders of man—for example, the pygmy of the Congo—may be crossed with the man-like apes of which there are four species, the gorilla, champanzee, orang-outang and gibbon. "These apes in their anatomical structure have a greater resemblance to man than other monkeys, their several physiology is identical with that of the human and their blood is also of the same formation," said the professor.

WHAT KIND OF OFFSPRING?

"The resulting offspring of the anthropoid ape and man should resemble the creatures, remains of which have been found in the Neander Valley near Dusseldorf; in Spy near Namur; in a cavern of La Chapelle-aux-Saints in Correze; at Krapina in Croatia and in the neighborhood of Heidelberg. These men of thousands of years ago give proof that there lived men intermediate between the ape and the present human."

Prof. Bernelot-Moens attaches much importance to various throwbacks, or examples of atavism, in which human beings have resembled ancestors of centuries back and nearly related to brute beings. He cites a number of well-known examples which are important in all paleontological studies and which would have great bearing on the question if it proves possible to carry out his proposed experiments in the Congo.

"It would be impossible to do this in other parts of the world for the reason that all anthropoid apes ever

Wholesale Raid.

MILK BOTTLES YIELD HARVEST TO THIEVES.

DWELLERS in forty apartment-houses in the westside district, had no milk nor cream yesterday, and two young men with an automobile had much change. They had made the most thorough raid on milk bottles that the city has ever known.

It is the custom in apartment-houses to drop coins in the milk bottles rather than handle tickets. The bottles are then placed in a cabinet to await the arrival of the milkman. It is a strictly cash proposition.

Two young men whose description is very vague were informed of this practice. Last night they secured an automobile and between 11 o'clock at night and 3 o'clock in the morning, they made depradations on forty apartment-houses. In each place they realized from $1.50 to $4, as many persons were purchasing milk and cream liberally for the Saturday cooking.

The first discovery of the raid was in the Mayhew apartments. Before the report was concluded, a similar report came from the Westside apartments, and almost immediately the proprietor of the Menlo apartments gave voice to woes.

The police took hold and a quick canvass showed that more than forty places had been objects of the raid. The authorities estimate that the total of the loot secured from milk bottles exceeds $100. A watch is set for the thieves.

GLORY OF THE NAVEL ORANGE ON TABLETS.

Riverside Arranging International Celebration for Next Year on Fortieth Anniversary of Wonderful Industry Founded There in Which Two Hundred Million Dollars Is Now Invested—Remarkable Presentation.

THE plans for the celebration in Riverside in 1915 of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the Washington navel orange industry have expanded to such an extent as to give the project an aspect of national and even international importance.

There is now formally before the Department of Agriculture at Washington the matter of extending to the governments of other citrus-growing countries an official invitation to participate in the international citrus congress, a feature of the event that will leave a lasting impress on the industry.

Brazil has given assurance of its purpose to participate in the celebration in a remarkable way. A. D. Shamel, who is conducting special investigations in citrus culture for the Department of Agriculture, recently returned from a visit to the southern republic with assurances from Dr. Julius Brindau, Mayor of Bahia, that a delegation of citrus growers would be sent to the congress from that city, which supplied the trees from which the navel orange industry sprang, and which are still bearing fruit within the corporate limits of Riverside.

Dr. Seabra, Governor of the State of Bahia, and Dr. Toledo, Minister of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce, have likewise indicated their intention of taking official notice of the celebration, following the offer of co-operation unhesitatingly given by Dr. Lauro Muller, Brazil's Minister of Foreign Affairs, during a visit which gave him opportunity of inspecting the two parent trees and of learning the magnitude of the industry to which they gave birth.

TO BE FAR-REACHING.

The object of the celebration, which is the serious concept of A. D. Shamel of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, is a broad one, and one which is being recognized by other citrus-growing centers of the State as worthy of their heartiest co-operation and support.

The purpose is not only to commemorate the introduction of the greatest single variety of fruit ever developed, but to gather into permanent form the incidents and the movements which combine to make up the inspiring and fascinating history of the fruit, whose transplanting to these shores, the one place on earth where it attains perfection, seems providential rather than accidental.

The aim will be to prepare for publication, in connection with the proceedings of the citrus congress, a volume which will constitute the most important addition to the literature of the development of a single horticultural variety that has so far been written.

To make such a work of the greatest value, it is realized that it must be compiled now, while so many of the industry's pioneers are yet living. The narration of their experiences, their hardships and successes, as they may relate to the culture of the orange, will fittingly have a place in a volume which will record the papers and addresses of the foremost citrus authorities and horticultural scientists of the world, who will be sent here by their respective governments.

California's contribution to the volume will be largely in the hands of a State's committee comprising 150 of its leading citrus growers and horticultural experts.

MOTION-PICTURE DRAMA.

Tht more serious phases of the celebration will be relieved by a pageant, which will set forth in allegorical and gorgeous pictorial form the history of the introduction and development of the Washington navel orange. The possibilities of this feature have taken such a strong hold on the imagination of Chairman Robert Lee Bettner and of the committee having it in charge, that details are being worked out on a scale to insure one of the most remarkable presentations of the kind ever attempted in California.

Other citrus-growing centers of the State, which have been made acquainted with the plans for the pageant, have recognized in it an opportunity to assist in the presentation of a veritable moving-picture drama of the development of an industry to which California owes, more than to anything else, the high character of its citizenship and much of its wealth and prosperity.

The city's best literary, artistic and business talent have been marshaled for the staging of this colorful feature. The romantic history of California will be woven into the scenario of the drama, whose opening parts will picture the forbidding aspect of the desert, the primal life of savage Indian tribes, and the coming of the Spanish padres and their work in mission building.

On this groundwork will rest the features and the story of the advent of later civilizing influences—the discovery of gold, the mining period, the hospitable haciendas of the Spanish, the influx of American settlers, the introduction of the orange, the arrival of the navel trees from Brazil, their planting and development, and their bearing on the subsequent history and settlement of the State; the whole concluding with a comprehensive representation of California and the Washington navel orange in excelsis.

The details of the floats and designs are being developed and will be placed before the other citrus communities of the State with a cordial invitation to assist in working out the minutiae of the drama.

OCCASION FOR THANKSGIVING.

In the development of the plans, there has not been overlooked the appropriateness of an expression, in some form, of gratitude for the blessings that have followed in the wake of the establishment of the orange industry in the State.

The Sunday preceding the week of the celebration, which will be held at a time when the orange harvest is at its height, will be observed by the churches as a day for special thanksgiving and praise. It is believed this feature will appeal to the churches throughout the State, and that similar services will be held on this day wherever the orange industry has a foothold.

MEDICOS WIDE-AWAKE.

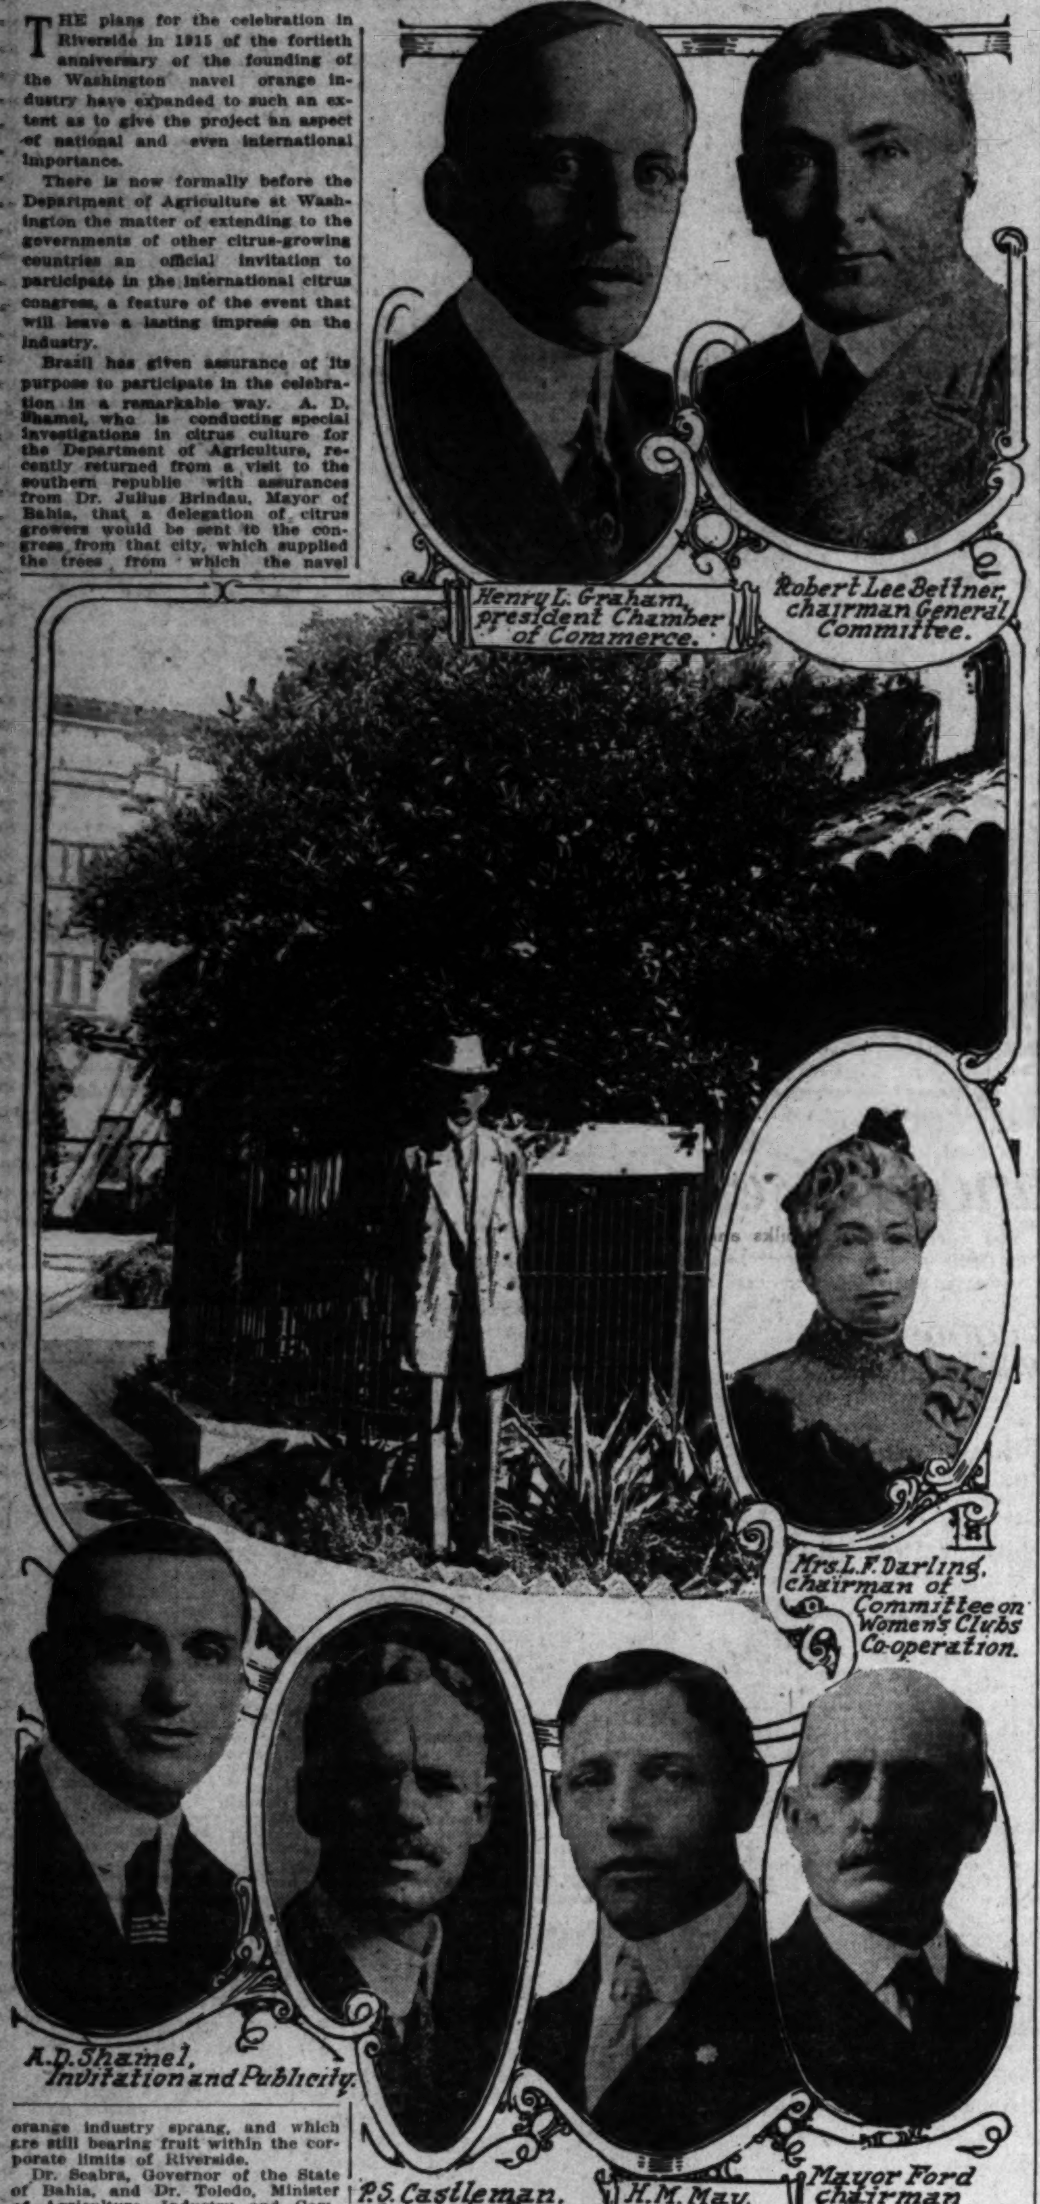
Not the least of the substantial benefits that will accrue to the State's most important fruit industry as a result of the project, will be the presentation in a concrete way of the beneficial effects of the use of oranges, and the food and medicinal value of citrus fruit and citrus products.

The committee on medical co-operation which will have charge of the collection of scientific data with respect to this matter, will see that it is prepared in a form befitting publication along with the other records of the citrus congress.

MEMORIAL FEATURES.

Permanent memorials to the industry will be in the form of tablets reciting briefly the chain of events entering into its history, and will be erected, as is fitting, in the plots where the parent trees now stand. Special recognition will be given Brazil and the government at Washington in the preparation of these memorials.

Grateful recognition of the service performed by Mrs. Luther C. Tibbetts, who planted and nourished the two trees that were destined to become the progenitors of an industry in which there is now invested upward of $200,000,000, will have expression in some form of memorial the character of which is yet to be worked out.



Henry L. Graham, president Chamber of Commerce.
Robert Lee Bettner, chairman General Committee.
Mrs. L. F. Darling, chairman of Committee on Women's Clubs Co-operation.
A. D. Shamel, Invitation and Publicity.
P. S. Castleman, chairman Pageant and Decoration Committee.
H. M. May, secretary Chamber of Commerce.
Mayor Ford chairman Committee on City Co-operation

Arranging Riverside's navel orange celebration

Next year in memory of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of that important industry. In the center is one of the parent navel orange trees located in the court of the Glenwood Msision Inn, and standing before it, Dr. Lauro Muller, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Brazil, who has given assurance of the co-operation and participation of his government in the celebration. The tree represents the basis of the project, the Minister is suggestive of the international character it has assumed.

REFLECT SPIRIT OF OPTIMISM.

OF BANK CLEARINGS OF BANK CLEARINGS IN LAST WEEK.

The spirit of optimism and prosperity, which pervaded the past week proved a decided stimulant to that barometer of financial conditions—the bank clearings, for the showing was the best in many a day. The aggregate was over $1,000,000 larger than for the same week last year, and showed an increase in daily average of over $750,000, compared with the five days of the previous week.

The month of February showed the best daily average for clearings since last May, but if the volume for the first week of this month is maintained for the remaining three, June's record will be considerably better than that of February, and consequently the best for a year.

Total clearings last week were $25,634,344, which would mean a large margin over $100,000,000 for the month, if the totals for the remaining three weeks equal that record, and a large gain over the same week last year.

The increase in the volume of clearings is proof positive that business in the city last week was more active than it has been for many weeks past. In view of the improved sentiment, as well as excellent fundamental conditions, it is believed that even greater betterment will be witnessed in the coming weeks, and a comparatively lively summer season is anticipated.

With prospects for the early settlement of the trust legislation problems, now before the Senate of the United States, and with excellent crops maturing, optimism in eastern circles is more pronounced. The wave of improvement, which is seen here appears to be quite general, which would indicate that it has a sound basis.

Owes Her Life to This Lung Medicine

Sufferers from Consumption should take the trouble to investigate what Eckman's Alterative has accomplished in restoring others to health. Read this:—

Griffith, Lake Co., Ind.

"Gentlemen:—About Sept. 10th, 1908, my mother-in-law was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, which developed into Tuberculosis. In January, when Rev. Wm. Berg, of St. Michael's Church, at Schererville, Ind., prepared her for death, he recommended that I get Eckman's Alterative, and see if it would not give her some relief. The attending physician declared she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. I am glad to say that she soon began to improve. Now she works as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick and is in good health."

When Hairy Growths Appear On Your Face

(Helps to Beauty.)

Women who realize the value of a soft, clear, hairless skin will do well to keep a small package of powdered delatone handy to use whenever the obnoxious growths appear, because with the aid of this powder the skin can be kept free from hair or fuzz.

The simplicity of this method for banishing hairs makes it easy for any woman to employ it in the privacy of her own home, and the time required to remove even a stubborn growth is less than five minutes. Enough powdered delatone and water is mixed into a paste to thickly cover the hairs and after two or three minutes it is rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This will leave the skin hairless and without spot or blemish. Buying the delatone in an original package insures its purity and strength.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER

The direct primary law is a humbug and a disgrace to California, and the people sooner or later will smash it to bits. From New York and Pennsylvania comes the gladsome news that he people are preparing to swat the eak law. The direct primary is far ore satisfactory to the politicians an a convention—witness the section of Hiram Johnson and John shleman in a back room by five Progressive bosses. The unning mate of the Progressive slate was cked at a second back-room caucus these same five designing saints. s the law stands the people will ke little interest in the primaries ecause they know the cards are acked against them. The Progresve voters have absolutely no choice they must swallow the Johnson-Eddie-Earl-Lissner dope or go fishg on primary-election day. The onvention plan had the virtue of orderly procedure and representaon by delegates on whom the presre of public opinion has again and ain been applied with beneficial sults. The direct primary law wa ected for the protection of polit l bosses and to give the ringster tighter cinch upon patronage than er before. It takes the government rectly from the people and places it the hands of the back-room bosses, places the people at the mercy of e ring. This vicious law almost events the average citizen of small eans from becoming a candidate for y office. The expense of running gauntlet of two elections is wellgh unbearable. It stands as a barer between the honest and patriotic bitions of a poor man or woman d public office. No sophistry, no d bandanna pretensions of protectg the pee-pul can eliminate this ct. A poor man or woman desirous running for office must either sell t to the corporations or meekly w to the boss. There is no alternave. That reminds us—who really cked Johnson and Eshleman ten onths before the primary election? id you, Mr. and Mrs. Progressive?

By the way, Herman Lichtenberg and Andy Francisco say that arl's chief counsel, E. A. Meserve, ill certainly become a candidate for e Republican nomination for Govrnor. Did you ever?

Gov. Johnson's charge, iterated d reiterated up and down the State, at wicked men and interests are ising a $2,000,000 slush fund to det him is based on nothing whatver, and Gov. Johnson knows it. No ch amount of money could be thered for political purposes witht leaving signs all along the route. s a matter of fact there is no conrted Republican or Democratic eft so far, with or without money, in position to Johnson as the multilicity of candidates fully attests. If effort was going forth to develop e full Republican strength there ould be visible movements to elimiate some of the candidates. With one epublican candidate before the priaries it is readily seen how much ronger the party would be; how uch better it would align after the rimaries. Several of the candidates ave found the greatest difficulty in ising funds to make their campaign, nd the hesitation of some of them fter their aspiration was well known, as due to the uncertainty of getting e wherewith to make the fight. Gov. ohnson has no such trouble to overome. He is known to have the tightst bound and most pliant machine at the State ever knew. Funds, ays and means, general assistance l are at his hand. Then, gentle r, the taxpayers of the State pay im $40,000 a year in addition to a cret service fund of limitless proortions. If you please, sir, we, the ar ones, are paying Gov. Johnn's campaign expenses. He has en on the stump drumming votes th Eshleman, his hand-picked, 10,000-a-year public servant, since nuary 5. And Johnson and Eshlean will have no opposition at the imary election. Uplifters, pooh!

ssues of the campaign, here in alifornia at least, are bound to be e Democratic policy of repealing o tolls and the new tariff. To oughtful Californians the latter is ound to come in for the most conderation. It is evident that deep ought was not indulged in durg the campaign of two years ago, this State would not have elect-d four Congressmen to vote in faor of the tariff changes that hit dictly in the solar plexus so many oducts characteristic of and pecuar to California. But there has en abundant cause for thought ce, though the new tariffs have en in force scarcely half a year.

In products peculiarly Californian re is a disastrous showing, accordg to Congressman Joe Knowland in letter to the Watchman. The imrtation of almonds has increased in months 118 per cent., amountg to 4,582,646 pounds. In the case beans, which many parts of the untry produce, but which this State akes a specialty of, importations ve increased 84 per cent., or 987,- bushels. The importation of walts has increased 79 per cent.; of ives, 62 per cent.; of lemons, 60 r cent. The lemon industry was getting upon a firm foundation, d will receive a serious setback om the Italian and South American portations. There has been a 54 r cent. increase in the importations olive oil, and 36 per cent. increase olives. It is to be borne in mind the time that this has resulted in months. It takes about that length time to get importations started. at will result when sufficient time elapsed to allow of the full workg of the new law is disconcerting think of. All Californians who are to exercise their minds logically have these things to think over tween this time and the coming of ection day. And the cost of living, h Woody was going to annihilate, still goin' up. Giddap!

y what process of reasoning the rogressive" bosses arrive at the nclusion that Gov. Johnson will be cted with the aid of Republicans o have registered as members of party is difficult to fathom. ndpipe" Lissner, advertising manr of the Outlook, the dullest magane in the world, bar none, penned other day that "half the Republins will vote for Johnson." Getting ready for carnival of States.
The picture was snapped in the Michigan booth at the big tent, where Mrs. Elsie Green was decorating with pine cones.

On April 24, 1909, a meeting of the officers of the various State societies of Southern California was held for the purpose of effecting a federation of the different organizations.

For many years there had been a number of these societies in existence. Some had lived for years, others had only been organized a few months.

It was the idea of the one who called these officers together that there might be a union or federation of these various organizations that would enable them to co-operate in a way that would be beneficial to all.

From the very first it was the plan to make the work a Southern California project, one that would be beneficial to all over Southern California, and the plan as outlined was received with hearty favor by those present at this first gathering. Judge Waldo Marvin York was made the temporary chairman, and C. H. Parsons was elected the secretary.

Committees were appointed to report at a later meeting. At this second meeting a permanent organization was effected and the officers elected.

NOTABLE RECORD.

The new federation set out to do large things and has held great banquets and picnics. One of these banquets was the largest ever held as far as records show, 2033 having sat down at once together.

Two years after organization the secretary was induced to give up his other business and devote his entire time to the federation. Headquarters were opened in the Chamber of Commerce building, and a splendid system of registration devised, whereby any one might see in a few moments who was enrolled here from any "old home town."

This was accomplished by having a separate book for each State of the Union, and pages for individual counties in the United States. The loose-leaf system enabled them to add new leaves as fast as they were needed, and still retain all the old names in the registers.

Two years later the federation was incorporated, assuming the work of the former organization, and moving the new home of the work to No. 953 West Seventh street.

From the first it had been the aim and hope of the societies that a great and splendid home might be secured for the headquarters, where all the work might be carried on in greater measure.

During the winter of 1913-14 the fine site on West Seventh street, known as the Brownsberger property, had been selected and a payment made, which enabled the federation to take possession, and begin its work in its new home.

Before the close of 1913 the last State in the Union had been organized and Alaska, Hawaii and Canada as well. Other societies in surrounding towns were included in the general work, and now there are ninety organizations included in the federation, with a constituency of half a million people.

In no other place could there be such a unique organization, on such a scale. But here, where over 90 per cent. of the people are from "somewhere," it is possible.

PLAN BIG BUILDING.

Hopes have been entertained that on the new site a great building, twelve or fourteen stories high, covering the lot, 100x245 feet, might be erected. Here would be the offices of the federation, various halls to meet the needs of the societies, a great banquet-room and an auditorium. The remainder of the building to be a big popular hotel, to which people from all States would gather because it was the home of the State societies.

Bonds were voted for this building and they were about to be placed on the market when the dullness of the financial world made it seem necessary to delay.

Hundreds of socials, picnics and reunions are held annually. Old friends are reunited and new friendships formed. Lonesome and homesick newcomers find they are not friendless or alone, and soon they are won to a loyal allegiance to the wonderful Southland, and become royal workers for the new homeland.

In this respect the State societies have a distinct field, which no other organization can cover.

Now the newest endeavor is to carry out the plans for a great carnival of State societies, where each State will have its own section, where thousands may register, and where for two weeks all may revel in the old home State remembrances. It opens tomorrow at Fiesta Park. On Saturday, June 20, the closing day, with California as our hostess, we may renew our loving loyalty to the home of our choice and adoption.

The programme for tomorrow will begin with an automobile parade through the downtown district at noon. At 2 o'clock the speaking will begin under the chairmanship of O. W. Blain. Representatives of the Ohio and Michigan State societies will talk and after several musical numbers the baby show and the races are scheduled. The Los Angeles Festival Chorus, of more than 200 voices, under Prof. E. Lebegott, and the Meyer Concert Orchestra, will open the evening entertainment at 8 o'clock. Miss Edna Eno, operatic soprano, and a Hawaiian quartette will give other musical numbers. The evening will be closed with the prize distribution.

VANDALS LOOT STORE.

Destroy Goods They Cannot Carry in Auto; Carefully Select Best Grades of Cigars.

Burglars early yesterday morning used an automobile to carry away several hundred dollars' worth of goods they stole from the store of William T. Hill, No. 3810 Sunset boulevard, and wantonly destroyed merchandise they apparently could not take with them. Sacks of sugar and other groceries were ripped open and their contents strewn about the floor.

The thieves made a careful selection from the tobacco stock, taking only the best grades of cigars. Entrance was effected by opening a rear window. Automobile tracks leading away from the building showed the bold methods employed.

The Public Service.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The amendments to the street-speaking ordinance are now in effect and speakers must keep fifty feet back from corners, and each meeting must be seventy feet away from any other meeting or speaker. This will relieve congestion at Sixth and Main streets.

The City Council has sustained the Board of Public Works in its efforts to require the Santa Fe Railroad to lower its tracks to official grade at street intersections from Central to Western avenues. It is probable a friendly suit will be institute to determine the rights of each.

The Board of Public Works will send to the Council tomorrow a recommendation that new proceedings be instituted for the opening and widening of Long Beach avenue from Washington street south.

An alleged Socialist and I.W.W. sympathizer, sued by his wife for separate maintenance, is said by her to have given her only $4 a week to run the house. Since shortly after their marriage she says he compelled her to pay the rent and to earn the money for this, and to clothe herself she went out as a nurse.

At the City Hall.

STREET GABBERS MUST BACK UP.

HAVE TO STAY FIFTY FEET FROM HIGHWAY CORNERS.

Each Meeting Must Also Be Seventy-five Feet from Other Speakers or Gatherings, and Peace of Rooming-houses Is Protected After Half Past Nine.

Los Angeles is now getting the benefits of the amendment to the street-speaking ordinance, which was passed by the Council April 24 and approved by the Mayor the following day. The most notable result is to relieve in some degree the congestion that has existed each evening at the southeast corner of Sixth and Main streets.

For many months this has been the Mecca of the street fakirs of all brands. Here, each night, have assembled crowds that listened to the harangues on religion, economics, hygiene, astrology, biology and almost every other ology and ism that can be thought of. Only half of the street space is open to public meetings, the northerly half having been included in the closed zone several months ago. The result has been that nightly a congestion has occurred on this corner that could not be relieved until 10 o'clock arrived.

The amended ordinance includes in the open zone Eighth street from Olive to Main streets. The provisions governing the location of meetings read as follows:

Sec. 5a. It shall be unlawful for any person to, in that portion of the city of Los Angeles outside of the district described in Section 4 of this ordinance, hold, conduct or address any assemblage, meeting or gathering of persons within a distance of fifty feet from any street corner, or to hold, conduct or address any assemblage, meeting or gathering of persons within a distance of seventy-five feet of any other person holding, conducting or addressing any other assemblage, meeting or gathering of persons, or to hold, conduct or address any assemblage, meeting or gathering of persons within a distance of 100 feet of any hotel, apartment-house, rooming-house or lodging-house between the hours of thirty minutes after 9 o'clock p.m. of any day and 8 o'clock a.m. of the next succeeding day.

They Want Relief.

The business houses located on Fifth street, between Olive and Grand, yesterday petitioned the Board of Public Works and the City Council to give them relief from the parking of automobiles in this block. They state that the bulk of their patronage is carriage trade and that the inability of their patrons to find stopping places for their autos in the block causes a serious curtailment of this trade.

Council Sustains Board.

The City Council has sustained the Board of Public Works in its stand requiring the Santa Fe Railroad to lower its tracks to official grade at street crossings, from Central to Western avenues.

For months the board has been endeavoring to secure the lowering of the Santa Fe tracks at these crossings. The railroad officials maintain that as their tracks were constructed before the territory became a part of the city, and the streets were put across the tracks after the territory was annexed, they cannot be legally required to lower the grade. They desire the institution of a friendly suit to determine the right of the city to compel the action it insists upon. The action of the Council in adopting the report of the Board of Public Works will pave the way for the institution of such a suit by the City Attorney.

Long Beach Avenue Opening.

In connection with the movement to require the Pacific Electric to bring to grade its tracks along Long Beach avenue and the streets crossed by its right of way on the four-track lines to Long Beach, or to construct a subway or an elevated structure in lieu thereof, the subject of opening and improving Long Beach avenue from Washington street southerly has again been brought to the attention of the Board of Public Works and it has approved the recommendation of the City Engineer and asks the City Council to again institute proceedings for such opening and widening.

The movement for this improvement was begun in November of 1905. It was again undertaken in 1909 and the various phases of the project dragged along in additional actions in the intervening years until March of 1913, when legal complications arose over the manner in which land to be condemned was to be described.

The ordinance of intention was finally published in December of last year, but on February 25 last the City Council ordered the proceedings abandoned, sustaining a minority petition on which 51,319 feet of the frontage of the district was represented, of which 19,000 feet is owned by the Pacific Electric company. The total frontage of the district was 123,715 feet and a majority protest would have required 61,858 feet.

The recommendation of the Board of Public Works that proceedings be reinstituted will go to the City Council tomorrow.

The Times is the only newspaper in Los Angeles that does not make a practice of permitting agents, newsboys and dealers to return unsold copies of its issue. Neither does it misbrand or predate its editions, or inflate its circulation by printing more copies than are actually necessary to supply its patrons.

The Times' entire circulation is practically net, and it is more genuine and superior in every respect to that of any other newspaper.

Makes Wrinkles Go "As If By Magic"

Want to banish every wrinkle—from face, neck, hands—easily, quickly, completely? Try the famous Saxolite formula. Nothing else so nearly meets every requirement. Why? Because it is correct in principle and really, truly assists Nature. Possessing remarkable astringent and tonic properties, it both tightens the skin—thus naturally smoothing out the lines—and improves capillary circulation and nerve tone—tending to strengthen loose tissue and bring about a healthy condition. Yet, powerful as the saxolite lotion is, it won't harm your skin in the least. And it's so easy to get the inexpensive ingredients at your druggist's, and so easy to mix them.

Just dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel—that's all. Bathe your face in this—immediately every wrinkle and crease are affected, even the deepest. You are perfectly astonished, and delighted, with the result. You look like you've lost years from your age!

EILERS TAKES JEWELRY.

So anxious is the Eilers Music Company to close out every single piano in their stock that not only are old pianos taken in exchange for these new ones now on sale, but also jewelry, and other forms of personal property. The jewelry turned in during this sale, it is said, would almost stock a small jewelry store.

Owing to the absolute necessity of selling every piano now in our store without delay, we will gladly accept personal property in exchange for the instruments, and will continue to make the same liberal allowances on property turned in towards the purchase of these pianos that we have made during the past few weeks. EILERS MUSIC COMPANY, 344 South Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

SMART TALK.

Bryan now says that plenty men rightly earn $500,000,000 whe..er they collect it or not. Let's see, what was that old stuff about labor's crown of thorns and cross of gold?

DR. COOK II.

So Roosevelt is going to Paris. We suppose the Seine is about to be discovered and explored. We would advise him not to start anything so original in Spain.

DON'T KNOW.

"What are the politics of your Congressman Bilk Ent?" asked a visitor to Washington of Congressman Kahn. "I don't know," replied the satirical Julius. "I haven't seen him since luncheon."

A PRECEDENT.

While Francis Bowes Sayre was in Los Angeles his wife, who is President Wilson's second daughter, was held up by a constable in Maryland for speeding. It seems to be pretty clear who will do the driving in that family.

HEAVEN BLESS THEM.

Twenty-four bright and healthy young women have been graduated as nurses in this city during the past week. They have a blessed share in the world's work with their smiling faces and cool hands. They belong to the consecrated of the earth.

GOING SOME.

Edison has decided that a bumblebee flies because he moves his wings fast, although his body is 7000 times heavier than his wings. This sounds reasonable, but what about the bird that does considerable coasting without the ruffle of a feather or a stir of wing?

A RISKY BUSINESS.

A man has been badly hurt because he didn't escape a dynamite explosion staged in one of the local moving-picture shows. The life-insurance companies will not accept a person who makes a business of balloon ascensions or aeroplane flights. To be on the safe side they will have to include film acting.

FULLY PROTECTED.

The San Diego girl who was willed $40,000 at the age of 17 but who must wait fifty years to come into full possession, cannot be married for her money. She can neither squander it on a husband nor on clothes. She will get the interest as she goes along, and at 67 she may know what to do with the principal.

NO SALUTE.

Still those twenty-one Huertista guns have not pealed forth their salute to the American flag. But that is the Wilson way, to start a ball rolling and then run after it and bring it back. The abortive flag incident has cost this country some lives and a pretty sum of money. What for? To purchase a new brand of ridicule abroad for American foreign policy.

IT'S EVERYWHERE.

Californians are so spoiled that if they get one day of weather along with 364 days of climate they take it with bad grace. Let them remember that while they are enjoying a cool spring calculated to prepare them all for summer, the North and the East are having such extremes of heat and cold that people are perishing in the storms on one hand and dying from sunstroke and sultriness on the other.

TWO UNWORTHY PURPOSES.

The promoters of the trust-busting bill appear to have had two distinct purposes in view. One was to discourage capitalists from investment in manufacturing or commercial enterprises, or consolidating in any form, or doing anything to increase their ill-gotten gains, on pain of confiscation of property, fines, imprisonment and all sorts of shames and sorrows.

The other was to create an aristocracy of union laborers, a privileged class who should not be prevented by the anti-trust laws, or any other laws, from controlling the business of their employers by means of boycotts, strikes, picketing or any other means that Gompers and the devil might invent.

The proposed law in both particulars is a menace. Whether, if it shall be enacted, it can ever be enforced remains to be seen.

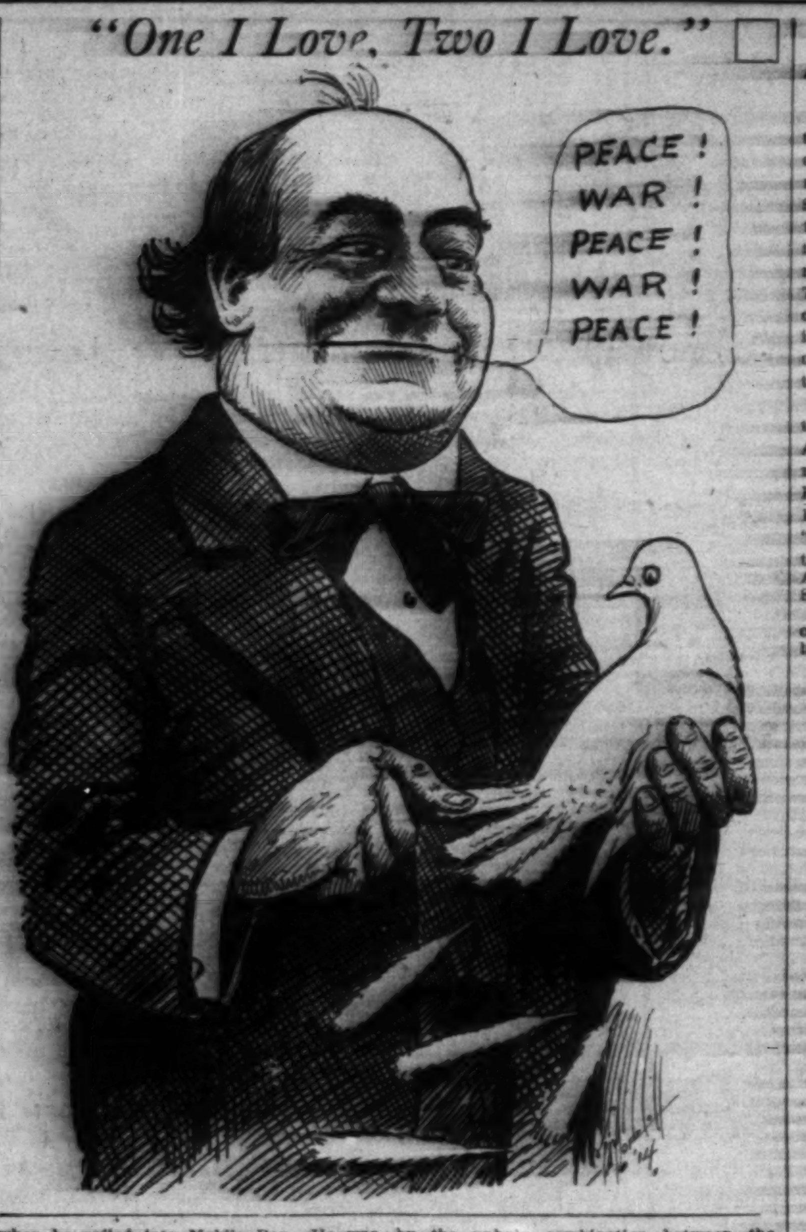
JACK AND JILL.

Bearding a monarch in his palace is an entirely different affair from bearding a lion in his lair, at least when the monarch happens to be poor, little, harmless, well-intentioned George of England. The last suffragette outrage turned out to be a rather tame performance. The incident even lacked the sardonic humor that has characterized some of the militant horse-play in "merrie" England.

For this time the saucy suffragette was more scared than the mighty monarch. She was too overcome to take advantage of her surreptitious trespassing in the palace of the King. The court, like the militant, was too paralyzed with horror to act effectively. One brave attendant summoned enough courage to back the unresisting suffragette into a secluded corridor and there to pinch her arms till they were black and blue. It takes a great man to rise the heights of so tremendous an occasion.

The old nursery rhyme of Jack and Jill is being acted every day now in the island kingdom to crowded houses. It will probably be followed by a realistic setting of Humpty-Dumpty.

"One I Love, Two I Love."



PEACE !
WAR !

WHAT IS TO BECOME OF COLORADO?

Colorado faces the most serious internal crisis that has confronted any State since the Civil War. The trouble that brought on the Civil War was of an entirely dissimilar nature, for no State, North or South, even at the height of the slavery controversy, showed itself so utterly incompetent in the management of its own affairs. Colorado has been a turbulent State for the past thirty years; it has been honeycombed with graft, principally due to combinations between politicians and union agitators; and it has been the scene of more union and strikers' outrages than any other State. The culmination seems now to have been reached in the rebellion of the unionites and the ineffectual and incompetent efforts of the Legislature to restore order. A notable article, enabling those unacquainted with Colorado's record of graft, strikes and corruption of office to learn something of the past political history of the State, appears in Part VI of this issue of The Times.

For over twenty years Colorado has been the Mecca of the agitators and the faddists. With Gov. Waite the State started on a down-grade course that has brought it to such extremity that it is being seriously suggested that Colorado be turned back into a Territory. Federal troops are now maintaining what order exists in the coal camps, and the Legislature has adjourned in the face of a request from the President that it take definite action toward establishing peace and restoring order.

When Waite went into office he seemed to have tried to put everybody who would not work on the pay roll. He encouraged every sort of a fad and "reform" that the agitators proposed, and it was through his sympathetic tolerance that the Western Federation of Miners was organized and gained the strength with which it has since been able to terrorize, with armed and sustained violence, the Centennial State at recurrent intervals of between five and ten years. It was he who, with the idea of winning the votes of the women, introduced suffrage; and with excellent judgment the women voted against him when he sought re-election.

Since his time there have been men in office who tried, and tried hard, to do their duty. But the grafting politicians were too securely intrenched, they were too actively supported by the labor unionites who were left practically free to carry out their own designs, for even an honest administration to do much effective work in cleaning up the State.

No better illustration to show how demoralized the State is, and has been for a long time, could be brought forward than the manner in which certain newspapers have thrived. One of the leading newspapers of Denver has, without any great regard for secrecy, blackmailed its way to affluence, and frequently in the midst of a campaign it has, while scarcely troubling itself to give a reason, switched from one side to the other.

So debauched has the State been by fads and political innovations that practically all of the Socialistic nostrums—such as recall of judges, initiative and referendum—have been instituted. The State Constitution has been amended, patched and crossed out until it is almost impossible to tell what the Constitution prescribes. At one time Denver, the capital, was under two forms of municipal government.

And the misfortunes have been brought upon Colorado by the faddists, the agitators and the criminal unionites, who have been left largely to do as they please, although during the Cripple Creek strike they found more than a match for them in Gen. Sherman Bell, who had them deported bodily, and so restored order. But men of Bell's mettle seem now to be lacking, and Federal troops have been called in to maintain order in the helpless State.

MYTHS AND HUMBUGS.

In the ancient pictorial geography of our childhood, the book with defaced covers and dog's-eared corners, is a drawing of the alleged maelstrom on the coast of Norway, the ocean whirlpool that sucked great ships into its depths. We beheld the vessels in the picture, circling downward with their horror-stricken crews perched on the masts and yards, and vainly crying for help.

It is only a few years since that picture has been eliminated from the geographies, and the explorers of the northern seas have reported that they sailed over the site of the alleged maelstrom and encountered never a downward suck to cheer them in their lonely journey. And the maelstrom has gone forever.

In the same book we had an account of the Great American Desert which, it was stated, stretched from the Missouri River to the Sierra Mountains and beyond, and even so well-posted a man as Daniel Webster described Oregon as a land unfit for human habitation.

Then along came the American pioneer settlers. Up the valley of the Platte they went making it opulent with the golden gleam of harvests, clothing the land with villages and cities, and boosting the Great American Desert along to the foot of the Rocky Mountains. There the Mormons and the Pike's Peak treasure-seekers clutched the Great American Desert by the nape of his neck and the seat of his pantaloons and threw him over the hills and far away and across the Salt Lake Valley and over the Sierras into the land through which the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers flow. There the Californians seized him and kicked him into the Pacific Ocean and the "Great American Desert" is no more.

For a long time it was believed that in Africa there were tribes of men whose heads grew beneath their shoulders, and the Rev. Sidney Smith in bidding good-by to a missionary bound for New Zealand expressed the fervent hope that if his parishioners ate him he would disagree with them. But cannibals were as scarce in New Zealand as in Boston.

Napoleon did not sit on the back of a bucking bronco and point his sword into a snowstorm and shout to his waiting army: "Soldiers, there are the Alps and there is Italy." But in the shelter of a comfortable house several miles from the foot of the mountains he called in his engineers, planned the construction of a road into Lombardy, and remarked: "There will be lots of loot when we get there."

Hannibal did not melt the Alps with vinegar. All the apple orchards in the world would not have provided vinegar enough for the job.

Farragut was not lashed to the mainmast when he sailed into Mobile Bay. He was not lashed anywhere. He exposed himself to the enemy's fire like the fearless commander he was, but it was in the rigging where he could see the foe.

Sheridan did make his famous ride, but he bitterly deplored the necessity of leaving the game of seven-up in which he was engaged at Winchester when the battle of Five Forks began.

Doc Cook did not nail the American flag to the North Pole. Peary exposed him, and both made successes on the lecture platform—Cook for lying about the North Pole and Peary for exposing the roorback.

And the latest gas-bag explosion or series of explosions is with respect to our prize humbug, our Big Bull Moose. He did not collect $3000 from Argentina for one lecture. He did not discover a river, for the river has been laid down on Brazilian maps for a hundred years. And now comes Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who is high authority, and says that the colonel did not lead the charge at San Juan Hill and was not anywhere on the firing line during the Spanish War.

The next thing we shall hear will be that Holy Hiram did not save the State of California millions of dollars by his able maladministration of the gubernatorial office, and that Toopious once turned over the rebates on a carload of oranges to the orchardist who was entitled to the money.

THE ALIGNMENT OF PARTIES.

There are 435 members of Congress—291 Democrats and 144 Republicans. Eleven Southern States—Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Texas—send ninety-one Democrats and not a single Republican. Five Southern States—Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia—send forty-three Democrats and nine Republicans. Three Eastern States—New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania—send sixty-two Democrats and twenty-eight Republicans. Three Middle West States—Illinois, Indiana and Ohio—send fifty-two Democrats and ten Republicans. The six New England States send fifteen Democrats and eleven Republicans. Three Northwestern States—Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin—send six Democrats and twenty-seven Republicans. Six trans-Mississippi States—Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Oklahoma—send seventeen Democrats and twenty-two Republicans. The three Pacific States send three Democrats and sixteen Republicans, and the eight Intermountain States—Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico and Wyoming—send eight Democrats and six Republicans.

Sixteen Southern States, three Middle States and three Middle Western States hold a majority of Congress. The great cities are in the Middle and Middle Western States. The Solid South and Solid Slums control legislation. The eleven Pacific and Intermountain States, with twenty-two Republicans and eleven Democrats, make a better showing than the six New England states with fifteen Democrats and only eleven Republicans. Connecticut, Indiana and Colorado enjoy the bad eminence among Northern States of sending unbroken Democratic delegations, and next to these come New Jersey with eleven Democrats to one Republican, Ohio with nineteen Democrats to three Republicans, and Illinois with twenty Democrats to seven Republicans.

The Southern State delegations, with the thirteen Tammany members from the lower wards of New York City, constitute a majority of the Democratic party in Congress. They control the Democratic caucus, and the Democratic caucus—subject to the dictation of President Wilson—controls the Federal legislation of the country.

This combination of Confederate majahs with Five Points has worked great mischief to the industries of the country with its tariff bill. They threaten more mischief with the trust-busting bill, which would enable Gompers and his gang to blackmail capital, and they menace the Pacific Coast States with a loss of millions annually extracted by the unholy combination between the transcontinental railroads and the British Foreign Office.

But there will come another day, and it will come on the 3rd day of next November. New England voters will not again invite dismantling of their factories by sending eleven Democrats to Congress to fill places previously occupied by Republicans, and the Middle and Middle Western States will not, in sixty-five districts, repeat the experiment of electing Democrats by Republican division. There will be three Democrats in California and eight from the Intermountain States whose votes for free sugar, free wool, free lumber and free cattle will consign to the seclusion from politics that private life grants. There are signs also that the political solidarity of the South may be broken by the election of anti-administration Congressmen. The rebellion of the Louisianans on the sugar schedule of Underwood, and Clark and Vardaman and others on the Panama tolls bill threaten southern Democracy with disruption.

On the whole the outlook for a general repudiation of Wilson and his policies is very promising.

HINDU GRIEVANCES.

Native agitators in India do not fail to use the turning-back of their fellow-countrymen from the shores of British Columbia as a weapon to rouse the people of India against British rule. The Babus, or students, are taking care that the facts in the Komagata incident are spread widely among the ignorant masses. On the strength of the story violent anti-English spirit is being stirred up.

No better text for their gospel of rebellion could have been furnished these agitators by the bitterest enemies of white sovereignty in India. After being impressed for years with their proud heritage as British subjects, the Hindus find themselves treated by their fellow-citizens across seas as the most undesirable element of alien importation; they find British doors barred against them that are open to the Chinese immigrant.

Without this added humiliation the natives of India have too many grievances, real or imaginary, capable of being exploited against their foreign masters. In another quarter the British government is adding fuel to the fire of revolt. The religious feelings, as well as the racial pride, of the Hindu, are disregarded.

By the orthodox Brahmin the cow is a sacred animal. It was the greasing of cartridges with beef fat that enabled Nana Sahib to foment the sepoy Indian mutiny. Forty thousand kine are killed now every day in India, most of this of course for the food of Mohammedans, but a considerable number to provide beef for the British army. Knowing the present unrest and agitation in India, the government were wise to cease the slaughter of cows for the army in India and to substitute a ration that does not outrage the traditions and sentiments of nearly 200,000,000 people.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

WALT MASON IN THE TIMES.

I used to say just what I thought, on every mortal theme, and life was hectic then and hot, and every day a scream. I tried to show I had no fears of any human foes; and people often pulled my ears, or else they punched my nose. But I was not dismayed, thereat, nor humbled yet, by heck! And people often jammed my hat clear down around my neck. My head was bloody, but unbowed, as said some martial toff, and every time I met a crowd they'd kick my coattails off. "A soul undaunted still I have," I often would declaim; and then I'd buy a quart of salve to spread upon my frame. In time one wearies of such strife, however bold his soul, and so, to gain a peaceful life, I canned my rigmarole. Instead of shooting off my bile at every time and place, I bought a large elastic smile, and wore it on my face. And though I still had burning thoughts, I kept the blamed things down, and no one heard the caustic shots for which I'd won renown. And now all day I dance and sing, and people like me much; my head's no longer in a sling, I do not need a crutch.

"TAKING SOUNDINGS."

A Striking Presentation of a Dangerous Trend.

The deprecation of our Constitution and the institutions of government founded on it has grown so general that a movement, which may loosely be termed Socialistic, has actually assumed proportions worthy of alarmed attention from those who believe that stability of government is the only safeguard of the republic. The arguments and sentiments of the deprecating class are calmly and lucidly set forth in the current number of the North American Review by David Jayne Hill, in an article titled "Taking Soundings."

Mr. Hill is a historian and diplomat of international prominence; he has served as Ambassador to Switzerland and to Germany, and is at present a member of the Permanent Administrative Council of the Hague Tribunal. Among his books are: "Social Influences of Christianity," "International Justice," "World Organization as Affected by the Nature of the Modern State," and several others.

The arguments made by the antagonists of our present government are summarized by Dr. Hill as follows:

"The Constitution of the United States was framed by and in the interests of a property-owning class.

"Property is rightfully the possession of society as a whole; when detained in private hands it becomes a permanent reward for a temporary service, or for no service at all.

"The pretended right to transmit property from one generation to another is not a natural right.

"Corporate properties should be valued according to their present cost of physical reproduction, and may rightly be taken by the people upon that valuation.

"The remuneration of the worker will be determined either by deeds or by needs, as may hereafter be decided; but most certainly not upon the basis of allowing him a reward according to the importance of his industrial product.

"Employers, as such, have no right to exist. The aim of the employed should be a practice that will enable workers to assume, as the return for their labor, the full control of the various industries.

"The idea of an inalienable natural rights is an erroneous eighteenth-century conception. Men have no rights, except what society concedes to them by law.

"No court should be permitted to nullify any act of the legislative body on the ground that it is unconstitutional."

Mr. Hill says: "Let it not be imagined that these are merely the sporadic expressions of wholly irresponsible persons, or the incoherent mutterings of discontented men. Some of these doctrines have been heard in sermons, some have been clipped from widely-circulated periodicals, some have been quoted from serious books, and others are recorded as a matter of solemn resolutions of influential bodies."

In answer, he takes the position that we should ever be ready to relieve suffering and poverty, but on the other hand, "we would be very untrue to the cause of humanity as well as to the cause of justice, if, in our zeal to uplift the downtrodden and to support the weak, we should sweep away the basic guarantees upon which the whole edifice of justice is erected. Loyalty to humanity lays upon us a larger duty than the immediate destruction of some single evil, however monstrous it may seem to us. To cleanse and purify the temple, we do not need to create a conflagration, for, so far as just and needed social reforms are concerned, there is probably not a single one that requires for its accomplishment any radical change in a system of government by which we have progressively exterminated so many evils."

He explains that the Constitution was not designed to protect, or unjustly effective in protecting, the property-owning classes. It merely secured the protection of property, without which security there can be no stability of government.

Concerning the hardships that will be wrought on the nation if all forms of superiority are reduced to the common level of mediocrity, Mr. Hill asks: "What is to become of superior skill or superior power to organize and manage great industries, if laws of equalization are henceforth to be substituted for equal laws . . . ? And what is to insure us against the legislation if the constitutional guarantees are swept away? What prospect have the young men of all classes, especially of the self-dependent class, if some 'imperium in imperio,' some purely voluntary and irresponsible organization within the state, is able to fill public office with its candidates and through the control of legislative power impose its will upon every form of production, distribution and consumption?"

Mr. Hill does not believe that the opposition to the Constitution is wholly, or largely, attributable to the importation of foreign blood; and quotes from a letter written by a high-school graduate in San Francisco in which it is said:

"I have no faith in either the Federal Constitution or its administrators, because neither it nor they secure me anything. Could I do so, I would leave the flag and these hypocritical institutions before another day. . . . There is naught left for me to do save secretly to arm, if yet I may, and wait the hour when a Francisco Villa shall arise on this side of the Rio Grande with the cry: 'On to Washington!'"

The seditious spirit manifested in this letter has been fostered and developed by agitators who presume to rights of forcible conquest in order to gain that which fortune or a lack of industrious application has not furnished them. Ignorance of what the Constitution really means, what it really says, and not even the faintest glimmering of the chaos that would follow its demolition, is responsible for the impassioned cry for a "Francisco Villa." The havoc that has astounded the world through the anarchy in Mexico would be insignificant compared to the bloody results that would follow the demoralization of government in the United States.

Those inclined to declare for the destruction of the Constitution and the remodeling of the republic would, perhaps, be less fervid in their opposition if their opinions were tempered with observations of the tragic crises that have inevitably followed the destruction of government in other lands—even when that destruction was brought about through altruistic motives and as the forerunner of a Utopia. Mr. Hill sums up the entire situation when he says: "To cleanse and purify the temple, we do not need to create a conflagration, for, so far as just and needed social reforms are concerned, there is probably not a single one that requires for its accomplishment any radical change in a system of government by which we have progressively exterminated so many evils."

Oh, to be a boy again!
Fresh and fair and free as then—
Freckles on your face and nose,
Bruises on your shins and toes.
What a joy
Just to be a barefoot boy!
Just to be a little tyke

Rolling corn-silks for a smoke,
Making friends with poison oak;
Just to be

Just to be a careless brat
With a 10-cent straw for hat,
And a shirt of muslin check
Minus-button at the neck;
Just to wear
Clothes for comfort—let 'em tear!

Oh, to be a boy, and swim
In the creek with Joe and Jim,
Hold your breath and take a dive
Good and long, till—sakes alive!

AN EVEN DOZEN SUMMER SCHOOLS.

CITY SUPERINTENDENT GIVES LOCATIONS AND SCOPE OF THE WORK.

Summer schools will be held in twelve of the various public elementary school districts throughout the city as well as in three of the high schools, in accordance with the plans adopted yesterday at a meeting of the Superintendent of Schools and his staff, acting in conjunction with the Finance Committee, to whom the matter had been referred by the Board of Education with power to act. The session will begin July 6 and run for six weeks.

Manual and occupational work, consisting of sloyd, cookery, sewing, millinery, gardening, nature study, pottery and basketry, will form the principal part of the course of study, but in three or four of the schools there will be ungraded rooms to help backward children, and academic work will be done in some of the others. About 155 teachers will be employed.

The summer schools will be located as follows: Macy street, Castelar street, McKinley avenue, Seventh street, Ninth street, Twenty-first avenue, Juvenile Hall, Grand avenue, Normandie, First street, Fifth street, (San Pedro,) McKinley Home, Los Angeles High School, Polytechnic High School and Gardena Agricultural High School. Playgrounds will be kept open at Amelia street, Alpine street, Belvedere, Bridge street and California street schools, and some gardening work will be done to prevent the school gardens dying from neglect.

The character of the work to be done at the various schools is as follows: Academic, Polytechnic and L. A. High, Grande avenue and McKinley avenue; occupational, Castelar, Macy, Seventh, Ninth, Twenty-first avenue, First street, Juvenile L. A. High, Grand avenue and McKinley Home. Ungraded rooms will be open at First street, Normandie avenue, Twenty-first avenue, Ninth street and Fifth street. At Agricultural High School the boys will work on the ten acres and in the dairy, the same as they would on their own farms, except that they will be under the supervision of teachers.

MAYOR-MANAGER PLAN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ALHAMBRA, June 6.—The Freeholders, who were elected to arrange a new charter for the consideration of the citizens of the city, have decided to adopt the novel plan suggested by Dr. F. E. Corey, of a Mayor-manager, term of office to be for two years, and salary to be $2000 a year. Provision has been made for four commissioners, whose term of office will be four years and salary, $500 a year. The City Clerk, it is proposed, will be the only officer to be elected by the people. In another week it is expected that the actual work of drawing up the charter will be begun.

European scientist and paleontologist, who is visiting in Los Angeles, and three distinct types of throw-backs of the human race, indicating, according to his observations, that man has descended anthropoid ape. Prof. Bernelot-Moens seeks to scientifically establish the "throw-back" and establish link between man and monkey. The atavistic humans, left to right, are Andrian Jestichew and males of European nativity, and Julia Pastrana, a Mexican dancer, who became widely known, but for her repulsive resemblance of possible millennial ancestors.

brought into captivity have died of consumption on account of the climatic change," he said. "Years would be necessary to determine the outcome of the experiments, but scientists being largely idealists, time and money do not count in the search for new truths, and once the cross has been effected, it may settle for all time the animal ancestry of man."

Prof. Bernelot-Moens was the guest of honor of the zoological section of the Los Angeles Academy of Science at the last meeting and spoke very interestingly along these lines. It was suggested that Southern California might prove just the right place for the location of a great biological station for observation of anthropoidal apes, which might live to old age in the semitropical climate. Chairman J. Z. Gilbert spoke enthusiastically of using Catalina or one of the other islands for such a place of research and the academy will be urged to take steps in the matter as soon as the summer recess is over.

Prof. Bernelot-Moens will remain here about a month before proceeding to Europe, and then to his place of research, the French Congo.

Death to Industries.

whether in this country or abroad, and as Florida can produce for 50 cents and Spain for 30 cents (or less) against 85 cents a box in California, the addition to the cost of bringing a box of oranges to maturity on the trees of about 25 cents—making a total charge against the fruit of $1.10—would be absolutely prohibitive under the average conditions met with around the orange belt.

The cheapest of labor is also found in Italy, the West Indies (Bahamas, Jamaica, Cuba, Porto Rico, etc.) Jaffa (Syria,) Japan and Portugal, which comprise the list of the principal citrus-fruit growing and exporting countries of the world outside of California, Spain and Florida.

The fact that only by the production of a superior product and by means of well organized and systematic handling and marketing can the California orange be placed into profitable consumption is clearly demonstrated by a comparison of the cost of growing, packing and transporting the crops of the world's three largest producers—California, Spain and Florida—to the New York and adjacent markets, which are as follows:

Spain—Cost of growing, 30 cents; cost from tree to boat, 40 cents; freight, 25 cents. Total, $1.

Florida—Cost of growing, 50 cents; cost from tree to car, 60 cents; freight, 65 cents. Total, $1.75.

California—Cost of growing, 85 cents; cost from tree to car, 43 cents; freight, 82 cents. Total, $2.10.

The addition at this time of further burdens to the cost of producing a box of oranges or lemons in California, when decreased tariff protection and increasing crops throughout the citrus-fruit growing countries of the world are producing the keenest of competition, would inevitably prove disastrous to the industry as a whole; for while greatly adding to the cost of production, no provision is made whereby such increased cost will be met by increased market prices for the fruit; producing conditions which would force to the wall many now dependent upon the production of citrus fruits for their living.

CONCERNS ALL GROWERS.

The final passage of this bill would, with equal force and severity, be felt by every fruit-growing industry in the State, in none of which do profits or the promise of future markets warrant such an increase in the labor cost of growing them. The apricot grower could no longer cure his fruit in competition with the world, the grape grower would be unable to produce his raisin crop, the cannery would be unable to pay enough for its material to assure profits to the grower; with the result that where orchard or vineyard went out of production there would be no other fruit crop to take its place, the land could no longer be farmed intensively and the labor used would be reduced to a minimum.

A trip around the citrus belt is sufficient to fully convince the most skeptical of the danger which lurks in this eight-hour-and-minimum-wage law; for grower and packer alike are beginning to realize what it would mean to them. That it would better the condition of labor in the fruit orchards of the State is a fallacy, for the grower in California has always been ready to pay the best of wages for efficient help, and as a matter of fact today pays for such the highest wages in the world. That the laborer is worthy of his hire is indeed true; but when the laborer demands a wage which would destroy the industry which employs him, he but kills the goose which lays the golden egg.

With the campaign of misrepresentation which has been waged throughout the labor world of the State, it behooves the grower and producer and all who may appreciate the conditions which the enforcement of this act would create to exert their every influence and vote toward its final defeat.

MOTHER MOURNS FOR BOY.

Disappears from Riverside Leaving His Automobile in a Ditch by the Roadside.

A mother whose heart is breaking for her boys sits mourning in her Riverside home, refusing to be comforted. The son is Alfred Thomas, whose father is Gustav Thomas. The boy left home on the night of May 26 in an automobile. The machine was found in a ditch not far from home the next morning, and since then there has been no word from him.

The condition of the mother is such that it is deemed necessary to make every effort to get word from her boy. The parents do not wish to urge him to return home against his will, but earnestly request him to make his whereabouts known, and any person recognizing him by means of the picture is requested to write to his father at Riverside. There is no known reason why he should wish to hide himself. He is 19 years of age and is thought to have worn the same shirt and cap when he left that he wears in the picture.

A MILLIONAIRE 'CELLIST.

[Town Talk, San Francisco:] I noticed Allen Hancock of Los Angeles about town last week. He is the son of the late Mme. Hancock, afterwards Mrs. Erskine Ross, and inherited from his mother an estate valued at $12,000,000, consisting largely of oil properties. It is on Hancock's property that the famous La Brea asphalt pits with their treasures of prehistoric animal skeletons are located. The work of taking out these priceless relics of the infant world is being done by scientists of the Los Angeles Academy of Sciences, to which Hancock has generously presented all the remains that have been found. He is an unusual millionaire, is Allen Hancock. Music is his passion, and he not only maintains a trio for his own delectation but also plays 'cello in the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra. Think of a man worth a dozen millions playing in a symphony orchestra! It is a refreshing thought. Hancock is an early riser, and practices on his beloved 'cello for an hour every morning before breakfast.

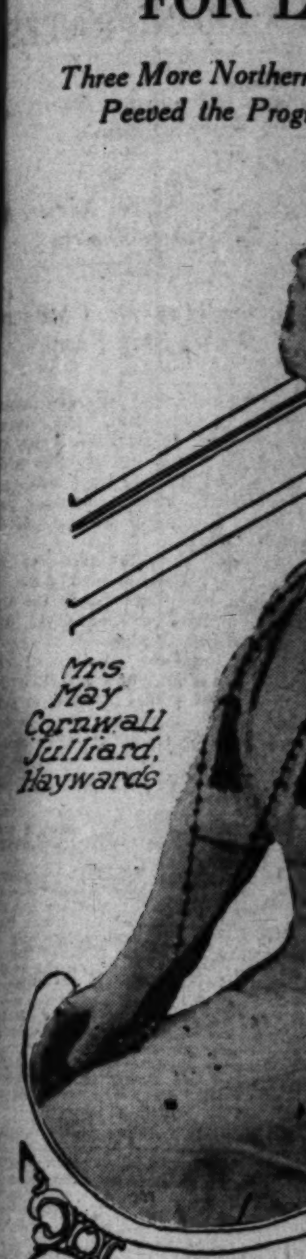
Three More Norther Peeved the Prog



Mrs. May Cornwall Julliard, Haywards

INTEREST in the proposal of pr nent clubwomen to place a wo candidate for Lieutenant-Gover in the field on the Republican ti is rapidly spreading. Among eligibles, Helen K. Williams of Francisco 's in the lead thus far, she will have rivals. Mrs. Lo White and Mrs. Lowenberg of Francisco have been put forward their friends; and now three names are brought out by those terested in the movement—Mrs. F. Jones of Oroville, president of northern Federation of Wome Clubs; Mrs. G. W. McCoy of Sac mento, and Mrs. May Cornwall Ju lard of Haywards.

The possibility of a woman can date for Lieutenant-Governor has stirred up any considerable oppo tion in any but Progressive ranks. T Democrats have many able wome Mary Foy in Los Angeles, Mary Ga adge in San Francisco, Mary Fa brothers in San Francisco, for stance, and they might themselv make a fine showing with a woma candidate for Lieutenant-Governo The Prohibitionists, who, by the wa are doing some real fine work in cam paigning, have practically pledge themselves to a woman for Lieutenan Governor.

But the possibility of John Eshle man having a woman for a opponent is almost more than Meye Lissner can bear. He feels tha John's dignity should not have tha additional strain. So in all th Progressive organs we see the pla ridiculed, as much as said organs dar ridicule it, and this is not surprising For the backbone of the party, his ex cellency, Hiram, not only consistently and persistently refused to do anythin that could in any way aid women in their fight for citizenship, but passed the word to Milton U'Ren to do what he could to defeat it. Naturally, one expects the Progressives to feel peevish over the prospect of a woman for Lieutenant-Governor. Hiram cracks the whip and the Progressives—all there are left—jump. Hiram did not want to see women enfranchised; certainly it annoys Lissner to hear about the possibility of a woman Lieutenant-Governor, or the possibility of a woman candidate for that office.

The following objections have been advanced by some of those opposed to a woman Lieutenant-Governor:

(1.) A woman in that office would "take programme."

(2.) A woman would not be equal to selecting committees.

(3.) No woman is sufficiently educated politically for the office.

(4.) No woman is sufficiently well trained in parliamentary usage to discharge the duties of that office.

First let us examine objection No. 1. One of the very first qualifications for the office of Lieutenant-Governor is an ability to "take programme"—the right programme. Any one attending State federation meetings of the women's clubs and watching certain shrewd politicians trying to "slip something over for indorsement," and observing how certain ones have invariably fared, knows just how much force this objection has. Bear witness the last meeting at Riverside. Bear witness how a certain Los Angeles woman's club refused to change its non-partisan character not long ago. Does any one making that objection doubt for one moment that John Eshelman has ever failed, would ever fail to "take programme" from Hiram Johnson? Is there an appointee of Hiram Johnson, a Progressive now in an elective office, who fails to "take programme" from Hiram Johnson?

Indeed, it is the proud boast of one certain appointee of Hiram Johnson on a State board that he "takes programme from Johnson" and when he can't he will resign. He told me so himself. I have facts to show that the programme in question is neither humane, nor just, nor consistent with the wishes of a majority of the people.

So the objection that a woman might "take programme" can not be advanced, as a reason why she should not be elected to office. For the same

Women Candidates.

FOR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

Three More Northern Women Added to the List of Eligibles — No Proposition Has Peeved the Progressives Like This—Lissner and U'Ren Working Against It.

BY AGNES THURNAU.

Mrs May Cornwall Julliard, Haywards
Mrs. A.F. Jones, Oroville.

New eligibles for Lieutenant-Governor.

Oroville leader of woman's clubdom and San Francisco woman, who have been brought out by the women interested in the movement.

INTEREST in the proposal of prominent clubwomen to place a woman candidate for Lieutenant-Governor in the field on the Republican ticket is rapidly spreading. Among the eligibles, Helen K. Williams of San Francisco is in the lead thus far, but she will have rivals. Mrs. Lovell White and Mrs. Lowenberg of San Francisco have been put forward by their friends; and now three new names are brought out by those interested in the movement—Mrs. A. F. Jones of Oroville, president of the Northern Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. G. W. McCoy of Sacramento, and Mrs. May Cornwall Julliard of Haywards.

The possibility of a woman candidate for Lieutenant-Governor has not stirred up any considerable opposition in any but Progressive ranks. The Democrats have many able women, Mary Foy in Los Angeles, Mary Gamage in San Francisco, Mary Fairbrother in San Francisco, for instance, and they might themselves make a fine showing with a woman candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. The Prohibitionists, who, by the way, are doing some real fine work in campaigning, have practically pledged themselves to a woman for Lieutenant-Governor.

But the possibility of John Eshleman having a woman for an opponent is almost more than Meyer Lissner can bear. He feels that John's dignity should not have that additional strain. (2.) A woman would not be equal to selecting committees.

(4.) No woman is sufficiently well trained in parliamentary usage to discharge the duties of that office.

First let us examine objection No. 1. One of the very first qualifications for the office of Lieutenant-Governor is an ability to "take programme"—the right programme. Any one attending State federation meetings of the women's clubs and watching certain shrewd politicians trying to "slip something over for indorsement," and observing how certain ones have invariably fared, knows just how much weight this objection has. Bear witness the last meeting at Riverside. Bear witness how a certain Los Angeles woman's club refused to change its non-partisan character not long ago. Does any one making that objection doubt for one moment that John Eshelman has ever failed, would ever fail to "take programme" from Hiram Johnson? Is there an appointee of Hiram Johnson, a Progressive now in an elective office, who fails to "take programme" from Hiram Johnson?

Indeed, it is the proud boast of one appointee of Hiram Johnson on a State board that he "takes programme from Johnson" and when he can't he will resign. He told me so himself. I have facts to show that the programme in question is neither wise nor just, nor consistent with the wishes of a majority of the people.

The objection that a woman would "take programme" can not be advanced as a reason why she should not be elected to office. For the same is true of men. Indeed, we have had men Lieutenant-Governors whose records for "taking programme" of the wrong kind are the basis for a wholesome fear of anp official with that possibility.

(2.) A woman would not be equal to selecting committees. This objection is a reflection on the intellectual status and the qualifications for citizenship of the womanhood of California. Any woman strong enough to make the primaries would undoubtedly have enough sense to select all members of committees which she would be called upon to select. It is a fact that the men who have held high office have not scorned conference with their fellows, nor refused to be guided occasionally by their advice. It is only reasonable to expect that the same course would be pursued by a woman in the same position, if she found it necessary.

(3.) No woman is sufficiently educated politically for the office. Not only are there many women in the State of California sufficiently educated politically to discharge with great credit the duties of Lieutenant-Governor, there are at least half a score of women within my personal acquaintance, which is not wide nor extraordinary, who, if elected Governor of California, would be fully competent to give the State a sane, safe and businesslike administration. In political intrigue women are not, of course, so well educated as men. That comes with long training. In unquestionable ability the women of California rank equally with the men. The women I have referred to have records that fully justify my statement. When a political education is taken to mean ability and inclination for intrigue and trickery, or the experience of long use of both as political weapons, objection No. 3 against a woman Lieutenant-Governor stands. If taken to mean fine judgment, ability to draw correct conclusions from certain arguments, intellectual grasp of the duties of the office, personal integrity to discharge these duties, strength of character to stand firm on all questions of right, the objection will not hold.

(4.) No woman is sufficiently well trained in parliamentary usage to discharge the duties of the office. This is an objection that is so easily overthrown that it seems unworthy of consideration. However, since certain Bull-Moose country newspapers have advanced it, let us see what there is in it. Two of the finest parliamentarians in the State of California are women. If any one of those opposed to a woman for this office had ever listened to Annie Little Barry in a State federation meeting of the Women's Clubs of California, and watched her masterly disposition of the confusing points arising, he or she would not make this particular objection. Of course, a State federation club meeting is not the State Senate, but the fine points of parliamentary usage involved are identical. Mary Fairbrother knows as much about parliamentary law as any man in the United States. Of course, she does not want to be a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, for she has her hands full as president of the James D. Phelan State League. But when any Bull Moose editor makes the objection that no woman knows enough about parliamentary law to discharge the duties of the office of Lieutenant-Governor, he does not know either Annie Little Barry nor Mary Fairbrother.

Also he has never seen Mrs. May Cornwall-Julliard in action in a political caucus or club meeting. Or he has never examined the respective works on parliamentary usage written by Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, Mrs. E. S. Tracy and Mrs. M. C. White. Or else he says what he knows is not true.

The objections are weak-kneed.

Mrs. May Cornwall-Julliard is a complete refutation of every one of them. And her long and splendid career as clubwoman, public welfare worker, financial operator, promoter of public enterprise, fighter for the enfranchisement of women, her shrewdness as a business woman, her ability as a politician and her magnificent part in the rebuilding of San Francisco are all matters of public record. None of the men now aspiring to the honor of election to the Lieutenant-Governorship have records superior to Mrs. Julliard's. She has been mentioned as a possible candidate. Her candidacy would be a potent factor for the victory of her party.

Mrs. A. F. Jones, president of the northern district, Federation of Women's Clubs, wife of Maj. A. F. Jones of Oroville, is also a complete refutation of every possible objection to a woman for Lieutenant-Governor. She is popular in both north and south and should she get into the fight for the Lieutenant-Governorship of California she would give her opponents a hard race.

Mrs. G. W. McCoy of Sacramento, an aggressive Republican, an ardent Taft supporter and a stand-pat party woman, would make a formidable rival should she cast her millinery into the political arena. Mrs. McCoy's familiarity with political tactics and her practical demonstration of her knowledge along this line during the several years' campaign for woman suffrage in this State, her remarkable grasp of public affairs, her sterling worth as a woman, her splendid character as a public-spirited citizen, her leadership as a clubwoman and her ability as a campaigner and a speaker place her on an equality with any man in the State as to fitness for the office of Lieutenant-Governor. Mrs. McCoy's friends are all willing to back her strong should she decide to enter the race.

Helen K. Williams declines to state whether she would become a candidate or not, but it is understood that she is being urged by friends to formally announce her candidacy, and has already done a little reconnoitering.

Mrs. Eliza P. Otis Crocker Succumbs While Traveling Abroad. Well Known in Cleveland, O.

Information from Athens, Greece, has been received in Los Angeles telling of the death of Eliza P. Otis Crocker, who was well known in Cleveland, O., where her life was spent. She was related to the family of Gen. H. G. Otis, and was traveling abroad at the time of the illness which came with fatal results. As evidence of the high esteem in which Mrs. Crocker was held, floral tributes were provided for at the funeral by friends in both England and America, as well as many Greek and English residents at Athens.

Bread War.

skies are overcast and picnic parties are few.

Also, the traffic manager keeps an eye on entertainments, where large quantities of bread will be demanded. He is also on hand when tramp steamers arrive at this harbor, for the provisioning of these may afford unanticipated profits.

OUTLOOK GOOD.

Last year the baking concerns did little advertising here. Now they are doing much. They are doing it both because there is a bread war on and because the outlook in their line is good.

"Southern California is growing," said the manager of a large baking concern yesterday. "This means an increasing demand for bread. But, to get down to cases, the baking field has never been too assiduously cultivated here. We have acepted what business came our way and it was plenty. But why accept a half-loaf when we can get a whole one?"

But the baking business is all finances. There is real striving to perfect the product, also attention to the devising of fetching forms for the loaves. This latter, however, is a sort of thankless pastime, for the reason that the rectangular loaf not only packs better than a loaf of any other form, but is also less susceptible of mishandling in baking. In other words, our mothers found the ideal form for the loaf. French bread and others, of course, depart from the rectangular, but bakers tell one that this is because they must be differentiated for sale purposes from the wheaten loaf of long-approved compounding.

FESTIVAL CHORUS REHEARSAL.

Musical Director Lebegott of the Festival Chorus has called a special rehearsal of the members of the chorus at Moose Hall this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Festival Chorus will appear at the Federated State Musical Carnival five evenings this week.

Political Watch Tower.

cording to the blue book published this year, Roosevelt and Johnson led Wilson and Marshall by just seventy-four votes in this State. And 300,000 Republican voters who were disfranchised by the skulduggery tactics of the Johnson-Lissner-Earl machine remained at home and did not vote. But they're coming to the polls this year, Father Time, 300,000 strong, each one wtih a meat ax for the pests and fakers who have nearly ruined this glorious State. All this buncombe aobut Republicans voting for Johnson, the man who backstabbed the Republican party that made him, is rot of the worst sort. It is moonshine, pure and simple. Does anyone for a moment imagine that if the "Progressives" had registered nearly three times more voters than the Republicans, they would concede that a Republican Governor could be elected. Certainly not. If "Leadpipe" Lissner, Rebater Earl and Guy Eddie, the three graces most active in circulating the report that Republicans are going to betray their party, honestly believe that they are telling the truth, let them go to the registration bureau at the Courthouse any day and ask the men and women who register as Republicans if they are going to vote for Johnson. I tell you, Republicans glory in the fact that they are Republicans this year, and I have yet to find one registered as a Republican who is not going to vote the real Republican ticket.

If there is any such animal extant, I will consider it a special favor if he will write and give me his reasons for registering as a Republican and voting for the party's most vicious enemy. This is a Republican year and all the bullunkem of the Johnson-Lissner-Eddie outfit will avail not.

Latest registration returns from Los Angeles city and county: Republicans, 89,345; "Progressives," 47,456; Democrats, 40,456.

Register Republican and vote "Progressive"—yes, we will.

My Presidential ticket: Mellen and Roosevelt.

THE WATCHMAN.

MUSIC TEACHERS, ATTENTION.

It is astonishing how many music teachers are losing the wonderful opportunity which Eilers closing out sale presents. On one floor of our big establishment there have been set aside scores of handsome brand new, and very slightly used pianos, which we find appeal particularly to those of refined musical instincts and of superior musical education. There are included in this assortment: Kimballs, Hazeltons, Knabe, Steinway, A. B. Chase, Vose & Sons, Fischers, etc., and any music teacher who misses an opportunity of seeing them and hearing them compared side by side, is missing one of the greatest chances to obtain superior instruments at the prices usually charged for very inferior instruments, that has ever been presented to the discriminating musical public. So pressing is the necessity for immediately closing this store, that we have decided to allow the most liberal arrangements for payment on these highest grade instruments, and we are also taking in old styles and discontinued styles in cabinets and uprights; and making extremely big allowances when they are applied on payments towards the pianos in question. Everything must go now. EILERS MUSIC COMPANY, 344 South Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

COULD NOT REST ECZEMA ITCHED SO

On Face, Hands, Feet and Knees. Lost Most of Hair. Almost Unbearable. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed Quickly.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 152B, Ontario, Cal.—"Ten years ago eczema first made its appearance on my face in the form of a little yellowish blister on my nose. It itched and burned so I thought it was a spider bite. Since then I have been subject to attacks on the face, on my hands, feet and knees, and have lost most of a luxuriant head of hair. The eczema itched and burned so I could not rest day or night. Sometimes my eyes were swollen almost shut, then the fever would go down a little leaving ugly scars which were a long time in healing. It spread into my hair. At times it would break out on my hands and knees and the lower part of my legs. If I became a little bit too warm it would itch almost unbearably.

"I tried many treatments which did not seem able to heal it up. At last I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment which healed it up quickly and I have not had an attack since. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are restoring my hair which had all dropped out and was very gray." (Signed) Mrs. Edwin Cadd, July 12, 1913.

A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞ Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

PUBLIC MORALS BETTER TODAY.

WOMAN SOCIOLOGIST DECLARES WORLD IMPROVING.

Negro Slavery, Child Labor and White Slavery, Until Recently Considered Necessary, She Says, but Views Changed — Rejoices at Breaking of Silence on Subject.

Are the morals of the world improving? It is an old question on which the pessimists and the optimists disagree. The query is given a decided answer in the affirmative by Mrs. Mary Roberts Coolidge, college professor, clubwoman and student of the great problems of humanity, who is in the city in the interest of the California Civic League and the Redlight Abatement Campaign Committee.

Mrs. Coolidge believes that one of the most encouraging signs of the times is the disposition of women to break the "world-old conspiracy of silence" on delicate subjects and meet dark problems frankly and fearlessly.

"Certainly the world is growing better," Mrs. Coolidge said yesterday at the Hollenbeck, "because it no longer accepts certain things as evils in the belief that they cannot be altered. Less than two centuries ago the black plague, tuberculosis, smallpox and similar diseases were regarded as dispensations of God and as inevitable.

"Until quite recently, negro slavery, child labor and the social evil were regarded as necessary. The views of the public on these matters is changing rapidly.

"The morality of the world is rising, because men and women are beginning to consider the other fellow—all those who are at a disadvantage in our social order. One by one we are attacking sanitary, social and moral evils.

"For centuries certain wrong impulses have been regarded as a fixed appetite, which must be satisfied, like hunger. In our day, biology and sociology together have discovered that the old view is wrong and that these down-pulling impulses may be modified, checked, diverted, humanized.

"In Europe, where the double moral standard has prevailed for centuries, there has been quite recently a striking change in opinion and such countries as Germany, France, England and Switzerland are throwing away their established methods of dealing with the social evil.

"As men have become more highly refined, the horrors of girl slavery—an inevitable result of commercialized vice—have reached the consciences of even its patrons.

"The higher morality has begun to show itself in a world-wide movement against white slavery. Immigration officials and other Federal officers are making a concerted attack on panderers.

"Simultaneously, more thoughtful members of society saw the necessity of general education on delicate and hitherto unmentionable subjects. Finally, women broke the old conspiracy of silence and this, indeed, is an encouraging sign. During the last ten years, more leaflets and books for the dissemination of knowledge on these subjects have been distributed than in the whole previous history of the world.

"The present fight for the red light abatement law is only one of many forms of attack upon the commercialized phase of the social evil. There is not better proof, the world is growning better than that it has at last made a spirited attack on the oldest evil of humanity. The fight will not be a short one or won in our day, but it is the beginning of a movement that is lifting the world's morals to higher levels."

Mrs. Coolidge's home is at Dwight Way End, Berkeley. She is the wife of Dane Coolidge, novelist and adventurer. Her father, Prof. I. P. Roberts, was dean of the College of Agriculture at Cornell University for thirty years. She is a graduate of Cornell and Stanford Universities and for many years a professor of sociology at Wellesley and at Stanford.

Mrs. Coolidge is known in California for her book on "Chinese Immigration." Her latest book, issued last year, is entitled "Why Women Are So." For many years she has been interested in feminism, immigration and race problems, civic and settlement work.

PIONEER WINS LAND.

Old San Bernardino Mountain Hotel Man Awarded His Third Contest by Government.

John E. McFee, '49er, and one of the most picturesque characters in the San Bernardino Mountains, won a third suit for the possession of public land by a decision of Register Buren and Receiver Robinson of the local land office, yesterday. His attorney in all of his fights has been Byron T. Waters, himself an old-timer, who came across the plains with Gen. Fremont. McFee had conducted a hotel at Rapid Springs for almost a half-century.

His contest decided yesterday was against Charles P. St. Clair, involving forty acres that McFee long occupied through mistaken surveys, but that St. Clair endeavored to have included in an adjoining homestead he filed. McFee was awarded the land.

In the contest instituted by Harry T. Riddle against Carrie P. Crawford and the State of California, involving a quarter section of land north of the town of Imperial, the local land office yesterday decided in favor of Riddle. This was a contest between a homesteader and a claimant through the State. When the State selections were made the land involved in this case was unsurveyed, and the local land officials hold that State lieu land selections do not segregate unsurveyed lands, although a homesteader can settle upon and improve such lands and receive a patent for the same, after survey, if the laws are complied with. This case was one of the many arising in the Imperial Valley from the unsettled condition of surveys. The contest has been pending ever since 1907.

POSTMASTER SUED.

Charles R. Cutten, postmaster at Cutten, Kern county, and his bondsmen, Don Ritchie, William J. Woolsey and F. B. Camm were made parties defendant in an action filed yesterday in the United States District Court, to recover a judgment for $799.19, alleged to be due from Cutten to the United States. Cutten was appointed postmaster in October, 1911, and the alleged shortage of postal funds dates from September 30, 1913. The bondsmen, however, have only qualified in $500.

Unusual.

KELLERMAN IN MERMAID ROLE.

"Daughter of Neptune" Offers Something Unusual.

Capt. Peacocke Responsible for Story.

Picturesque Bermuda Scene a Photo Fantasy.

Of unusual interest to Los Angeles will be the seven-reel picture story, "Neptune's Daughter," which comes to the Mason Monday afternoon. Not only because the greatest woman swimmer in the world, Annette Kellerman, is in the title role, but also because the story was written by Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke of this city, who, not so many years ago, was one of the town characters.

The combination promises something decidedly out of the usual, Miss Kellerman, as a water nymph, being altogether fascinating, and Peacocke has been first-prize winner in many a literary and dramatic contest. It is a combination of genius that ought to have been productive of something really good.

STAGED IN BERMUDA.

It looked so good on paper, in fact, that the picture company took the author and the swimmer to Bermuda, where the story is laid, and there, among the coral strands, the picture was made, a colorful narrative in which beautiful mermaids disport, and Neptune's daughter, as mermaid and mortal, through grace of a magic shell, does some really wonderful aquatic stunts that of themselves evoke genuine admiration.

Advance predictions in this regard seem warranted, for, when all is said and done, Annette Kellerman is the premiere woman swimmer of the world. She was the first to introduce swimming feats in vaudeville, and that wonderful figure she boasts has been a standard ever since.

It goes without saying that this figure is more or less discernible in Kellerman's mermaid role, probably not curtailing the fascination of the picture in the least.

ANNETTE KELLERMAN.

Annette Kellerman is an Australian, and that country vies with Hawaii in producing the best swimmers in the world, and while today she is famed for her vaudeville and musical comedy work, and her physical perfection has been the subject of much admiration and written comment, it was as a long-distance swimmer that the girl first attracted notice.

Remarkable for her high and fancy diving, it was the long grinds and

MOTHERHOOD UNDENIABLE.

"Kindling" Holds Public Favor in Published Form and on the Stage Because of Its Supreme Good Faith in Treating With the Most Important Subject in the World.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK

SINCERITY is a wonderful thing in a play or anywhere else. A play the people will fight about or fight for is a play they will live in, and it does not have to be such a fine piece of work, at that. Let a writer be in dead earnest and he will get over better and last longer than somebody who can beat him writing, but cannot put heart-beats into his work.

Twice this week I have had "Kindling" thrown at me from startling angles and in unusual places. I never saw the play and I might not have read it except for the unusual circumstance of hearing it twice mentioned by women from whom I didn't expect it, and for reasons that proved how well they understood.

Both women live at El Centro. Their plain little cottages are in the adjoining blocks, yet neither knows the other. There is a safe gap of fifteen years of age between them. Both love music above everything in the world, and neither has a piano in her house for the same reason. There were pianos in the homes in which each of these women were born, and one of them kept hers until five years ago, in spite of the handicap of a husband.

Marion flew at me as I passed, rolled her sleeves down, for she had been hanging out a wash, fairly dragged me in the two-roomed house with its screened porch all the way around, sat down on the floor, and trilled through three new songs before she asked about my health or how I happened along that particular irrigating ditch sans coat or collar.

Then I asked about her piano, and, with a gesture not intended to be dramatic, she pointed at the High School three blocks away, and said the one word, "Kindling."

It was very simple. Her two sons were each High School age. Her folks had a little ranch in the valley and the piano and a few other sacrifices made it possible to keep the boys in school. It was starvation for everything else the woman loved, but it was glory for the mother, and there she was.

"The woman in 'Kindling' stole to get her baby born right," she said. "I never had it put up to me like that, but I think I could steal to keep my boys going."

She got down their photographs and shed a foolish tear or two over them, but they were tears of pure delight. It wasn't hard—the heat and solitude—it was the best fun she ever had.

It was the mother and not the woman that Jim and I promised to accompany the next night to a class play to see what actors John and Horace really were. They would not have to be her boys to make them worth all they are costing her. The women who live in hotels with nothing to do but diet themselves to get plump or to get slender, who spend vast sums on complexion, and who quarrel with their maids about Fido's bath, may not understand.

In the next block I found Janet, whose yellow hair and blue eyes are vital, and not washed out. Janet was humming and so was her sewing machine. Her pretty cheeks were flushed with genuine excitement, as she held up some quite indescribable filmy things. "It's my third today," she said, "and there are two more coming. That will be $7 for today."

"You're a wonder, Janet," I said with conviction. "How do you do it?" Her answer took my breath. It was the same word I had heard not an hour before. "Kindling," she chortled with her mouth full of basting threads as she fumbled for her thimble.

I was on the point of exclaiming "rats" with much emphasis, when bedlam broke loose in the next room. A door flew open and William, aged 3, and disguised as a naked Cupid, appeared with water dripping from his tow head and satin skin.

"William," shouted his pretty mamma in pink confusion.

"Charlie splashed me against the faucet," Cupid complained indignantly.

"Get back into the tub this instant or I will put you both to bed," Janet commanded sternly, and the shouts from the bathroom made conversation on the premises impossible for two or three riotous moments.

"They're a trial, but they are darlings," said Janet. "I wonder if there is anything a woman would not do for her kiddies?

"I think Maggie Schultz is right. Her baby could not be born in that hell hole of a New York tenement without a chance for a breath of air. I know I would fight or steal for mine, and I have done everything else for them.

"This stuff about the State raising babies is crazy. After we have brought them we have a right to keep them. Maybe we can't do it as well as the State, but we do what we can with more love. Imagine William without his 'muvver!'

"Last night Charlie came to me deeply troubled. 'My toe hurts,' he said. 'It's this one,' and he laid down on the floor and held it up to be kissed, dirt and all. 'Maybe I will die,' he told me, 'and when you bees dead they put you in a hole in the ground and you bees an angel and you do not get any lunch in heaven.'

"Now, what would the State do about that," Janet wanted to know, and I couldn't tell her, never having been a State institution for orphans myself.

Janet waved that unspeakable garment at me again with triumph in her eyes and something else.

"It is for a girl across the line," she said. "All five of them are, and three of them have a baby somewhere that they cry about to themselves when the lights finally go out and hell is asleep. It wouldn't be any worse if they stole, would it? Only they wouldn't get any pay in jail. They are dead while they are alive over there, but they are paid and their babies live. I guess men do not understand."

I guessed so, too, and I dug up a copy of "Kindling" to see what it was all about.

Most of you have seen it. We have it at the Burbank. They had it at New York first. Margaret Illington was the original Maggie Schultz. While undoubtedly possessed of many of the requirements of the emotional actress, I have always thought she lacked resilliance, and I missed something in her "Within the Law," a play I didn't like anyhow.

"Kindling" had a peculiar start. It was written by Charles Kenyon in 1911. He was then on the San Francisco Examiner, and had written nothing else except an indifferent one-act skit.

Edward J. Bowes put it on at Daly's Theater the same week that Nazimova and Ethel Barrymore were presenting new plays, and it naturally got little attention from the critics of the public. They were on the point of taking it off as a failure, when Clayton Hamilton and two other writers happened to see it and took it up. They managed to get thirty other novelists and playwrights to take a chance at it, and all of them wrote the newspapers letters about it. The result was that enough interest was aroused to send it to Chicago under the protection of the Drama League center there, and the thing ran for fifty weeks in different cities, made lots of money, and created a deep impression as well as a sensation.

Now that I have read it, I can't say much for it excepting that it does touch life at a fundamental point and that it is treated with vast good faith.

Heine and Maggie Schultz lived downstairs in a vile tenement. Above them is Mrs. Gates, an honest Irish washerwoman, and her good-for-nothing son, Steve, who is a house burglar and exploiter of dance halls and a near-cadet. He has been trying to involve Maggie for a long time. Heine is of that type of honesty that novelists have always called "sterling." He is laid off on account of a strike among the long-shoremen the very day that Miss Alice, the angel of the slums, succeeds in bringing her rich aunt for a look at tenement conditions.

The old dowager owns the tenements and has her driving and unscrupulous agent with her. She offers Maggie sewing in her own home at far less than the child is worth, and Heine objects to her going. They have $27 in the bank and Mrs. Bates and Maggie have been talking of homesteading in Wyoming. Steve was born there and he is healthy.

The babies in the lodgings on both sides of Maggie Schultz are dying for the want of fresh air, and Maggie herself is carrying the child she has yearned for many years. She is about to confess this to Heine, when, in his curse on the conditions there, he swears that he would kill a child of his own at birth.

This decides Maggie on going to the rich woman's house to sew, and on furnishing Steve with a map of the house so that he can burglarize it and give her for her share enough to get to Wyoming and save her child when it is born.

After the robbery Maggie quits work abruptly and comes home to Heine. Steve has given her as her prize from the loot a diamond brooch which belonged to Miss Alice and which she pawns for $113. Heine is dazed by his wife's possession of this money, and Miss Alice appears to confirm Maggie's weak lie that it was a loan.

Steve disappears by means of the fire escape while the detectives are at Maggie's house, but the yellow scoundrel has hidden some stolen silverware in Maggie's room, and one of the detectives finds this just when Miss Alice returns wearing the brooch, which she has redeemed as a further protection to Maggie.

The old dowager and her agent appear, but the turn of the case is too much for them, and they refuse to prosecute, leaving the detectives nothing to work on.

Heine now accepts the loan from

MERMAID TOPS ORPHEUM BILL.

Odiva Has Real Sea Lions With Her.

Kellerman in Pictures Big Mason Feature.

Vaudeville and Film News; Holdover Shows.

Odiva, the queen of all swimmers, divers and water nymphs, will top the new bill opening at the Orpheum Monday matinee—a new bill it is, too, in all but one act. Odiva learned her art—and it is art in her case—in Samoa, and she holds all records for under-water work. Possessed of a fine figure, graceful as a swan, and daring beyond compare, Odiva has added to the beauty of her act this year by inserting in it a troupe of trained Pacific Coast sea lions. These intelligent animals swim in the huge glass tank in which she disports herself, and comically imitate the dives and stunts done by the little swimmer. The tank itself is set in a tropical landscape, and is glass, elevated so that every movement of the girl is in plain view. The act is the most pretentious of all the "tanks" now on tour.

Another big feature of the coming week is the first presentation here of the dramatization of the noted Irvin Cobb story, "Sergt. Bagby." This tale of a memorial day in New Orleans, with the Confederates and the Union veterans, their clash and a pretty love story that reunites not only the veterans but the boy and girl of a newer time, ran in the Saturday Evening Post and was greatly admired.

The Berrens, a couple of expert musicians, have a novelty act, wherein not only excellent music is furnished with a plentitude of humor, but at the same time a decided surprise ensues in the end. The Aerial Lloyd troupe of four is looked upon as the last cry in athletics; as casters they are especially noted, and their clean-cut work gives them a fine position in the vaudeville world.

Harry Pauli and Hazel Boyne have in "Courtship" a complete miniature musical comedy, which they will present: it is said to be effective and full of good music and entertainment, and as both are very clever persons they make it go over well. Aileen Stanley is known as "the girl with the personality," and in her song numbers and her careful dressing she holds up the title well. The Kelli Duo offer accordion numbers; they have raised this instrument in orchestral prominence, and make good on it in every detail with a repertoire from grand opera to rags. Kimberly and Mohr, in their musical skit, "Clubland," is the only holdover act.

Empress.

The Empress Theater has secured the famous sextette of European gymnasts, the Peerless Picchiani's troupe of seven, as headline attraction on the new bill, when they will again make their appearance beginning tomorrow afternoon.

This troupe of acrobats will be remembered by Empress patrons as offering one of the most sensational and daring acrobatic acts ever seen on the Empress stage.

As a special added attraction on the coming week's bill, and sharing headline honors with the Picchiani's troupe, John B. Hymer will present David Walter and company in "Salvation Sue," a stirring one-act story of the Klondyke. In the magic atmosphere of the land of the midnight sun is laid the story of "Salvation Sue." The piece will serve to introduce that brilliant actor, David Walters, and a competent cast of players. The scene is laid at the "Golden Nugget," a saloon in Valdez, Alaska, in the year 1901, and the characters are said to be finely drawn true to life. The act has been well received along the circuit, both in point and scenic investiture and the splendid character work of the performers.

Third will be William Morrisey and Dolly Hackett singing their own compositions. Morrisey is one of the best Chicago song writers, and Miss Hackett, aside from being pretty, possesses a good voice. They have a lot of splendid material in the way of songs and will probably be one of the big features on the coming week's bill.

Fourth on the new bill is "Whittier's Barefoot Boy." The artists seek to hide his identity under this attractive title, dressing him in an exact make-up of the famous Whittier poem. There is not a bird in the field that is not imitated correctly by this wonderful whistler.

Frank and Pauline Berry, who kept Empress patrons laughing for a week on their former visit here, are returning in "Do You Like Music?" Frank Berry is one of the funniest and original comedians on the American stage today. Their offering is said to be one of splendid music with just the right proportion of comedy injected to make it enjoyable. The first-run Keystone comedies will complete the new bill.

Pantages.

If there is a magic name in vaudeville that name is Fields, and Fields has never sounded better to vaudeville patrons than when combined with Lewis. This combination will head the coming week's show at Pantages, and all that is needed to cinch the certainty of joy unrestrained, is the announcement that they will travel in the same good old hansom cab. "The Misery of a Hansom Cab" is just the antidote needed for business depression, and it is a safe wager that the dollars will nimble up and roll toward the Pantages playhouse when Al and Jack appear over the horizon.

Of course a good many of them will get so nimble that they can't help following the two comedians when they proceed on their mirthful way. Fields and Lewis have been playing pied piper to the elusive dollar for many years now, and if some of the many current rumors are anywhere near believable, they have conjured a good many of them into safe keeping.

Torcat and Flor D'Alza are ingenious Italians who claim and prove that chickens have brains and know how to use them. Torcat and his Enrica Clay-Dillon in Mexico.

Grand-opera stars sometimes live tragedy quite as exciting as that portrayed by them upon the stage, as evidenced by the recent experiences of Enrica Clay-Dillon, who has just safely landed in New York after thrilling experiences in Vera Cruz.

Together with a number of artists, most of them Italian—for Miss Dillon has sung in Italy until she is almost regarded as a native—the Los Angeles prima donna had set forth for Mexico to fill a series of engagements under the direction of Sigaldi and the patronage of the Mexican government. Before they arrived at Vera Cruz, however, they were informed by wireless that the city had been taken by the Americans, but since it was then too late to turn back they were permitted to land upon their arrival.

Fighting was thick all about them, the Hotel Diligencias, at which the singers were stopping, being more than once under fire of the machine guns. Notwithstanding they had to remain there ten days while Sigaldi went up to the City of Mexico to find out whether the government would stand by the contract. Provisions were very short, the government having bought up all the foodstuffs in sight, and the little obtainable was at exorbitant prices, Miss Dillon having been charged $5 (Mexican) for a tiny steak and a little salad.

The company finally tried to get away to Mexico City and were sent on an army train with an armed escort of thirty soldiers, two machine guns and several officers. Arriving at the break in the railway where the American line left off and the Federal line began, they were escorted by two officers under a flag of truce and given into the care of the Federals. It soon became apparent that there was no hope of reaching the city, and as most of the company were by this time out of funds and it seemed hopeless to expect anything on their contract they returned to the seaport, where Miss Dillon—being an American—had the right of transportation on a refugee ship. So much time was consumed with the red tape of arranging things for her fellow artists, who with the exception of one gentleman could speak no English, that the last ship was already steaming out of the harbor before all the details had been settled. Nothing remained but to charter a tug and endeavor to overtake the vessel, and they had not enough money among them to do this, but the lucky star that seems to always prevail over Miss Dillon's destinies when all seems darkest, came to her rescue. She met a young lieutenant on the wharf whom she had known in Malta when she was singing at the Royal Theater there, and overjoyed to be of service to the charming young prima donna, he signalled the ship for one of the war launches which promptly—if somewhat unceremoniously—put them on board the vessel.

One might think that their troubles were ended with this, but the ensuing week was one of constant misery. There were 600 persons on a ship equipped to carry 200 at the outside, with all the consequent discomforts of no beds, lack of food, etc., added to which they were detained in quarantine four days on account of a groundless smallpox scare. Finally they reached New Orleans only to be confronted with the sad fact that the company being all Italians except Miss Dillon, had no right to American protection. Once more the American girl had to come to the rescue, and taking up the matter with Mr. Redfern, commissioner of immigration, prevailed upon him to return her companions with her to New York where they would have the protection and advice of their own Consul and friends.

Miss Dillon is warm in her admiration for the American army and navy, which she confesses "never meant much" to her before. The young lady is also to be congratulated upon her resourcefulness under the many trying situations thrust upon her. Had she not been a woman and gifted with a marvellous voice, she might well have followed in the footsteps of her father and become a clever lawyer.

Clyde Collison Recital.

The final musical programme of the season with Clyde Collison at the piano, will take place tomorrow evening at the First Methodist Episcopal Church at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Collison will be assisted by Audrey St. Clair Creighton, violinist; Gladys Ogburn, organist; Arthur Babcock, baritone; Purcell Mayer, violinist; Will Garroway, accompanist.

Grand Opera Burlesque.

Tomorrow evening, at the Ebell Club house, the Daughters of the King of St. James Episcopal Church will give an elaborate grand opera burlesque and minstrelsy. The proceeds are to apply to the purchase of the new church lot, a portion of which has been pledged by that society.

Record of Musical Festivals.

Most attractive is the Musical Leaders' "Annual Festival Number," given over largely—as its name implies—to the various spring music festivals throughout the country.

First in importance is the comprehensive account of the Twenty-first Cincinnati Festival, held early in May, which is the greatest enterprise of the kind in America. Other articles deal with festivals at Syracuse, where John McCormack opened the series of six concerts by famous musicians; Oberlin, Ann Arbor, Chicago-Northwestern University, Canton, O., and various other towns and cities. Birmingham, Ala., while possessing the festival spirit, has probably the briefest programme of any recorded, its season being limited to one day with a matinee and evening concert. It enjoyed, however, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra assisted by eminent soloists and a festival chorus of 176 voices.

The leader, in commenting upon what such occasions mean to a community, says that "general recognition is now accorded the fact that the spring music festivals, although they may be conducted at a small temporary loss, are, aside from their educational value, really of great importance in a business way. They mean much in advertising to a city. How much is not fully appreciated or understood, but a city's art standards tell the story of the culture of its inhabitants and mark it as a fitting place in which to live and rear children."

As a frontispiece to this special number is a striking portrait of Scotti as "Scarpia," a role which he has sung hundreds of times since he created it in 1899 at Convent Garden. This singer will in November celebrate his twenty-fifth anniversary on the opera stage, and musical journals are making much of his long-continued successes.

Schumann-Heink Back Into Opera.

Schumann-Heink, beloved of all Californians, and claimed as one of their own, would seem to have recovered completely from her recent severe attack of laryngitis, which many of her admirers feared would compel her permanent retirement from the concert stage.

At the annual musical festival at Ithaca, where she has sung on numerous occasions, the great contralto was declared to have surpassed even her own previous work, giving encore after encore in response to the spontaneous and continued applause.

For the coming season Schumann-Heink has signed with the Chicago Opera Company for the Wagnerian roles. While she will not make as much money as on the concert stage, the demands upon voice and health will not be so tremendous, and, as the artist naively says: "It will not be so bad, eh, $1000 every time I sing a part?" She is a devoted admirer of Campanini, and as it is the intention of the conductor-manager to next season present the "Ring" series complete, the engagement of Schumann-Heink as a member of the Chicago company will give wonderful weight to that organization.

Guild of Organists Examinations.

The fourth annual examination of candidates for degrees in the Southern California Chapter of the American Guild of Organists was held at St. Paul's, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. There were three candidates. The examiners were Percy Shaul-Hallet, A. J. Stamm and Ernest Douglas.

Chopin's Intimate Friend Passes.

Like a vision from out a long-forgotten past comes the news from Europe that there has just passed away at Montreux, Switzerland, an old gentleman who was an intimate friend of Chopin.

Baron Ferdinand de Turckheim knew the great composer in his youth and treasured among his possessions a number of manuscript pieces presented to him by Chopin. He celebrated his 103rd birthday March 31 by playing these for some friends. His death April 14 ended a long exile, he having been banished from France since the Prussian conquest of Alsace-Lorraine in 1871.

Freida E. Peycke.

First to run away when musical events began to quiet down, Freida E. Peycke is also the first to return home from her visit to the Atlantic seaboard, where she was heard in a number of concerts, coached with Bertha Kunz Baker during her leisure moments.

She returns with a trunk full of new planologues for this winter's consumption, and has resumed her Huntley Hotel concerts.

Schoenberg Quartette.

Some of our zealous musicians have been chagrined that the Flonzaley Quartette did not play the famous Schoenberg quartette while here.

The production of that very new and odd piece of modern composition was discussed here and it was wisely decided not to give it, owing to its extreme length and the character of the quartette, which has been described as a combination of beautiful thematic music and of a nerve-destroying operation.

E. M. Hecht, in the last issue of the Pacific Coast Musical Review, is authority for the statement that Mr. Ara, one of the Flonzaley Quartette, said at the end of the recital of the much-discussed Schoenberg composition, in San Francisco: "I would far rather play the work than have to listen to it."

The greatest merit so far universally discovered about that unusual work seems to be that the Flonzaley play it admirably.

If, however, one agrees with the new and startling theories of Schoenberg, his quartette must be accepted as a new departure in music.

It is simply a matter of theory and whether we consider harmony an essential or secondary phase of musical composition.

Schoenberg claims, and in his latest production he remains throughout consistent, that the primordial foundation of music is melody, and that the sequence of inter-related themes or melodies form music, whether or not they produce harmony, which is evidently, to him, a negligible quantity.

The consequence is that there are some beautiful passages but a great deal of ugly parts that are frankly unpleasant to the ear, in his unusually long quartette.

It is said that even the virtuosi of the Flonzaley quartette showed great physical strain, after concluding the production of Schoenberg's work, which is fifty-five minutes' duration, and that most of the select audience was nervously worn out.

Marcella Craft Honored.

Marcella Craft, the Riverside girl who has become one of the foremost grand opera stars now before the public, continues to have honors and encomiums showered upon her in Germany, where she is with the Munich Royal Opera.

Last month she gave a request performance before the Kaiser and members of the royal family, the Kaiserin being so pleased with Miss Craft's singing that she presented her with a beautiful diamond brooch. Following upon this she has been summoned again to appear before members of the German royal house, at the Ducal Theater in Brunswick, the royal patrons of which are the young daughter of the Emperor and her husband, Duke Ernst August. Miss Craft will sing the "Margarethe" and "Madame Butterfly."

A critic of note, commenting on Miss Craft's work recently, says: "She has the genius to invest a long-familiar role with such freshness and charm that even to the blase perceptions of the seasoned operagoer it wears the guise of a new creation. And the secret? It is not easily explained, for genius is always intangible. First of all she is Marcella Craft. She is an idealist, a lover of beauty in all its aspects; and being so she strives to give the highest, the most esthetic and beautiful conception that can be given and still be consistent with the character to be portrayed and the circumstances surrounding it."

Fritz Kreisler Decorated.

With much pomp and ceremony Fritz Kreisler, the great violinist, was decorated with the Legion of Honor at the Paris Conservatoire Thursday, May 7. The petition for the honor was sent to the Minister of Fine Arts last March and was signed by all the professors of the Conservatoire and all the principal artists of Paris. It was signed May 7 and that afternoon Mr. Kreisler was called from the stage of the Conservatoire, where he was playing, and in the ante-room before a distinguished gathering, the Minister of Fine Arts put the much-coveted ribbon in his buttonhole. When he returned to the stage and the audience saw that he had been decorated, he received a veritable ovation, which lasted for ten minutes. Kreisler is one of the few foreign artists who have been so decorated by the French government and it is a great tribute to his standing in the world of music.

At Merritt-Jones Hotel.

Mrs. Edna Larrimer White, a Los Angeles musician of great charm, who has won many successes, has been engaged for the summer by the new Merritt-Jones Hotel at Ocean Park for a series of drawing-room recitals. Mrs. White sings delightfully and plays her own accompaniments. Her opening programme next Monday evening will be: "Your Picture," "Slave Song," "The Reason" (words by Ella Wheeler Wilcox,) (Teresa del Riego,) "Tonight" (Napoleon Zardo,) "Love Me, Love Me Not" (Frederic Field Bullard,) "Als Die Alte Mutter" (songs my mother taught me,) (Anton Dvorak;) Scotch songs, "Heather Bell" (John Adams Loud,) "Are Ye Comin' Frae the Fair?" (Jules Jordan,) "Dearie" (Homer A. Norris,) "Lad and Lassie" (Leo Oehmler;) songs of the season, "Roses in June" (Edward Germon,) "Her Rose" (C. Whitney Coombs,) "The Sweetest Flower that Blooms" (Louis Gustave Susemihl,) "Big Lady Moon" (C. Coleridge Taylor;) popular song group, "A Little Love, a Little Kiss" ("Un Peu d'Amour") (Lao Sile'su,) "Isle d'Amour" (Leo Edwards,) "Dreaming" (Archibald Joyce.)

Dr. John P. Branch, the veteran banker of Baltimore, was unable this year to attend the Methodist General Conference in Oklahoma. He has been a delegate to every conference for fifty years, up to this time. He is nearly 90 years old, is alive to the duties of his position as president of one of the biggest banks in Baltimore, but he was not strong enough to make such a long trip. No man in the State takes a greater interest in the affairs of his church than does Dr. Branch, who is one of the most liberal of its supporters.

"Daughter of Neptune."

the speed contests which caused her to come to America, where B. F. Keith himself took an interest in her and "the tank act" came into being.

She began to swim when but 9 years old.

At 15 she won the one-mile championship of New South Wales in 32m. 29s., which was then the world's record for women. This record has since been lowered by Miss Kellerman to 28m.

Miss Kellerman has also done remarkable work in long-distance swimming and endurance tests. She often swam five to ten miles without resting. On one occasion in England, she swam twenty miles without getting out of the water. Her chief swimming feat in America was to attempt the difficult task of swimming from Boston harbor to Boston Light, a distance of fifteen miles. She was in the water six hours and twenty-three minutes, and covered all but the last half-mile of the course.

FASCINATING STORY.

Clothed with the languor of the tropics, and boasting a plot in which fact and fancy are deftly blended, "Neptune's Daughter" makes a fascinating film subject.

Bermuda forms a perfect setting for the action of the piece, and combined with Miss Kellerman's skill, affords some remarkable scenes such as high dives from perilous cliffs, feeding a cave full of fish, and battling with real sharks, hundreds of feet under water.

The story treats of the kingdom of the mortal King William, bordering on the sea, ruled over by the immortal Neptune. The latter's daughter, Annette, swears revenge on the mortals for the death of her child sister, Angela, and secures a spell by which she is changed into a mortal.

She has a series of adventures which finally wind up by her falling in love with the king. When she awakens to this love she returns to the mermaid state, fearing that she will not be true to her people. She later becomes a mortal again for a brief visit to William, and on this occasion she saves him from the hands of the conspirators, Olga and Boris.

When she seeks to return to the water, she finds that the spell has been destroyed, she is doomed to remain a mortal. But as the picture ends with her as William's queen, we imagine her fate is not so bad after all. This is the tale in brief, though it gives but little idea of the wealth of incident in the film.

MUSIC BIG FACTOR.

Not the least important part of the production is the incidental music. It has been carefully selected and follows closely the action of the story.

The music, with its cues, gives one a fairly good conception of the scope of the film:

PART I.

Dramatic Reviews

roosters are interesting enough, but pretty little Flor D'Alsa will be the attraction for many who take little interest in chickens.

An interesting and amusing act is provided by the Halkings, with mechanical shadowgraphs. Tracey, Goetz and Tracey, in the latest songs, dances and patter, are also new names.

The Gerhardt Sisters add chic, beauty and cleverness to the week's showing. The Luigi Picaro troupe have an acrobatic act something like the Arabian troupes seen here, but much more finished, much less noisy and decidedly more thrilling.

The Pantagescope and the Pantages orchestra furnish their usual contributions to the general festivity of the occasion.

Hippodrome.

Jane O'Rourk, the most popular girl who ever played at the Hippodrome, is coming back this week, bringing with her a former Los Angeles player Broderick O'Farrell. She is to present her newest, and what she herself declares to be her best sketch "The Law."

It has a problem, and a gripping one, with an unexpected climax well calculated to take an audience off its seats. It will be the headline offering on a bill of big features.

Equally important from every point of view will be another of the great Montague sketches, called "The Convict and the Warden," an offering that shows the versatile playwright at his best and will tax the abilities of his company. It is different from "The Fire Chief" and "The Great Question" but has an appeal all its own.

And if one doesn't care to call these the headliner Bothwell Browne with "The Woman in Red" is a candidate. It is another of his girly girly fantasies, heralded as more clever than either of its predecessors. If this be true it will score heavily.

Another delightful offering promises to be the De Franks with their dancing pantomime novelty, clever, picturesque and different.

Then too, there will be Dancing Collins, whose nimble toes have captured many nimble dollars, while not the least interesting feature of the new bill promises to be Hamilton, the Chinese impersonator.

The usual three sets of new motion pictures complete the programme.

Republic.

"The Temptation," a satire on local social conditions, presented in striking and sensational form by Al Watson and Company will be the headliner attraction at Bert Levey's Republic Theater next week, topping an aggregation of acts well above the ordinary. Watson is a virile actor, and in Aline Wallace his leading woman, he will have able support. The other characters in this unusual dramalet are well taken. It is the tale of a man well along in years, who first feels the call of the bright lights. Epigrams concerning the established order of things are plentiful and "The Temptation" promises to be an unusually effective headliner.

Tetsu and Adele, scenic equilibrists, furnish a sensational and spectacular turn, with elaborate scenic effects, which lift it far above the ordinary equilibral acts.

Arthur DuMais, a vaudevillian of note, will appear in songs and a clever monologue. He has been a favorite all along the Bert Levey circuit, and has a smart line of chatter and patter.

Lester and Lester come with a classy little act mostly made up of singing, talking and dancing. They have new songs, new jests, and new steps, and their turn should be more than welcome.

Chief Silver Tongue, the famous Indian baritone, is another special feature secured by Bert Levey for his house. It is a decidedly novelty to hear him sing the songs of the native Indian tongue, and he promises to be a great attraction.

Glover and Blackwell "Kentucky Redbirds" as they are billed, have a blackface turn of merit, with plenty of singing and buck and wing dancing. A novelty act is that of the Westons. They juggle, do a globe-rolling turn, and feature knife walking.

The Selig weekly with comedy motion pictures as well and an orchestral concert close the bill. The price of one dime for all seats, all performances, has caused the Republic to become one of the most popular vaudeville houses of the city.

Majestic.

"Peg O' My Heart," Laurette Taylor's perpetual New York triumph, which begins its second and last week at the Majestic Theater tonight, has enjoyed an increase of patronage daily since its opening performance last Sunday. The first week brought forth a unanimous chorus of praise from the newspaper critics and theatergoers alike, for this clean, sweet and wholesome drama is the season's best play.

Laughter and tears are so close together in this delicious story of youth that no man's eyes can discern the boundary line; rather it rests entirely upon your own senses. Peggy O'Neil, as Peg, the little Irish girl, makes the part one of extreme fascination. She is so winsome, hoydenish, lovable, sincere, tender and true; at the same time she is a veritable spitfire when aroused.

Morosco.

"A Knight for a Day," the latest and greatest of the Gaiety productions, will start in on its second big week with tomorrow night's performance at the Morosco Theater.

Daphne Pollard, the lively little comedian, and Alf Goulding, head the company and their work of the past week has been such as to attract the attention of theater patrons of Los Angeles.

In La Valera, the Spanish dancer, the Gaiety company has secured a most remarkable artist. La Valera is a dancer of the sort rarely seen anywhere but in Europe. Aside from her dancing she is possessed of a face of most wonderful charm and [illegible], and the personality that makes you love her the minute you see her. Melvin Stokes, whose wonderful dramatic tenor voice has been added to the value of this production, is another valued addition to the cast.

One would have to go a long ways to find anything better than Fred Santley's song, "Follow the Car Tracks" and Santley has other numbers as well. Diminutive Frances [illegible] is adding greatly to her popularity with her perfect numbers of the week, and Bessie Franklin has an important role.

Burbank.

The second week of "Officer 666" at the Burbank Theater will begin with this afternoon's matinee, and from the capacity audiences that viewed this rip-roaring farce during the past week the second week may prove a bigger attraction, if possible, than its first.

"Officer 666" presents that charming combination of farce and melodrama that goes to make up the sort of entertainment that best pleases an American audience. It was produced originally in New York and had a tremendous run of over a year, later winning success throughout the United States with a big road production.

It was finally secured for stock production by Manager Morosco and has proven just the sort of play that is best adapted to the fine capabilities of the individual members of the big Burbank company

The story briefly tells how a world-renowned picture thief is thwarted by a young millionaire who, in order to carry out his plans, assumes the role of "Officer 666," first securing that officer's uniform much against the latter's will. There is one big tense situation after another throughout the entire play, invariably followed by a big laugh situation that keeps you laughing from start to finish.

Mason.

Theatrical and photoplay entertainments and the impression they make upon the public are best attested by the box office receipts. Accepting this fact as a test of merit, Annette Kellerman in "Neptune's Daughter" is aptly termed the film masterpiece of the world.

For weeks the Globe Theater, New York, has been taxed to its utmost capacity. Following closely upon the New York success comes the engagement at the Forrest Theater, Philadelphia, and a third for big receipts is the Fine Arts Theater, Chicago, where the pictures are shown four times daily to accommodate the crowds. For two weeks past the Columbia Theater, San Francisco, has broken all records.

This remarkable photoplay opens an engagement at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow matinee, and will continue for ten days, giving two performances daily.

This picture not alone displays Miss Kellerman in a new role, that of Water Queen, but discloses her wonderful charm as an exponent of a modern Venus, together with her ability as an actress of distinction.

"Neptune's Daughter" is something new in photoplays, and a newcomer that is welcome. What the New York Hippodrome is to the patron of the speaking stage, this class of photoplay is to the motion picture; and to "Neptune's Daughter" must be given credit for bringing the type from the experimental period to that of achievement.

The producer takes us from the rush and roar of city life to the peaceful picturesqueness of the Land of Make-Believe, and for two hours we wander from one beautiful scene to another while the creatures of this mystic land unfold a tale that might well have come from the pages of Hans Christian Andersen.

Clune's Auditorium.

A great film drama, "Mr. Barnes of New York," will be at Clune's Auditorium during the next week only. This big story by A. Gunter, which was so popular with the past generation, will introduce to the young people of today a novel in all its thrilling detail which has been considered one of the greatest of fiction. Maurice Costello is featured as "Mr. Barnes."

Carll Elinor has selected a tremendous musical programme of music which will add much to the comedy of the production. C. C. De Ros, the Alsatian pipe organist, has also studied the big picture and improvised music to accompany it. The big pipe organ, the largest this side of Salt Lake City, will play a large part in making this story effective.

The film is better than the stage production, for more scope is possible for scenic effects.

Clune's Broadway.

Following the sensation at Clune's Broadway the latter part of the week comes another big feature, "Nina of the Theater," with the peerless Alice Joyce in the title role. In this big feature you see the sacrifice Nina makes to save her sweetheart's life; the peril which confronts her when she is imprisoned with a maniac; the fate which overtakes the scoundrel who causes the heroine's troubles, and other exciting incidents which occur in the first feature of the new Alice Joyce series of complete stories. "Nina of the Theater" is an unusually strong story of the stage.

Next in importance on the big bill is a scenic production of "Picturesque Scandinavia," which is a hobby of the Broadway manager, who believes in educational films. This gorgeous production precedes the big pictorial news service which is comprised of the latest news in the new way.

"The Maid from Sweden" is a comedy which also goes well with the stupendous "Scandinavia" pictures. There is always plenty of comedy here, and the next best is "Woof! Watch Wiffles."

Music at the Broadway is provided by a splendid orchestra, under capable leadership. W. H. Clune prides himself upon his excellent music, which at his Broadway theater is augmented by charming and capable singers.

Woodley Theater.

"A $4,000,000 Dowry," one of the greatest and most sensational films ever made, a startling story of a beautiful woman's diabolical plot to win a title, will be the big feature at the Woodley Theater this week, beginning with the matinee Monday.

Though a melodrama of the most virulent type, the story is one of almost satanic cleverness, beautifully staged, and presented by a French company of unimpeachable artistry, raising the story to a high plane of motion picture perfection.

Briefly, the story tells how a banker's daughter plots to remove her rival, that she may marry a title. There is a gigantic conspiracy, spelling ruin and death, and the attempt to carry it through makes for many gasping situations.

With triumph almost in sight, the story ends in a most spectacular conflagration, awe-inspiring in the extreme, in which the arch villainess is burned to death—a fate, which, though horrible, was richly deserved.

Music of a brand never before heard on the mammoth Woodley pipe organ, has been prepared by Mr. Garratt, that accompanying the fire being almost as awe-inspiring as are the greedy writhing flames themselves.

Tally's Broadway.

"Brewster's Millions" amused many when it first appeared in book form. It amused more as the play, by Melville Stone and Winchell Smith, but their numbers are insignificant in comparison with the throngs that will want to see it in its latest form as a photoplay at Tally's Broadway Theater for the week commencing tomorrow.

Edward Ables, who for three years appeared as Monte Brewster in the stage production of this greatest of all comedies, has his original role in this motion picture version. In stage form, the play began with "Monte" as a full-grown man. The dialogue of the play conveyed the earlier life of the Brewsters, but no action of the piece conveyed any inkling of "Monte's" past.

The photoplay to be shown at Tally's has a prologue in two acts, depicting his interesting career right on up to the time "Monte" inherits the tainted million, which he is compelled to spend in a year.

Many of the comedy situations, impossible to produce on the stage, are contained in the photoplay and the scene on the yacht which was the real big scene of the play, is much more realistic in the films and the whole play in pictures is a laugh-producer from start to finish.

Hamburger's Arrow.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company, alive to the value of current events as material for photoplays, has produced a two-reel comedy-satire on the Mexican situation that reflects the sentiment of the entire United States nation and in a light vein, tells the story of said situation from the death of President Madero to the taking of Vera Cruz.

The picture will be shown at Hamburger's Arrow Theater, fifth floor Hamburger building, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next week.

Aside from the interest that will be centered upon this uproarious comedy because of the subject it treats, there is the added attraction of two famous vaudeville comedians, Raymond and Caverly, in the lead roles. This was arranged after considerable negotiations and it is interesting to note that it is the first time these laugh-provoking fellows have shown themselves on the screen. A strong supporting cast has been given them.

The comedy is replete with situations that are alternately hair-raising and uproariously funny. The audience is taken from the Maderistas headquarters in New York to the Mexican capital, with the conspirators using the comedians to convey dynamite bombs in the guise of eggs to Huerta. Word of their expected arrival is received by Huerta and his generals. The comedians are captured and sentenced to be shot at sunrise. Villa causes a rebellion of the troops and seizes the palace. Huerta and his generals are cast into prison of the palace. The rebels make Raymond president, mistaking him for the man the Maderistas wish. His first official action is to pardon his companion and then hold a big reception.

After this the pair visit Huerta and in a burlesque way, torture him with visions of food. The conspirators come to the palace and realizing that a mistake has been made, are about to shoot the comedian

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

WHAT, with the universal use of the telephone, the telegraphic night letter, the stenographer and all the modern improvements, the art of letter-writing as our ancestors knew it has been well nigh lost sight of. The advent of the picture postal card, too, has been a big factor in the deterioration of this art. It's so much simpler to scribble a few lines on one of these artistic souvenirs than to write seven pages describing the beauties of the place. The picture card tells it so much better than your pen can.

Up at the Ebell clubhouse the other day we were wafted back into the centuries when letter-writing was a fine art. Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, curator of the books and conversation section, had proposed to the members that they ransack bureau drawers and boxes and see what they could find in the way of interesting old letters. The result was a surprise. Such an entertaining morning we've not had in a long time. There was a letter from Abraham Lincoln, written in commendation of Capt. David V. Derickson, who, with his company, was detailed to act as guard when Lincoln was staying at the Soldiers' Retreat, just outside Washington, in the fall of 1861. This letter was read by Mrs. Samuel J. Coffman, Jr., a daughter of Capt. Derickson.

Then there was a letter from Jefferson Davis and one from Andrew Jackson, the latter written in 1801 in congratulation of the forthcoming marriage of a daughter of the Governor of Virginia. It was couched in military terms, and a vein of pleasantry ran through it in the old-fashioned courtesy of a century ago that was delightful.

Mrs. Ada Henry Van Pelt read a letter from Gen. Neal Dow, which was written in answer to her inquiry concerning her brother, Col. A. P. Henry, who was confined in Libby Prison at the same time that Gen. Dow was. Henry was a sculptor and used to pass away hours in prison carving figures from the meat bones—that is, whenever such a delicacy as meat chanced to find its way into the prison fare. Henry was confined there for nine months, and subsequently died as a result of the hardships he suffered there. Another letter was from the late Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, written from Jerusalem, in reply to a letter of appreciation for his book, "Hugh Wynne."

One of the most interesting letters to us, as Californians, was the one written by a forty-niner and read by Mrs. E. C. Gates. The writer told in interesting detail of his voyage from New Orleans, of waiting four months at Panama for a steamer to San Francisco. Over 3000 Americans were waiting anxiously for passage, and when the Oregon came in finally it was only to learn that every single ticket had been taken up. Whereas the passage price was $250, as high as $500 was offered for a steerage ticket from Panama to San Francisco and $1000 for first class.

Of absorbing interest was the letter written by Albert Gallatin Goodall, late president of the American Bank Note Company of New York, and read by his daughter, Mrs. P. G. Hubert. He was en route to Russia for the purpose of establishing a plant for steel-plate engraving, and was on board the ill-fated English steamship Arctic, which was wrecked off the coast of Denmark, striking the rocks half a mile off shore and sinking in twenty minutes in thirty feet of water. His vivid description of the catastrophe whereby nearly all on board lost their lives made a deep impression on account of the recent sinking of the Empress of Ireland. After clinging for hours to the ship's rigging, Goodall with three companions was picked up by a lifeboat sent out from shore. It was in the midst of a terrible hurricane that swept the whole Norwegian coast, and the Arctic was one of forty wrecks, eleven of which were in sight of the place where she went down. Beside the letter read many interesting souvenirs were shown, among them the magnificent court diamond ring set with ten diamonds around a center, which contained the initials of the Czar of Russia, which was presented to Mr. Goodall by the Russian government because of service rendered. He was also dubbed a sir knight by Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, and received a medal for Masonic distinction from the late King Edward of England, whose signature is on the parchment document now in possession of Mrs. Hubert.

Mrs. Herbert P. Barton, whose husband is a relative of Clara Barton, read some interesting correspondence of the famous Red Cross leader, one of which was written during the bombardment of Ft. Sumpter.

The session was closed with an interesting account given by Mrs. W. W. Stilson concerning her visit to Mt. Vernon and Alexandria, where she was the guest of the daughter of Lawrence Washington, now the head of the Washington family. She attended a family reunion at Mt. Vernon of the descendants of George Washington, and incidentally mentioned that it is quite possible that Lawrence Washington, who is at the head of one of the departments in the Congressional Library in Washington, may be in San Franci

Second Week of the June Clearance and White Sale

This week's offerings will include many lines not shown last week; merchandise of a more desirable nature—newer in style. Even prices throughout are more interesting—which is saying much in favor of the economical buyer.

LINEN SALE EXTRAORDINARY---An Importer's Surplus Stock at Sensational Savings

We bought this line of fine linens direct from an importer. Took his entire surplus stock. Of course, there was a strong price inducement or we would not have plunged as we did. We propose to make it the biggest linen event this town has seen. Don't come expecting to see cheap linens, because such are not here. But come looking for the finest linens that Ireland exports, at prices you've never before heard of, and you'll not be disappointed. We can give but a hint here.

Motherhood Undeniable.

Miss Alice, and he and his wife leave for Wyoming that night.

The only sophistry in the piece is where Maggie says to Miss Alice, "Oh, I wants be good—I mean the way you call good—but sometimes there's somethin' you gotta do that's greater."

"Greater than doing right?" Miss Alice asks, and poor little Maggie, starved and deluded, and a pauper in words as well as in light, grasps at the straw and exclaims, "That's the word—right—right—that's what I'm driving at—bein' right's greater'n bein' good—'cause everybody agrees about it, but in doin' right there's nothin' to back you up but yer own sense.

"Somehow I knew if it was up to you you'd decide my way, too. It's thinkin' this that keeps me goin' now."

This, as I say, is sophistry, yet it is as near right as that sort of tenement is right and as the old dowager's blood money was right. The play merely tries to show the bitter wrong on both sides, with the inhumanity of the well-kept rich whose revenues come from such a source, and of the low-bred starvelings, who are partly developed by such conditions.

Out here in the sunshine of our great, good West, with its clean and lovely cities, such things are hard to understand, but Kenyon was really striking at an ever-present problem of low districts in crowded eastern cities, and motherhood responds to such a challenge wherever children are brought into the light.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The Little Fruit Shop.

The little Broadway fruit shop bursts and glows
Like a stained-glass window rioting through the gloom
Of a grim facade; a garden overseas;
A Syracusan idyl; a lilt that flows
In chords of dusk-red color; emerald bloom
Loved by the nightingale, voice of the voiceless trees;
Ripe orchards mellow with innumerable bees.

A dark Greek boy counts up with supple hands
Lucent rotundities, the Bacchic grape
In luscious pyramids, pears like a lute
Most musically curved, nuts from sweet lands
Demeter lost; oh, many a sumptuous shape.
Had he his panther-skin, the thyrsus and the flute—
Lo, a swart faun-god mid his votive fruit.

Rollins and the Indians.

Warren E. Rollins, who built a spacious studio at San Gabriel several years ago, from which he was a commanding view of the hills and the mountains, has not given up his carefully planned life-work, though its fulfilment has been somewhat delayed, as he has been painting the landscape of Southern California for the past few years.

This big work has been outlined at some length in Art and Artists. It will comprise a series of fifteen mural panels, twelve feet by four in size, picturing the intimate life of the American Indian from prehistoric times up to the present day. Rollins has lived among the Indians of New Mexico and Arizona for many years—has, indeed, made himself one of them, thus familiarizing himself with their thoughts and habits, their traditions, their folk lore and their religious beliefs and ceremonies. He has made dozens of studies and pictures of them, authentic records taken on the spot. One of these was used as a frontispiece to Norton's history of California, recently published.

Rollins feels that he must go back to the Indian country again—that he cannot proceed with his graphic account of Indian life in America while he remains away from the Indian's country. The call has become so urgent that at last he has definitely decided to leave in a few weeks, and to build his adobe studio among the Hopis of Northern Arizona, where he will remain at least six months, and more probably a whole year. He believes that the Hopis of today can give him all the material he may need for his fifteen historical subjects.

The artist was in Portland, Or., when he first became interested in painting the Indian. He had just read Balch's romance, "The Bridge of the Gods," whose scene is the Upper Columbia River, and the story fired his imagination and roused his enthusiasm. He went in search of models, and immediately sat down and painted his first Indian picture, "Invocation of Braho" (Braho being the spirit that intercedes with the Great Spirit in behalf of mortals.) It created a sensation, and was exhibited in various cities of the North. Rollins had found his metier.

No one has learned to know the present-day Indian more intimately than he, and no one paints him with greater sympathy and truth. He sees the poetry, the pathos and the picturesqueness of Indian life, believing that these are even truer than its dullness and squalor.

A Dozen Portraits.

The dozen portraits in sanguine that E. Charlton Fortune is exhibiting at the Merrick Reynolds gallery will repay the careful study of the man who is interested in art for art's sake as well as the man who is interested in human nature for its own sake. Neither of these searchers will be disappointed.

The student of art will be delighted with the technical ease, simplicity and charm of these portraits—with the subtle refinements of modeling, the finesse with which full color is suggested, even though there are only a few touches of red and black on the paper, the unerring instinct for line the drawings display. He will note the fine poise of the head of Miss Isabel Rogers, the classic lines of Miss Corona Williams's neck and throat, the delicate sureness with which the black lace is rendered round the throat of Mrs. Henry Alston Williams, the quality of flesh in the face of Mrs. S. H. Fortune, the quaint loveliness of Miss Ethel McAllister in a costume of 1870.

He whom man delights even more than art will note the strength of the head of James E. Walsh, the shrewdness and kindliness of the expression of the face. He will linger and ponder over the subtle simplicity of childhood as pictured in the serious faces of Betty Gayley, Helen Myers and the two small children of Dr. Frederick Parker Gay. He will study with attention the keen glance and intellectual features of Prof. Charles Mills Gayley of Berkeley, and he will compare the various types of fine American women as he finds them on the walls—all differentiated and individualized, yet all unmistakably of our own country.

College of Fine Arts.

An exhibition of the work of the pupils at the College of Fine Arts, Garvanza, opened on Friday with a reception, and will continue through the present week. The public is cordially invited.

The College of Fine Arts, which is connected with the University of Southern California, has classes in drawing and painting from life, in modeling, in crafts-work, in design, with outdoor classes in landscape painting. A summer school has been established for school teachers and others, to remain in session from July 6 to August 28.

The work of students—the first lispings in art—are always interesting, and are not, of course, to be judged so much by performance as by promise. In these drawings and canvases we may discover talent in the making, genius waiting its fulfilment.

In the room at the College of Fine Arts which is devoted to painting in oil and water color, I noted some strong and promising things from the brush of Tokio Ueyama, a young Japanese student—the full length portrait of a girl in red, seen in profile, in which the head is well modeled, the hands well drawn, while skill is shown in the manner of the white collar's sweep against neck and bust. This boy from Nippon also exhibits a few good landscapes.

Edna A. Jones shows landscapes well painted in a decorative and impressional way; Josephine Chambers, the portrait of a man, full view and in a difficult lighting, which is strong and true in character; Jessie Layne, a water-color landscape of much feeling and color charm; Ruth Burns, a loosely handled portrait of a girl in a black picture hat with a pink plume; Marion Leaver, a well-handled study of a girl in a purple gown, the flesh tones being especially admirable.

Some strong canvases from the brush of Harvey Hastings are exhibited—a man with a spade, done in black and white oils; a cowboy on horseback, in full color; and, down in the room devoted to the metal workers, a lunette, only just begun, which will be fine and interesting when completed; it is done on the wall itself, in true mural style, and is a scene, with many figures of priests, Indians, etc., of the first settlement of Los Angeles.

In the same room are some delightful little figurines, still in the clay, by Vivian Orban, a young girl of more than ordinary ability as a sculptor. These figurings have life and movement, and are well constructed.

A few interesting pen and ink drawings for El Rodeo, the year-book of the University of Southern California, were noticed in the room set apart for designing. They are by Don L. Ansley and Harvey Hastings. Half a dozen striking posters, effective in color and simple in design, were also seen.

Where so much is shown, only a few names can be mentioned. Other work, quite as interesting and worthy as that already spoken of, is to be found in the exhibition.

The Pseudo Art Critic.

The pseudo art critic is a person who writes what is called criticism without being in possession of the preliminary information, which is indispensable to the production of true criticism. His chief anxiety is to hide this deficiency from his readers, and to leave the impression on their minds that he knows all about the fine arts. This is easy or difficult in exact proportion to the cultivation of his audience.

Whenever a critic pretends to know everything, it is the surest sign that he knows nothing, that he has not even an idea of what it is to know anything thoroughly. The pretense to universality in art criticism is sure to be hollow, because human life is not long enough for a man to become a universal art critic, if he studied it for ten hours a day and never did anything else.

The immediate object of a pseudo critic is to discover defects; that of a true one, to arrive at opinions. The false critic cannot, however, afford to point out defects of painters already canonized, because, by so doing, he would oppose the popular opinion, which he always takes care to conciliate. There is this peculiarity about painting, that it is impossible to produce an absolutely true picture, because some truths must always be sacrificed to others. If, in a landscape, the relation of one shadow to its light is truly given, the rest of the picture must be either false or out of harmony with that shadow. Again, color has to be sacrificed to light, and form to color. A painter has always to purchase truths with falsities, as men buy bread with money; and this necessity being not in the least understood by the public generally, offers to the pseudo critic infinite opportunities for the exercise of his little art or trick of petty fault-finding. And not only that, but the extreme difficulty of painting exposes all painters, even the greatest, to genuine errors, which a noble notices only when absolutely sary, but which the base one upon instinctively whenever to the neglect of everything that the whole tissue of his like the talk of an ill-tempered an is tiresome and faultfinding.—[Hamerton.

THE EYES: IS FACE JURIOUS?

No feature of the face pelling or possesses such of beauty as the eye, and is so commonly neglected, general idea that beautiful gift of nature and that done to improve them. ence proves to me that wrong idea, and that the can be improved, but with beauty can be preserved youth.

COLORING OF THE

Most children have attractive and yet the expression of the eyes does not compare to that mature eyes. In regard to tion the advantage lies with for the iris, the part of the holds the coloring matter, to change early in life. Why so, no one has been able to precision. Melanin, that which the coloring to the skin, the the eyes, has been isolated, source, what causes it, or pletes it, is still a mystery.

Between 40 and 50 the entire cal make-up of the body the reason that waste goes than renewal; there is apt marked change in pigmentation skin loses color, the hair gray and the eyes grow lighter is a natural change and, while be mitigated, it cannot always vented, but any marked coloring at an earlier period premature and should be and prevented.

Our eyes are wonderfully ants, and, considering the and often absolute abuse ceive, do remarkably good not reward their service care? Improved eye health ty would be the result, and of the youthful eye would middle age.

The beautiful eye should whites with no tinge of color of the iris should be and the skin over the lids the eyes unwrinkled. How we see this? Very rarely youth, and many women twenties have a network wrinkles about the eyes and leaves much to be desired.

It was stated on behalf of the prosecution that as a result of inquiries no further evidence would be given. The police had found a statement by accused to be true, and as a result they had been able to arrest another man in Birmingham.

The magistrate discharged Wine, and said he left the court without a stain on his character.

He was known as a "careful" man, but the amount in his possession was a surprise.

Fortune in a Meteoric Stone.

The schooner Hans Egede, belonging to the Danish government, which put into Lerwick Harbor from Greenland, had on board the Arctic explorer, Knud Rasmussen, who has just completed a 1200-mile sledge journey from 80 degrees north. Rasmussen had covered the distance in one month. The explorer stated that while on this journey he came across a large meteor stone, weighing 10,000 pounds, which he says is worth half a million sterling. The stone is to be taken to Copenhagen, and in the meantime is the property of the Danish government.

The "Troublesome Sex."

Judge Lush-Wilson, K. C., was continually interrupted by a woman litigant at Exeter county court. Finally he said: "Madame, I run the risk, I know, of criticism from your sex when I say that they are the most troublesome people I have to deal with. Why can't you women exercise the same amount of self-control in the witness-box as men have to do?"

The coffin, covered with a Union Jack on which were placed the dead Scout's accoutrements was borne to the grave on a Scouts' car, escorted by his comrades of the First Ickleford Troop. At the graveside people wept.

Tale of a Tub.

Remarkable resource was shown by a man named Macpherson, who was remanded at Reading on a charge of burglary.

When on a roof adjoining the jeweler's shop into which he was alleged to have broken, he saw a man whom he believed to be watching him, so he called out, "Keep quiet; I am a detective officer; there is a burglar inside."

This ruse was unsuccessful; so the man took shelter in the house, jumped into a tub, and placed another over his head.

IN NORWAY.

Criticism of Americans.

The treatment of Norwegians at the immigration station at Ellis Island, New York, has been receiving criticism in Parliament. Several members of the Storthing have made speeches in which they cited instances of ill-treatment of Norwegian immigrants under detention there and the Foreign Minister was asked pointedly what he intended to do about it.

The discussion arose from the story recently published here of a 15-year-old boy, who was detained at Ellis Island for a whole month before he was sent back to Norway. It was asserted that he was kept prisoner and that only one of several letters which he wrote ever reached its destination.

The protesting members in Parliament did not criticise the immigration laws of the United States, but they insisted that Norwegians detained under these laws should be properly treated.

M. Thlen in answer to the interpellations, quoted some of the most important sections of the American immigration acts and said that too often the Norwegian emigrant failed to comply with the regulations because of ignorance. He agreed that there were cases of exceptional severity and cited that of a Norwegian woman and her four children who were detained because the paper by which her father-in-law guaranteed that the family would not become a public charge was dated a year before their arrival. She was allowed to enter while her case was on appeal, after her relatives had raised $500 bail for each child, but in the meantime one of the children died in the hospital through careless treatment, according to charges to the Norwegian legation in Washington.

The Minister pointed out what a difficult situation the United States has to face, with thousands of immigrants, a great many of whom were illiterate, constantly pouring into her gates. He then agreed that the Foreign Office should get full information about the treatment of Norwegians at Ellis Island which should be published, with extracts from American immigration laws, warning Norwegians of the risks they run in attempting to enter the United States.

Value of Perfumed Soaps.

[London Lancet:] Gross adulterations in regard to toilet soaps do not appear to exist. In some instances the degree of purity attained in toilet soaps induces makers to demand a very extravagant price, and apparently high-grade scents are resorted to as a kind of justification for this demand. It is doubtful whether toilet soap is rendered more acceptable to the skin by the scentng process. Essentially, soap is required for cleaning purposes, and so long as toilet soaps fulfill this role without doing harm to the skin they perform all that is necessary. We found this function discharged by toilet soaps sold at moderate prices.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BRUNSWICK (Germany) May 20.—Holding in contempt the pretensions of the professional nurses and ignoring their advice, the Duchess of Brunswick has taken practically the whole care of her infant son, who is 10 weeks old. At times the nurses have appealed to the attending physician, who merely remarks that allowances must be made in the case of the first baby. All her waking hours the Duchess passes in sight of her treasure, who some day may be seated as King on the restored throne of Hanover.

The babe's name is Ernest Augustus George William Christian Ludwig Francis Joseph Nicholas.

LONDON, May 23.—David Black Harvey, a press photographer, of London, died in Camberley Cottage Hospital as the result of an accident to a side-car in which he was being driven near Bagshot. Mr. Gore, who was on the motorcycle, was severely injured, but there are hopes that he will recover.

It isn't always the thing that's seen that needs attention. The beauty of the outer is the result of the inner. Good health is the cause of a pretty complexion. CHEAT JUSTICE IN GERMANY.

Crimes by Women Committed With Slight Penalty.

Defense Society Dissatisfied With Recent Army Bill.

Emperor to Review the Next Army Maneuvers.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, May 18.—Berlin appears to have imported for itself what the French have called "crimes of passion," and to have extended their range far beyond the French example. A series of recent murders and attempted murders of men by women have been so lightly punished that the entire Berlin press is criticising criminal authorities and juries severely.

A conspicuous case of some months ago aroused the press to protest. A young woman, informed by her lover that he did not care for her any more, invited him to a farewell walk in the Tiergarten and shot him in the back of the head, killing him instantly. She was brought to trial not on a charge of murder, but of manslaughter, and the public prosecutor admitted the existence of the mitigating circumstances, which, under a paragraph of the penal code, are present "when the defendant at the time of the commission of the action was in such a condition that he did not realize what he was doing, or suffering under a pathologic disturbance of the senses through which his power of decision was made impossible."

This condition, the state admitted, was present, due to the young woman's anger at being deserted. The sentence was for a year and a half to the penitentiary.

DEFENSE SOCIETY.

Notwithstanding the great increase of the army and the enormous military taxation voted by the Reichstag only last year, the German Defense Society is not yet satisfied that enough has been done to protect the empire from its foes. At its annual meeting just held at Posen, resolutions were adopted calling for universal military service, and pointing to the fact that even after the increased recruitage of October, 1913, as provided for by the new law, there was a surplus of 38,000 able-bodied young men left over. The society also calls for a systematic preparation of boys for military duty, and such changes in the system of one-year volunteer service as will secure a better training for reserve officers.

The principal address at the meeting was delivered by the president of the society, Gen. Keim, who is usually regarded as head of the so-called "war party" in Germany. He protested vigorously against the recent declaration of Count von Hertling, Minister President of Bavaria, that no fresh burdens for armaments must be placed upon the German people for years to come. "Such an utterance from an official quarter," said Keim, "is an immediate danger of war. Therefore we must repel such a declaration from such a source."

THE MANEUVERS.

Big as some of the German army maneuvers have been, all previous military shows will be eclipsed next September when the Emperor will review six full army corps and detachments from others. It will be a record for Germany, if not for the world.

The corps participating will be the Seventh, Eighth, Eleventh and Eighteenth of Prussia, and the Second and Third of Bavaria. Last year the maneuvers were intended chiefly to give the officers practical work in the tactical handling of large bodies of men, but the intention this year is to lay stress upon strategy. Two armies will be made up and stationed a long distance apart. The positions will be kept secret from the respective opposing commanders, who will be expected to carry out their advance on their own initiative under conditions arranged, so far as possible, like war. The maneuvers will begin on September 15 and will probably end on the 18th.

NEW WAR TAXES.

The financial authorities of the imperial government are more than satisfied with the results of the assessment of the new war taxes. Instead of the $240,000,000 that the new legislation was designed to raise, it is now evident that the total amount will be at least $50,000,000 greater. This result is attributed in large part to the fact that the new laws threatened extremely severe sentences against tax-dodgers and at the same time guaranteed taxpayers who now give true returns against prosecution for past under-assessments.

INCLUDED IN LITANY.

The Emperor, as head of the state church, has ordered the inclusion in the litany of the following invocation for aviators:

"Protect the royal army and the entire German battle might on land and water, especially the ships and the flying machines upon their voyages."

AMUNDSEN AT AERODROME.

Capt. Roald Amundsen has just been visiting Johannisthal aerodrome near Berlin and studying the merits of the German aeroplane, with a view to buying one or more for his North Pole expedition, which he now plans to make in 1915. The explorer was accompanied by a Norwegian expert aviator, Capt. Jacobsen, under whom Amundsen himself is learning to handle a flying machine. Dr. Filchner, who will join Amundsen next year, is also in training as an aviator at Johannisthal.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

Germany maintains its lead in the publishing world, according to reports read at the Congress of Associated Book Dealers of Germany at Leipsig. The German production of books during 1913 reached the total of 35,078 separate works, a slight gain over the previous year, and an increase of 10,000 since 1901.

NEW LICENSING BILL.

The government's new licensing bill, now before the Reichstag for action, contains an interesting paragraph of which no notice has been taken until now. It gives the licensing authorities power to restrict or to forbid entirely the use of absinthe in any of its forms. Thus far absinthe has never become popular in Germany, and there has been no occasion to regulate its production and sale, but the authorities desire to have a weapon against its possible extended introduction. It is reported that the Reichstag will accept the bill, and thus far there have been no protests from the liquor trade against any of its provisions.

BERLIN OPPOSES AMUSEMENT TAX

Fear Expressed It May Drive Drama to the Wall.

Prussian Censor Prohibits Showing Biblical Films.

Decrease in Manufacture of Matches Is Reported.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, May 25.—The proposed extension of the existing amusement tax now levied upon variety houses, moving picture theaters, circuses and other amusements in Berlin, so as to apply to the dramatic stage has evoked strong protests from many sides. The tax has already forced one circus to close its doors after an existence of many years, and has driven a number of cinematograph houses out of business. The theater managers declare that the tax will be even more disastrous for legitimate drama.

There is no reason to doubt the managers' assertion that the conduct of a theater in Berlin is an extremely risky venture. Within the last four or five years at least sixteen theaters have gone into bankruptcy, and in the last two years only two new ones have been opened, a number out of all proportion to former figures. Even the most successful pay small dividends, as low as 5 per cent. in the case of one of the leading houses of the greater city. A director of three of the best-known and most profitable theaters of Berlin declares that, in case an amusement tax is placed upon his business, he and his comrades will immediately begin liquidation, since further existence will be profitless and most probably result in direct loss.

The president of the Association of German Actors has filed with the city authorities a formal protest against the proposed tax. Not only will it make it impossible in most cases to maintain existing theaters, he declares, but it will also result in a lowering of actors' salaries and in making conditions in the business, already notably bad, still worse.

MATCH LOSING GROUND.

The match is losing ground. A few years ago the German factories were supplying an average of 2200 matches for each person each day. The use of electricity and the invention of automatic igniting devices have so reduced the consumption of matches, the manufacturers say, that the rate of use is now only 1250 matches per person each day.

The manufacturers, also depressed by the heavy taxes which have been levied upon their industry, are urging the government to take over their factories and establish a State monopoly in matches. The purchase would require some $10,000,000.

AUTOMATIC PHOTOGRAPHY.

Automatic photography of safe robbers at work is declared to have been perfected by a German inventor. The invention is based upon the oscillations of quicksilver, by means of which an electrical contact is made. The slightest concussion or tampering with the safe or wires will prove sufficient to complete the circuit and put the hidden camera in operation. At the same time the device sets off a flood of light for the picture taking and starts the burglar alarms ringing. The robber, when caught, will be confronted with a snapshot of his own taking to establish his identity.

BAR BIBLICAL FILMS.

There must be no Biblical films in Prussia, according to a ruling of the highest administrative court of the kingdom. The Berlin police president had prohibited the production of a film which gave some scenes from the life and sufferings of Christ. The court sustained the action of the police on the ground that the Christian religion is a part of the public order which the police are bound to uphold. The court also held that such a film grossly wounds the sensibilities of religious people, particularly in view of the fact that it is given along with light and humorous productions.

RADIUM AS TIPS.

It may soon become a fashion to tip off one's lightning rods with radium. German experimenters have found that a very small quantity of it—two milligrammes—electroplated upon a small copper disc gives a marked increase in electrical attraction. Lightning rods thus equipped have been thoroughly tried out in the laboratory and have also worked satisfactorily in the open air. At the prevailing prices it is estimated the radium two-milligram equipment would cost about $300.

SAVES ROB ROY'S GRAVE.

The House of Lords Stops Glasgow Project Which Would Have Submerged Historical Landmarks.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLASGOW, May 23.—The birthplace of Rob Roy, the celebrated Highland freebooter, the place where he died, and his grave have been saved by a decision of the House of Lords denying the city of Glasgow a right to draw a water supply from Loch Voil and Loch Doine. If Glasgow's request had been granted it would have been necessary, since these lakes are a part of the eastern watershed, to raise the level of the lakes some fifty feet, which would have submerged the Rob Roy landmarks.

These sentimental considerations were laid before the House of Lords in petition after petition, but the decision of that body, sitting in its judicial capacity, was not based upon any of these points. The ancient riparian regulations read that water from an eastern watershed shall not be diverted to western uses, and it was decided that Glasgow must forego its water supply for the prosaic reason that the city is on the wrong side of the watershed.

CHURCH LOSES LARGE INCOME

Disestablishment in Wales Cuts Off Endowments.

Non-Conformist Victory Won After Forty Years.

Commission Appointed to Administer the Act.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, May 23.—By the passage of the bill to disestablish the Church of England in Wales the Liberals reaped the first fruits of the Parliament act which they passed to limit the veto power of the House of Lords.

It is forty years since the Non-Conformists of Wales commenced the movement to have the church disestablished so far as their principality is concerned and just under twenty years since a Liberal government introduced in the House of Commons the first bill to carry out the wishes of these Non-Conformists.

Like many Liberal measures since, this first disestablishment bill, passed by the House of Commons by a majority of forty-four in a House of 564, was thrown out by the House of Lords. Not until H. H. Asquith, who, as Home Secretary, introduced that first bill, became Prime Minister and undertook the huge task of curbing the power of the Upper Chamber, was there any hope of a bill to disestablish the church becoming a law, so strongly are the Lords on the side of the establishment church in all matters of the kind. Now, however, they have to bow to the inevitable. Under the Parliament act, the bill having passed the House of Commons three times, becomes law, no matter what attitude the House of Lords takes.

It has been a long, hard fight for those who desired the disestablishment of the church. In the first debate on the bill introduced by Mr. Asquith in 1895 the opposition was led by Mr. Balfour, who also spoke against the present measure, and the then Home Secretary had to face all the then big guns of the Conservative party. He had on his side, however, Joseph Chamberlain, then a strong advocate of disestablishment, but now with all his followers, an opponent of it. Mr. Asquith's labor on that occasion, as that of many of his successors in after years, was wasted. As soon as the bill reached the Lords it was thrown out without any consideration. Now the Lords are powerless, except to make suggestions for amendments, which are not likely to receive much consideration from the Welsh members of the House of Commons, their Liberal supporters, both Non-Conformists and churchmen, and above all the Irish Nationalists, who voted regularly for the bill, perhaps not so much because they like its principle as because of a desire to get it out of the way to give a clear road for the Home Rule Bill.

While home rule has attracted more attention, on account of the opposition of a portion of Ulster, the Welsh church bill has created almost as much feeling between the two political parties, and between the Church of England and the Liberals. The Welsh Liberals, and with one or two exceptions all members of the House of Commons from the principality are Liberals, were busy early and late urging the passage of the bill, and supporting candidates in constituencies throughout the kingdom pledged to vote for it. The bishops and their supporters were just as busy. In every by-election organizations opposed to disestablishment, entered the constituency to fight candidates who favored the bill, and Liberal churchmen were particularly urged to go against their party on this measure. All this has counted heavily against the government and several by-elections have been influenced by it. Mr. Asquith has, however, gone steadily forward, endeavoring to carry out the pledges he gave the Welshmen twenty years ago to disestablish the church when it was in his power to do so.

Now that the disestablishment bill has been passed it is believed that all the old animosities aroused by it will be buried. The government at any rate has taken the first step toward that happy conclusion by appointing a non-partisan commission to carry out the provisions of the bill. This commission is composed of Sir Henry Primrose, a civil servant of long and distinguished service, who is a member of the Episcopal Church of Scotland; Sir William Plender, a chartered accountant, member of the Church of England, and Sir Herbert Roberts, a Welsh non-conformist, member of the House of Commons.

The functions of the commission will be judicial, administrative and actuarial. They will have to determine the allocation of border parishes to English or Welsh dioceses; decide what is Welsh ecclesiastical property, which on the passage of the bill became vested in them; and they will have to distribute among the ultimate beneficiaries, the church representative body, the Welsh county councils, the University of Wales, and the burial authorities.

It is estimated that the property of the Church in Wales, which will be taken over by the commissioners, is worth, including grants from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and Queen Anne's bounty, over $1,300,000 anually. Outside this the church has an income of some $100,000, which will not be touched by the disendowment clauses of the act and besides provision will be made for the clergy, so that they will suffer no financial loss. The bishops and clergy will continue to receive their present incomes so long as they hold their offices, and they will also be left in the enjoyment of their palaces and parsonages. The present incumbents will moreover retain possession of the glebes and can at any time within five years exchange their existing interests in the emoluments of office for an annuity, and thereupon retire. Churches and church buildings, including residences of the clergy, plate and furniture, all funds and endowments specially allocated to the repair, restoration or improvement of churches or ecclesiastical residences, all closed burial grounds and private benefactions made since 1662 remain vested in the church.

What the church loses are the burial grounds and glebes and tithe rent charges, which go to the county and borough councils, and which produce the greater part of the amount mentioned above. The money will be devoted for health and educational purposes.

While strongly opposed to disestablishment, the church party attack more stubbornly the disendowment proposals, which they claim will cripple the Church in Wales. In Cardiff, for example, it is estimated that of the present income of $14,000, outside subscriptions, only $3000 will be left.

"— far that little candle throws

Seven-year-old Gladys Wooley of Eugene, Or., made a brave rescue of her 3-year-old sister, Dorothy, from being ground to death beneath a Southern Pacific passenger train. Little Dorothy was crossing the railroad track with her little wagon when the sound of the locomotive whistle startled her, and caused her to sit down in the center of the track dazed. Gladys ran 150 feet and paying no heed to the approaching train, lifted the child from the track, the side of the locomotive striking her as she fled from under it. Her dress was torn but she was otherwise uninjured. The engineer did all that he could to stop the train, but its speed was too great to have saved the child's life had it not have been for the bravery of Miss Gladys.

A scheme of the Canadian Pacific Railroad to discover the good points of its employees, with the idea of rendering more adequate justice to the individual, is creating interest on the big American systems. It was the origination of Grant Hall, general manager of the western lines, with about 40,000 employees under his direction. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy at yearly banquets has before now expressed regret that good men might be overlooked, notwithstanding the fact that the company was on the keen lookout for the men who were to come after the present officers.

Mr. Hall appoints trustworthy persons who will go over the western lines regularly, watch the men, themselves unsuspected, and report, not their bad, but their good qualities; how they do their work; how they serve the interests of the company; how they show their zeal. If bad, they must be reported. Those against whom the black mark is made will have a chance to be heard before judgment is rendered. In this way it is believed, the merits of the men will be more certainly discovered and, being discovered, promotion will follow upon the discovery—when that is possible.

This idea, which is even now being put into effect, is regarded by the big American systems as at once novel and excellent.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

THE GOOD HOUSEKEEPER'S HINT: Cover the old kitchen table with zinc and you will wonder why you did not do so long ago. You can buy the zinc in sheets and it can be put on with ordinary tools. When you realize the ease of keeping such a table clean you will say that you have wasted much valuable time in scrubbing the surface of the old, rough wooden work table.

Summer's here! The new sand toys are out. Each season these interesting toys become more intricate and more delightful and the ones just brought forth in a high-class Broadway house are as far beyond anything known to the childhood which ran sand through a flower pot as is the biplane beyond the kite or the Packard beyond the ox-cart.

I noticed one set of these toys which presented an entire beach city. There were houses and cottages—of tin—and all kinds of odd-shaped receptacles for sand and even a biplane and a dirigible to be set afloat against a (sand) sky. What fun children do have, now adays! And yet—I wonder if the sky is more blue to them, or the sands more golden, than to the ones who ran sand through the flower-pot mill?

New Fiber Rugs.

Time was, when fiber rugs were fit only for office use or for some inconspicuous place in a dark hall, but now there are many quite as artistic in design and as dainty in coloring as are those of less durable weave. This season has brought forth many new weaves, and in furnishing the porch or the summer cottage one may indulge one's artistic sense to the full and yet employ these inexpensive and well-wearing floor coverings. Nearly every store in town has an especial make of such rugs, and as one looks at any one finds some especial advantage connected with it, and the only trouble is that there is actually an embarrassment of riches making it difficult to select.

Buttonhole Kewps.

Of all the kewps, those designed as "buttonhole kewpies," are the cleverest.

As you pass along Broadway, you will see a group of these in the window of that store which makes a specialty of everything for children, from clothes to toys. The buttonhole kewps are not over an inch in length and they are—but just take a look at the little darlings!

New Place Markers.

Among the imported novelties brought in by that Broadway jewelry house which always sends a buyer abroad to select novelties are the most charming little cardboard jardinieres filled with fairy flowerettes. These are to mark the places at table and one cannot doubt that each guest will covet and wish to take away with her these pretty novelties. These are but a hint of the many interesting articles recently sent in by that foreign buyer.

A Novel Shower.

The old oaken bucket formed the basis for a bridal shower, given in a town where people are well acquainted and where there is great rivalry as to something new in entertainments for June brides.

The "well" was of cardboard and the "bucket" which was lowered into it by means of a portiere cord, was handled by the bride-elect. Forth from the depths came bucketful after bucketful of pretty and useful articles, such as delight the hearts of brides—or are supposed to delight them. The favorite colors of the bride were used to decorate both bucket and well sweep, and the gifts were wrapped and tied in the same dainty colors. The framework of the well sweep, by the way, was a wooden clothes horse to which the gray pasteboard, or building paper was tacked.

Reading Advertisements.

"I never waste my time reading advertisements," boasted one woman to another.

"On the contrary," replied her friend, "I read every advertisement I see." Then she continued: "As for reading being a waste of time, I regard it as just the contrary. The best time savers in the home which I have found, have been advertised articles or machines. I would probably never have had my fireless cooker, nor my vacuum cleaner, nor my dustless duster, nor, in fact, any of the labor-saving and consequently time-saving articles had I not been a reader of advertisements. I make it a point to take the magazines and newspapers which contain the most advanced advertising and so I keep in touch with the very latest inventions for the household. I think it a matter of pride that I do know the best advertised articles and I intend to do so always."

Fashion's Figures.

Semi-precious stones are being used to decorate richly the low bodices of evening gowns.

The "petal hem" is one of the prettiest features of the present taffeta tunics.

The long sash end is extremely popular. It is made of wide soft chiffon velvet, usually black, and is tied in a fussy bow at the back. Used in vivid color on a black and white frock, it is delightful.

The best colors just now are warm browns, deep, strong blues, stone, beige and bright green.

Bows and braces abound on the new gowns.

The flat cockade is a favorite form of decoration on the small high-crowned hats.

"Take care of the tunic and the silhouette will take care of itself," is the new form of an old saying.

Even the most practical blue serge walking costumes show the tunic.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, June 6.

Augusta Dear: Of course, Sally's rose pink wedding was the function of the week and everything else paled in interest beside it. There isn't a doubt about it, pink is the happiest, hopefulest, youthfulest of all colors, and it is obviously the color, par excellence, to show a tulle white bride up to ethereal advantage. Sally Grimm made the most adorable bride imaginable—and Los Angeles has certainly seen some adorable brides in her time. Besides being a peculiarly dainty person, Sally carries herself so well—there is a little stately-to-the-manner-born air about her that is quite charming. And tulle, you know, yards upon yards of it, is so deliciously cloudy and fairylike—it is that clever suggestion of abundant tulle that made Penrhyn Stanislaws's heroines so famous.

And sister Louise, as a blush rose matron of honor—someone dubbed her "Pinkie and the Fairies" as she and the four pink bridesmaids appeared on the scene. It was a masterly stroke to discover four such pretty bridesmaids, who all looked well in pink. And Mamma McFarland, looking so utterly fetching in turquoise blue—a color scheme of youth and charm and happiness.

Sally's going away dress was very stunning and stylish. Plaid silk, a la polonaise, with a piquant hat. She looked an altogether different Sally in plaid silk, though—quite the assured, fashionable young matron as distinct from the willowy, filmy, gauzy, intangible, angel who figured as a bride.

Another sumptuous wedding of the week was that of Lucile Hellman to Alvin Frank, a beautiful Jewish wedding, carried out on a luxurious scale. She, too, had pink bridesmaids, but their effect, in taffeta, was rather more substantial than the fluffy butterfly ones of the other wedding.

Both the brides had garden wedding receptions, lavish with flowers and favors, the Hellman affair being enhanced with a very ingenious device by which hundreds of birds hovered, twittering in the trees.

One observes that it is no longer smart to enumerate one's wedding presents; such things are not exactly obsolete, you understand, but the list is not necessarily published in the papers. That should make for wedding present reform. The next step will be to cut out the present exhibit, when it will follow as the night the day that presents will take a simpler and less costly form, and finally become "bad form" altogether. The wedding present idea was inaugurated when the world was less prosperous and it was assumed that the young couple needed a little help in the furnishing of their home. Weddings were a good deal more simple and inexpensive in those days, too. But now, we are all so rich that useful presents have long since become an insult in a certain section of society and the only possible present simply has to take the form of an expensive and entirely superfluous luxury. Besides homes are now furnished throughout by expert furnishing contractors, who carry out some special period—Chippendale, Sheratom, Adams, Louis XV and so forth, and your preposterous old Morris rocker or davenport couch will necessarily prove a hideous inharmony. Make it diamonds or a bit of old Sevres, dear—that's the only safe way.

You know the West Hugheses, don't you? Nice place on Twenty-third street, the doctor's no end of a golfer. He's been winning cups at the rate of one a month lately and Mrs. Hughes is naturally quite reconciled to her husband's peculiar pastime now. She gives such charming little bridge affairs—the 'mater says she has the knack of inviting the right people to make a sympatique party, a genuine gift.

Said good-by to the Joseph Bannings yesterday—just off to the East and Europe, you know. Joe has graduated from Yale and will be an eligible in Southern California society next year if he doesn't go and lose his heart to an English suffragette in the meantime. We do need some nice new young men out here, don't we dear?

Two more engagements this week. If all the world loves a lover we have plenty of lovers to love just now. Clara Adams, that piquant niece of the Burns's from Chicago, and Hugh Purcell, announced their engagements two days after denying it and Auntie gave a garden tea party on Sunday, so that we could all hear about it. Clara, in slim white, looking shy and retiring and modest violetty—the naughty little thing! She is just full of puckish tricks and what the French so happily call diablerie. Constance Clark was there, too, looking so sweet and charming in old rose pink. She came down from San Francisco especially for it, and her mother, Mrs. Bootes, "poured." Wasn't that delightful of her? You remember she broke off her engagement to Hugh a year ago.

The other couple are Edith Metcalfe and Van Cartwell. Edith is a San Francisco girl; most of her people are up there, but she has been living here for a year or more now.

Mrs. F. H. Jones gave such a jolly dansant for Marguerite on Wednesday. That's another imminent wedding; you knew she was engaged to Hessel, didn't you?

We did laugh about your Santa Barbara party. I'll wager it was thoroughly dashing and spirited and all that sort of thing. The Robin Hayneses always manage to carry an atmosphere of stylish frivolity about with them, don't they? That polo-yacht-golfing set up there have brought la vie s'amuse to a fine art.

Yes, it will be interesting to see what sort of a place the Halls cut in society here. Everyone discusses them, of course, but none of the leaders have signified definite intentions. The former little French flower-girl is certainly quite charming—and they have the "sinews of war" to say nothing of a palatial home, so things may settle themselves down quite amiably after all.

This letter is getting much too long, dear—and yet I haven't told you about the letter we had from Cecil Leitch, the girl golf champion of the world. There are five pretty, aristocratic, athletic sisters, and they cut such an interesting figure in English society.

So long, Augusta dear,
Your loving BETTY.

EDUCATORS, CHURCHMEN.

In order to help an institution for charity, Rev. Everard Digby, vicar of a London church, spent a busy half-hour polishing shoes at a corner on the Strand. He polished in all fifteen pairs of shoes.

Rev. Wallace M. Short, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Sioux City, Iowa, was recently asked to resign his pastorate because he signed a saloon consent petition. He said he was actuated by a conviction that the methods employed by the prohibitionists to secure temperance reform were wrong and that under local conditions he regarded a vote for a legalized saloon to be the most temperate measure.

Henry B. Williams, Ph.D., former superintendent of the public schools of Sandusky, O., who has been appointed president of the State Normal School at Bowling Green, O., costing $2,000,000, is a fine example of a self-made man. Twenty-five years ago he was a country school teacher in Hardin county. He was so poor that he was obliged to deny himself many things in order to buy books.

The Rev. Frederick Odenbeck, professor of astronomy and physics of St. Ignatius's College at Cleveland, O., in a series of experiments in the college natatorium declares he has found a method of walking in deep water without drowning and has discovered the exact specific gravity of the human body. He declares that his experiments show that the body is actually lighter than water. The specific gravity of the human body has been a lost secret since 1792. Theoretically, he says, drowning is impossible.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

The spectacle of a busy man, who draws four times the salary of the Governor of Nebraska, attending college with his own son, has just been concluded at Creighton University, Nebraska, by the award of a degree in law to E. J. McVann, manager of the traffic bureau of the Omaha Commercial Club. His son Donald is a freshman in the same school.

Capt. Roald Amundsen has just been visiting Johannisthal aerodrome, near Berlin, and studying the merits of the German aeroplane with a view to buying one or more for his North Pole expedition, which he now plans to make in 1915. The explorer was accompanied by a Norwegian expert aviator, Capt. Jacobsen, under whom Amundsen himself is learning to handle a flying machine. Dr. Filchner, who will join Amundsen next year, is also in training as an aviator at Johannisthal.

Gen. Bennett H. Young, of Louisville, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, has announced his candidacy before the August primaries for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate from Kentucky, to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator W. O. Bradley.

John Bassett Moore, former counsellor of the State Department, Washington, says the existing arbitration treaties were backward steps as compared with those of the early days of the republic. "It may be worth our while to consider whether we should not occupy a position more advanced than that which we now hold if we were to go back to the practice we adopted 120 years ago."

OF OTHER LANDS.

Dr. A. M. Low, in a lecture to the Institute of Automobile Engineers, London, recently demonstrated for the first time in public the possibility of telephone users seeing each other when talking to each other.

The Empress Harugo, who died a short time ago, is said to have done much to make possible the many reforms credited to her husband, the late Emperor Mutsuhito. She advanced in step with her husband, realizing that one must either advance or go backward, as there is no standing still in an age of progress. Since her time Japanese women have taken a larger part in the affairs of the life of that country.

Sir Henry Seton-Karr, who was lost on the Empress in the St. Lawrence River, was one of the best-known sportsmen and practical naturalists of the present time. He was born in India in 1853, and at his death was a member of the royal commission of food supply in time of war.

The famous French lawyer, Maitre Labori, who became an international figure at the time of the Dreyfus case, is now 55 years old. I live in hope, he said recently, that we shall have in France a better republic than we have at present, a republic in which mere wealth will not count for everything.

"Courts were made for men, not men for courts," said Justice William Renwick Riddell of the Supreme Court of Ontario, Can., in an address to the convention of the Illinois Bar Association. "A court is an evil and the less it is called into play the better for the community. The court, however, is the recognized means of settling disputes and whenever arbitration is preferred to a court decision it is a disgrace in most instances to the courts."

Origin of "Teetotal."

[Indianapolis News:] To stammering, according to a favorite theory, is owed the useful word "teetotal." It appears to have been first used in September, 1833, by Richard Turner, an English reformed drunkard. Opinions differ, however, as to whether it was the happy accident of stammering over "total" or an intentional emphasizing by reduplication; and it has even been claimed that it is an old dialect word. The only certainties are that the word has nothing to do with tea, though a French novelist did translate "teetotaler" into "totaliseur du the," nor with "teetotum"—which stands for "T totum," the T on one of the four sides of the teetotum, indicating "take all the stakes."

Japan's Teachers and Schools.

[Seattle Post-Intelligencer:] Japan's teaching force is recruited as follows: About 20 per cent. of the graduates from the high schools—and these the choicest—are encouraged to enter normal schools. Here for four years they receive training and keeping at the expense of the State. After that they are expected to teach for ten years, whereupon they are entitled to a pension for life.

Practically every child in Japan has eight years of schooling, six hours a day, six days in a week, eleven months in a year. If the four leading nations of the world were to exhibit their educational systems I am quite certain that Japan would not stand third or fourth.

"Bluebirds"

It is doubtful whether any Dolls ever shown in Los Angeles have been as original and clever as these. If you are familiar with our "Fairy" Dolls, you will scarcely recognize them now in their gorgeous dresses and hats in the latest vogues.

The "Bluebird" pictured here is but one of many styles which we have decked out in striking little dresses. Our Doll Department has many other Dolls of all varieties to amuse the children in summer. Our Book Department also deserves a visit.

I Must Be in New York City by July First!

JUNE EIGHTH IS THE DATE

I MUST be on hand to assume my new duties in New York on the morning of July 1st without fail.

I have on hand a very extensive collection of fine Oriental rugs. I am exceedingly anxious to reduce this collection before I go. To do this, I know something drastic must be done in the way of reductions.

So, on Monday morning, June 8th, I shall start a sale on these Oriental rugs, the like of which I believe has never been seen anywhere.

Most of my friends know the high standard of my rug stock and the sincerity of my statements, so that when I say I WILL ACCEPT ANY OFFER WITHIN REASON, it is plain that this will be something more than a mere sale.

I welcome this one last opportunity of serving you and thank you most heartily for the good will and patronage you have accorded me through The Iran Co., with which I now sever my connection.

Remember—sale starts June 8th!

Annual June Sale Undermuslins

Banks of Drifting Snow White Undermuslins Nearly 30,000 Ready

For This Annual June Sale
Two Weeks Beginning Monday

—In all organizations there are certain events that loom out as exceptional. This Annual June Sale of Undermuslins is one of the events of the greatest importance in Broadway merchandising. The buyer is enthusiastic. Hear him tell you of the wonders of this sale:

—"If I could spread before you a few of the garments that I succeeded in assembling for my Annual June Sale of Undermuslins, I'd need no adjectives to tell you how wonderful they are.

—"I know the vast importance of this sale and how it has grown from year to year. I know that it must be by great value-giving that this event can be perpetuated.

—"So, when I went into the market months ago I sought long and carefully and bought only after the closest comparison, quantities of beautiful new Undermuslins at prices that are even startling to me. I marked this merchandise at prices that I know cannot fail to interest the thousands of Los Angeles women who have Undermuslins to buy.

—"The picture has been drawn from garments in the sale. Just one here and there from a vast assemblage. I want you to be here. I'm enthusiastic, I have good reason to be. Quiet Wedding.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pessell, No. 2130 Santee street, was the scene of a charming, though simple wedding, Thursday week, when their daughter, Miss Myrtle Pessell, and William Swanfeldt, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Swanfeldt were made one by Rev. Crist. The entire home was artistically decorated with ferns and pink and white sweet peas, and in the drawing-room, where the service was read, there was an arch of ferns, Easter lilies and the white sweet peas. A gown of white charmeuse, with trimmings of shadow lace, was worn by the bride, who was unattended, and carried a bridal shower of valley lilies and maidenhair fern. The young people have gone to Santa Barbara on their honeymoon, and upon their return will be at home to friends in the Babett apartments.

Miss Edla Swanfeldt entertained recently with an evening affair for the young couple at her home, No. 1832 Michigan avenue. Clusters of pink Maman Cochet roses adorned the home, and music and games were enjoyed, followed by delicious refreshments. Included were: Mr. and Mrs. Everett Charlton, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Swanfeldt, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Miss Irma Charlton, Miss Olda and Miss Elma Wolfarth and Messrs. Roy Charlton, Andrew Swanfeldt, John Swanfeldt and Stanley West.

Miscellaneous Shower.

Mrs. Norman Sylvester Norris and Miss Questa Franklin entertained at the home of Mrs. Norris, No. 3601 Adair avenue, with a miscellaneous shower, in honor of Miss Hazel Kemp, who will become the bride of Ensign Frank J. Lowry, U.S.N., this month. The honoree received many beautiful gifts, which were hidden in a large yellow heart covered with choice flowers and banked in the fireplace. Golden correopsis, field blossoms and jonquils were used about the rooms, where progressive heart prizes were captured by Miss Marian Demmon and Miss Judith Tyrrell. The tallies were gilt-edged hearts adorned with Cupids. There were twenty guests.

Engagement Announcement.

At a pleasant dinner given by F. C. Fetter announcement was made of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Loraine, to Clarence A. Ryland, a prominent young business man of Seattle.

Left Last Week.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Riggin, who have been spending the winter with Mr. Riggin's sister and niece, Mrs. I. R. Thornton and Miss Pearl Thornton of Ardmore avenue, left last week for their home in Maryland. Mrs. Riggin was the honoree at a number of pleasant affairs during her sojourn here.

Thursday Wedding.

Friends in this city will be interested in news of the recent wedding of Miss Blanche Pearl Needham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Needham of No. 1343 Temple street, to Eric John Segerstron, which took place at the family home. The bride, who was unattended, was attired in white crepe de chine and lace and carried a shower of valley lilies. At the conclusion of a honeymoon trip to Del Monte and San Francisco, the young people will occupy their cosy bungalow at Sonora, Cal., where the groom is in the mining and timber business.

Delightful Little Guest.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Rucker Edwards, the latter formerly Miss Bertha Hull, are rejoicing over the arrival of a handsome little baby son. The new visitor has been named W. Rucker, Jr.

A Pleasant Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dirmer of No. 1337 Maltman avenue, accompanied by their two children, Karl and Thelma, left Los Angeles Monday last for an extended trip through Europe. They will sail from Quebec on the Alsatian next Tuesday, and after visiting England and Scotland will tour the continent, returning to Los Angeles some time in September. But for their inability to secure satisfactory accommodations, they would have been passengers on the ill-fated Empress of Ireland.

331-333-335 So. Broadway Jacoby's

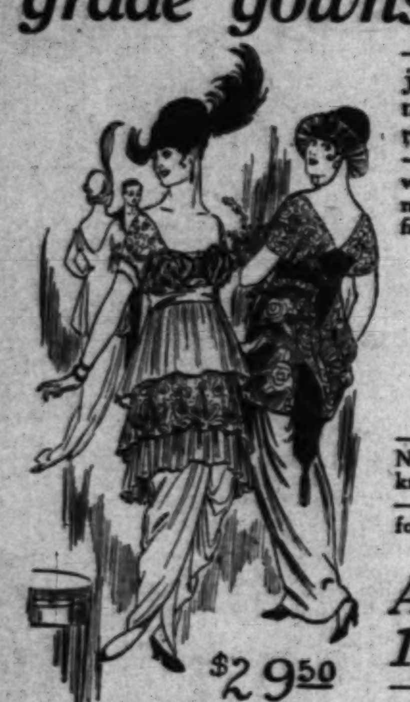
An extraordinary purchase brings a wonderful lot of high grade gowns and costumes at . . . $29.50



—No comparison that we could make—would do these dresses justice—none that we have seen on display in Los Angeles—no matter what the price—have exceeded these in beauty—in richness or in workmanship—

—That's a very strong statement—but the garments themselves will tell it to you even stronger, for there are included, imported models that were to have sold at three—four and even more than five times this price we have named for Monday—

—There are included rich evening gowns of beaded chiffon combined with silk—others of silk and lace and of lace and chiffon—

—There are dinner and reception gowns and two and three-piece costumes of soft new taffeta—of charmeuse—of crepe—of moire and of brocaded silks in all the most favored of the new shades.

—Some few of the garments in this sale are the products of famous New York designers, but the greater part are from Paris—you'll know that the minute you see them—

—You'll be so much better satisfied with yours if you choose it before they have all been looked over—

Third Floor—Jacoby's.

NEW WAISTS—delicate mist-like affairs that it's most necessary for one to look at twice to see. Some are of voile—others are of organdy—most of them are delicately embroidered!

NEW—NEW—NEW—You'll find new things everywhere—new laces—new veilings—new ribbons—new neckwear—new jewelry—new silks—new woolens—new wash weaves and new gloves—Even though you were in the store Saturday you find much out Monday that is strange and new to you.

—Come looking—you will not be importuned to buy!

A clean-up of about 180 summer suits at $19.45

—The smallest saving you can make on any of these 180 suits is almost as much as you pay—in most cases the savings are more than $19.45 and in some cases they're almost double that.

—There are just one or two suits of a kind, that's the reason we have taken these radical reductions. We're anxious to hurry them out to make room for the new models now on the way.

—Included are suits of serge—of gaberdines—crepe weaves—poplins—moires—taffetas—worsted checks and white French serges!—

ONE of the pleasant social functions of the week was the needlework party given Saturday by [illegible] and H. E. Salisbury at their home at No. 123 East Lime avenue. In the winter room, almost in darkness, the decorations were in pines and diamond dust, imitating snow effects with remarkable realism. As a centerpiece for the table a tiny cabin was placed on a gentle slope, surrounded by a miniature forest of snow-covered pine trees. Smoke [illegible] from the wide chimney and a rosy light streamed from the windows and was reflected from the [illegible] crystals. In the summer room was sunshine and flowers. Here sweet peas and roses united to form a delightful effect. Mrs. C. [illegible] was in charge of the winter room and Mrs. Mary Dyer the summer. Mrs. Cross and Mrs. Fowler were responsible for the success of the reception, which concluded with serving of sandwiches and coffee to [illegible] hundred guests. [illegible] hundred and twenty-five members of the Monrovia Woman's Club and their guests lunched "al fresco" under the great pepper trees of the [illegible] Wednesday afternoon. This was the closing meeting of the year for the club, and following the lunch, served at three long tables, a short business session was held.

The many Monrovia friends of W. [illegible]borough, former Mayor of [illegible], and president of the American National Bank of this city, will be interested in learning of his coming marriage, which will take place at the former home in Montgomery, [illegible]

"HELLO BILL." That signifies, almost, the society essence from the south end of the bayshores. The antlered merrymakers have come and gone. Tuesday evening special cars brought the gambolers here, and they continued to come, clear up to Saturday evening, which was the crowning summit of the five days' jollification. The dancing pavilion was the principal ground for the gambol, and here beautiful booths, and merry maidens were everywhere and the "nimble dimes" went glimmering. The Elks danced—and that is not all they did, Mayor Gerety had turned over the monster key to the little city, and the lodge men enjoyed themselves every minute of every minute they were here, and when they left, they were happy. The gambol was considered the best ever, and all seemed to think so.

Hundreds of blossoms and great bunches of greenery formed the decorations which were beautiful beyond imagination. Colton.

THE motif of one of the pleasantest little affairs of the week was a reunion of the members of the first class that ever was graduated from the Colton High School, and fraught with reminiscences of school days, it was a merry occasion all the way through. The gathering of the class, which had numbered only four, and included Mrs. James Green of Fullerton, Mrs. M. A. Bausch, Mrs. E. Lester and Miss Robie French, occurred Monday afternoon at the home of the latter. Blue and yellow had been the class colors and amid a floral bower of blue larkspurs, California poppies and nasturtiums, the guest company, which also included Mrs. James Stolliker, Miss Milliken and Miss Fannie Gilbert, stitched upon fancy work and recalled incidents of High School days. At the time of their graduation Prof. W. S. Bliss, now dean of the San Diego Normal, had been principal, and as a delightful phase a letter from him was read aloud. As seniors the quartette had received many favors, but envious ones had dubbed them "Bliss's pets," and this name clung for many a day. Ere departure time tango pudding and cake was served by the hostess.

Relatives and friends in Colton have received the interesting word that the date for the celebration of the nuptials of Miss Jesse Booth and Attorney Ray Fitzgerald has been set for Monday, June 15, the event to be a quietly-appointed one at the Los Angeles home of the Booth family. A number will be in attendance from this city.

Among the larger affairs shared by the young people was a festively-appointed "open house," kept at the new Methodist Episcopal Church, by the members of the Philathea and Baraca classes, in honor of the Philatheas and Baracas of San Bernardino. A programme, games in the basement and refreshments furnished the Thursday evening's amusement.

A plunge party to Urbita, with afterwards a bounteous basket supper served in the willow arbor, was the jolly way in which the Dozen and Two Thimble Club wound up their series of gatherings Monday night. During the summer vacation a sort of "round robin" letter is to be kept in circulation alphabetically. Those enjoying the picnic outing were the Misses Tacie Hanna, Calla Milliken, Frankie Dickson, May Bailiff, Rowena Bailey, Grace Champion, Marian Lantz, Daisy Davenport, Gertrude Johnson, Zoe Lewis, Annie Waters and Lenna King.

The floral decorations were profuse and during the evening a musicale and literary programme was rendered by Miss Clara Neeley, pianiste; Misses Hazel Lathrop, Susan D. Pierce, sopranos, and Revel L. Miss Goldberg leaves shortly for her home in San Diego, and the social event of Tuesday evening was a farewell to her. The greater portion of the evening's programme was given on the spacious ramada. Amusing results were obtained when the guests were not allowed to use the words "I, yes or no." Miss Martha Malan succeeded in capturing more of the beans used as forfeits than any one else. The prize given Miss Malan was a box of candy beans. Booklets describing Miss Golberg's summer were then made and limericks as an additional souvenir were added. The guests bidden to the farewell in honor of Miss Golberg, were Misses Frances Clippinger, Markling, Clinton, Randall, Malan, Hurlburt, Effie Longenecker, Hughes, Grace Witter, Gibson, Malan, Young and Mmes. On arriving, the guests received bags of lima beans, and with these as money, a merry auction was held, with lively bidding for queer shaped parcels, later found to contain trinkets, infantile toys, and score cards. Partners for the game of the evening were selected by corresponding packages. Yellow flowers and ferns formed the decorations throughout the house. Prizes at bridge were won by Mrs. P. A. Rice, Mrs. W. A. Arneill; Messrs. P. S. Cummings and George P. Austin.

Brimmer Thursday last in honor of the birthday anniversary of her little daughter Elizabeth. Jolly games were enjoyed indoors and out. Pink geraniums and Shasta daisies were combined with pink crepe paper in the artistic decoration of the rooms. One of the popular needlework clubs, the West Side Tatting Club, was entertained Friday at the Main-street home of Mrs. T. F. Tedford in honor of Mrs. William Kenyon, who soon comes to Orange to reside. The condensed sunshine of the lovely California poppies irradiated the rooms where the ladies sat and plied busy needles as they chatted. Dainty Dorothy Perkins roses and ferns beautified the dining-room where dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, and where covers were marked for Mmes. William Kenyon, Henry J. Feldner, W. A. Dyer, N. Raney, L. E. Smith, W. T. Walton, Henry Meehan, Hafer O. Howard, R. F. Dreyer, H. F. Stewart, Miss Ruth Stewart and Mrs. T. F. Tedford.

No Muse in Tobacco Smoke.

[Kansas City Star:] Is smoking a help to literary composition?

Emile Faguet, the academician, an inveterate smoker, thinks not. "I smoke a great deal, but I do not believe that it does any good. I even think it may do harm."

Andre Theuriet, the novelist, who alternates between pipe and cigarette, says: "I have never found that the habit has the least influence on what is commonly called inspiration."

Pierre Loti shares his colleague's opinion: "As far as I have observed, the use of the cigarette has no effect whatever on my faculties."

Among smokers who are members of the French Academy Maurice Barres is not averse to a cigar, while Paul Harvieu considers the habit as a vice and weakness.

Rene Bazin also is severe: "I smoke only an occasional cigarette, but I derive nothing from the practice except neuralgia and the unpleasant knowledge that, in continuing to indulge, I surrender to a weakness which no longer has inexperience as an excuse for it."

No Use for a Dead One.

[Pearson's Weekly:] He was a theatrical lover, and she didn't like his style in the least, for he was constant in his devotion, which made matters worse. She had tried gentle means to get rid of him, but he had disregarded them with painful persistency.

"Dear one," he exclaimed, hurling himself tragically at her feet, "I love you! My life is yours? Will you take it?"

She did, and not like a murderess, but she responded with calm determination: "I will."

He gazed at her rapturously.

"Don't do that," she begged, drawing back from him as if in horror. "I have taken your life, as you requested me to do, and you are henceforth to all intents and purposes dead."

He seemed dazed.

"I do not," she continued, turning aside, "desire to have a dead person in the house, and if you do not go away at once I shall send for an undertaker and have you removed to the nearest cemetery."

It's Got to Be Done Quickly Now

Thousands of people in Southern California really want a piano, but they will not purchase until they can make sure of getting a really first class piano, and ON TERMS WHICH THEY can readily meet. That time has come. Our high grade pianos universally recognized as representing the HIGHEST POSSIBLE STANDARD OF PIANO MANUFACTURE must be sold out into Los Angeles homes now. No reason now why any one should even consider the purchase of an unknown or possibly worthless piano, simply because it is cheap. No need now to deprive yourself for another day of the genuine, lasting satisfaction which you cannot help feeling in the possession of a really splendid instrument.

Pick Out Your Piano Now

Pay When Convenient. Choose from a Storefull

To every home without a piano I have a message of extraordinary interest. But in making the astonishing low prices at which I am compelled to sacrifice the instruments in the EILERS MUSIC HOUSE here, I again wish to make the following frank statement:

EILERS MUSIC HOUSE operate a chain of 41 stores, conditions beyond our control make necessary the closing of most of them. I am called BACK TO OREGON. To ship these pianos to one of the other houses would mean merely added expense and the instruments would still have to be sold. Therefore we pocket the loss right here by taking merely what we can get for them quickly. Money saved is money earned for us or for anyone who will investigate this genuine sacrifice sale and act quickly.

The stock is undoubtedly the largest in SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, virtually all of the nation's most renowned names will be found among the pianos in this sale. You tell us what price you wish to pay and we will give you a piano for it. $35.00 gets a playable old-style piano. For $85.00 will give you choice of used Steinway, Fischer, Kranich & Bach, and many other makes.

See our regular $500.00 to $550.00 uprights now for less than half price.

See our beautiful player-pianos at less than cost to make them. All on sale with many music rolls free.

Elegant grand pianos at less than half of the regular price.

Bring a $5 Deposit

Pay us as best suits your convenience, bring $5 to show good faith. It's not a question of cash or profit with us, but we want to immediately get rid of our stock in this store. If you have any possible use for a piano or player-piano, come at once. No such opportunity as now presented will ever come again in Los Angeles.

Remember, every instrument in this sale, whether piano or player-piano, or grand piano, is backed by the famous EILERS guarantee, in addition to the manufacturer's guarantee.

It is the very first time in the whole history of the industry that an entire establishment, recognized as the largest in California, is to close its doors. It is the first time that pianos of such truly magnificent quality have ever been placed before the public at such advantageous prices and terms. Since EILERS CLOSING OUT SALE commenced it is possible to buy worth while, warranted genuine, high-grade pianos for less than the sensational low offers of heretofore, as this firm is engaged in a campaign for clean methods, honesty and positive proven quality.

Read About Our Prices

No matter what make of piano you've been considering, no matter how much or how little, you have expected to pay for it, you can get that very same make at this store for a good deal less than you had thought of paying for it.

I'm not worried over a mere temporary loss in this matter. I am considering business from a wider, broader viewpoint. If I lose money on these pianos here, selling them for even less than they cost me, I can afford to pocket the loss.

To ship them North and sell them there would mean the cost of crating, the freight charges, likelihood of damage while en route, and then they would still have to be sold. So they are going to go now, every one of them, without reservation.

I'm not asking all cash for these pianos, although you will realize that at the prices I am quoting they ought not to be sold on any other terms than cash. I want simply to put the pianos in Los Angeles homes so that I may close up affairs here without further delay.

Any price you may mention, any terms you may make, will be accepted, if they are anywhere near the bounds of reason.

Think of it—I'm selling the best made player-pianos, the regular $700.00 kind for $320.00. I'm selling the largest size used Weber, Kranich & Bach, Hallett & Davis, A. B. Chase, and Kimball pianos, regular $500 and $550 kind, some of them spick and span, brand new and the very latest, for $245, $265 and $285.

"The Vanguard."

LOCAL MAN IS HERO OF BOOK.

Clark B. Stocking in Bronson's New Story.

Famous "Gun-Fighter" Who Always Upheld Law.

Married Boyhood Sweetheart After Fifty Years.

Clark B. Stocking, living at No. 6328 Denver avenue, in this city, is the man around whom "The Vanguard" by Edgar Beecher Bronson, is written—or rather who furnished the information of his life's story for Bronson. It is a story of the West from the days before the discovery of gold down to the present, and experiences through which Stocking passed comprise a volume of exciting reading.

In 1878 Stocking and Bronson chanced to be on the same stage coach when it was attacked by bandits, and their friendship dates from that day. It was only after much diplomatic persuasion that Stocking consented to furnish the details of adventures during the past forty years. "The Vanguard" is written in the first person, although there is nothing in the book to indicate that the story is being told by any other than Bronson, and the average reader will naturally think it either fiction or the author's story.

THE ROMANCE OF IT.

When Stocking was a mere youth working in a logging camp in Michigan, he met Bessie McVicker, "the only ever-happy, merry-faced, mischievous lass in all that forest side." He loved her, even then; but pushed on to California. Over fifty years later—just four years ago—he sent for her, as neither she nor he had married, and they are now living happily in a little bungalow on Denver avenue.

On his life, he says in "The Vanguard:" "And while for the larger part of forty years I have been reckoned as an outlaw in one part of the country or another; and while enough men have met death at my hands—many more, indeed, than I shall here take space to mention—to start a fair-sized graveyard, my story, I shall tell alike without shame and without pride and without spirit of boast. I shall tell it without shame, for I never killed any but savages and desperate criminals engaged at the time of their taking off either in trying to kill me or to capture property I was employed in guarding—I got there first, that was all; without pride or boast, because no really brave man harbors such sentiments."

DANGEROUS WHEN "SCARED."

He freely admits that there were times when he was scared, and the circumstances described certainly warranted consternation, but Stocking explains that he was always more dangerous when scared, and though he has been modest about it, nevertheless, it is easy to see that more than once he had to fight "like a ton of wild cats."

When the Civil War broke out Stocking enlisted in the Fifth Infantry. Of that, he says: "For the last thirty years I have heard little and have not read a line written on the grand work done by the California column, enlisted in July, 1861, composed largely of miners, bullwhackers, mule-skinners, broncho riders and gamblers, with a sprinkling of lawyers, doctors and merchants from Frisco, Sacramento and the mountain camps. They made history, did those men who formed the little column that, with the aid of a mixed regiment of Coloradoans and native New Mexicans under Kit Carson, took and held the vast territory west of the Rio Grande for the government."

RIDING TO THE RESCUE.

Perhaps the most sensational adventure in Stocking's life, as recorded in "The Vanguard," was when he rescued Dr. Johnson at Green River City. Johnson was a Mormon and had been taken by ruffians to be lynched. Mrs. Johnson implored Stocking to save her husband, and not being able to find assistants he went to the rescue alone.

"When I loped into town, the streets, saloons and stores around its center were practically deserted, for practically the entire population was grouped near the north end of the main street, where the vigilantes were massed about a telegraph pole, over whose cross-arm the stranglers had already thrown the free end of the rope they had knotted to Johnson's neck," runs the narrative in "The Vanguard."

"The way I broke that strangler combination makes me laugh to this day. It proved so easy, and yet I much fear the plain truth of it will sound to the average reader an incredible fable—or worse. Still, there was little of the heroics in my crude strategy, for while in effect I charged into and through several hundred people at full gallop, I figured that the moment powder burned the rank and file of the townfolk would sprint like quarter horses trying to get out of the range.

"And I felt sure that if they did not leg it extra fast, three-fourths of the stranglers would be able to catch up with them, for not one in a hundred of all the vigilantes I ever saw owned nerve enough to stand up before a man with a gun in his hand. Nor did my calculations miscarry. They worked to a nicety, in all but the fact that I got rather more lead in my system than I had counted on.

BREAKING UP THE STRANGLERS.

"Into and through the crowd of onlookers I dashed, scattering them like sheep, and had smashed in among the group of stranglers massed around the perch they had picked for Johnson before they had time to realize what was up. Then, sure that my lead would reach none but those who deserved it, I cut loose with my six-shooters right and left.

"Melt? They just faded into the bald gray buttes of the local scenery, most of them—all of them for sufficient time to let me slash Johnson's hands free and pass him a Winchester as he swung into the saddle of my spare horse. But the moment their first surprise was over there were enough nervy men in the lot to give us all the trouble we could get along with, and no more had the Mormon hit the saddle than we became the center of a hell of hail—it was a mystery we escaped. Nor did I escape scatheless; my left arm and right foot were broken before we had run 200 yards, and then, worst of all, down pitched my horse, dead.

"But Dr. Johnson proved good leather, pulled up instantly and dragged me up behind his own saddle and then on we raced."

"THE STRENUOUS LIFE."

It was only after numerous adventures and more trouble that Stocking finally was clear of that adventure.

So it was that for almost forty years he was out of one "scrape" and into another, but always on the side of the law. He served as an officer, or a stage coach guard in California, Texas, New Mexico, Old Mexico, Arizona, Utah, the Dakotas and Montana.

A few times he went into business, and once opened a hotel at Bismarck where Mark Twain stopped and spent the night reading Stocking's stories and poetry. This incident does not appear in "The Vanguard," but Stocking says: "Mark Twain told me never to let anyone change my stories and poetry, except where the spelling might need it, because they were good." He never met Mark Twain again.

When the Spanish-American War broke out, Stocking offered his services and felt deeply the fact that he was informed he had grown too old for active service. He had never been able to prosper in business, for when misfortune—such as fires or an absconding partner—did not wreck his ventures, he abandoned them to get back into active life.

But now he has found rest and comforts at last—at the age of 74—in Los Angeles. Of that "The Vanguard" says: "I had bought an acre of land in one of the outer suburbs of the beautiful city of Los Angeles. On the land, with these old hands, I built a house. A house? Rather, to be truthful, should I say a cabin, for it is only twenty-two feet by twelve; but now that it is bowered in vines, banked thick about with flowers, warmed by the dear old California sun, kissed by the soft Pacific breeze, and holds my Bessie, the highest and mightiest of earth are not prouder or happier in their ancestral halls than am I in my cabin."

WESTERN WOMAN SOCIAL ASSET AT WASHINGTO

Mrs. Andrieus A. Jones, Wife of Assistant Secreta the Interior, Is a Native of Monterey, Califo Daughter of Pioneer, Who Came Before Gold W Discovered and Tells of Simple Domestic Life.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

Mrs. A. A. Jones,

Wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Mrs. Andrieus A. Jones, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior is among the new arrivals, charming, and interesting of themselves and with an added importance because of kinship with beloved figures in past annals. Mrs. Jones is related to that amiable chatelaine of the War Department in the early Taft days, Mrs. Jacob MacGavock Dickinson, and she took over the lease of the Dickinson home on Connecticut avenue during the first months of her residence here. Mrs. Jones is of the three, whose husbands are high officials of the Department of the Interior, who have this additional interest, namely, Mrs. Thomas Ewing, wife of the Commissioner of Patents, coming of the family so closely identified with the Shermans, and Mrs. Harris, wife of the Director of the Census, who is the daughter of Gen. Joseph Wheeler of Alabama. Mrs. Jones's mother, Mrs. N. B. Stoneroad, who is passing the spring here, was before her marriage Lucy Jane Dickinson, whose father's father was one of the founders of Murfreesboro, Tenn.

OF THE DOMESTIC TYPE.

Mrs. Jones is of the quiet domestic type, broad in her sympathies, but whose fragile health has prevented a more active role in feminine pursuits. Her path has been always led through pleasant places and she has the happy faculty of making home the dearest spot for those about her, whether it be in a furnished apartment, as at present, or the splendid old mansion where she resided during her childhood, a house still a show place on Monterey. She is fond of reading and of all the arts which must be known to understand homekeeping and most of all she loves music and gives whatever time she can from this array of duties to her piano. There is a sturdy little boy of 5, quite the most important figure in the home, after his grandmother, Mrs. Stoneroad, now just past her eightieth birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones come of distinguished Southern ancestry and of bookish people, who, after the fashion of the day, delighted to select some character of history and fiction for special homage. For instance, the name Andrieus borne by Mr. Jones is pure Greek and means, a noble, worthy man.

"My kindred," said Mrs. Jones, "were all book people, finding their chief delight as I must confess I do myself, in history and the great romances of some fifty years ago. Thus my father was named for the great Corsican and from his earliest years he read and studied Napoleon from every standpoint. My grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gallant Duncan Dickinson, were among the first who crossed the continent to California and they selected the lovely old city of Monterey as their home. They resided there for three years and the bricks of which their home was built were the first ever brought to that now beautiful little city. Soon after their arrival they heard the news, which still thrills the adventure loving Californian, namely the wreck of the brig Natalia off the shores Monterey. The Natalia was the ship on which Napoleon escaped from Elba and as such the name thrills all the lovers of the mighty conqueror.

STORY OF NATALIA.

"The Natalia was, if our version of the tale is true, seized from the Spanish during the period in which the Emperor was laying hold of all which would aid him to defy the allies and take possession of France and his beloved legions. Little Beauty Chats

By Blanche Beacon

The Foundation of All Beauty

A good complexion

Is the basis of all beauty.

GOOD complexion is the foundation of all beauty, and the first requisite for a good complexion is cleanliness. If you would carefully wash your skin at least three times a week you would never need a bleach or whitener, except for an occasional coat of tan.

First be sure the water you use is soft. If it isn't, add a teaspoonful of borax to a basin full of water. The greatest foe to good skin is hard water. It causes fine wrinkles and enlarges the pores; besides it doesn't cleanse. Your laundress would not expect your clothes to wash clean in hard water. Why, then, should you expect your skin to be cleansed with it?

After softening the water, which should be hot, dip a fine complexion brush into it, then rub castile soap on your hand until it forms a lather; put this on the brush, but do not rub soap directly on the brush. You want a lather, but not particles of soap on your face. Scrub the skin vigorously, especially about the edges of the hair, rinse in water also softened by the addition of almond meal and a little magnesia. Then rinse in cold water, softened only by the magnesia.

See that you never use hard water on your face and hands if you would have your skin smooth.

In drying your face, first pat off all moisture with a Turkish towel. Then rub vigorously to bring the blood to the surface.

Never retire after washing your face without first rubbing cold cream into your skin. You have washed out the natural oils and you must replace them or the skin will become rough and dry.

When rubbing on the cold cream do it in a rotary motion, using two fingers on the chin, cheeks and forehead and one finger about the corners of the eyes and nose. Make the upward stroke a little harder and firmer than the downward stroke. Pat the skin gently if you would build up the flesh, and make your strokes firm if you would reduce.

Contrasts.

VOLCANOES ARE SACRED THINGS.

JAPANESE BUILD TEMPLES AT THEIR BASES.

The Cherry Blossom Islands Have an Embarrassment of Riches When It Comes to Evidences of Past and Present Seismic Agencies. Also Hot Springs.

[Saturday Review:] No sport is the worse for a spice of danger. Mountaineering pure and simple forms no exception to the rule. Who will deny that the satisfaction felt at conquest of a difficult peak is largely due to the consciousness that a certain risk has been successfully faced? So with volcanoes. To the exhilaration which is the special reward of the climber is added the excitement drawn from a danger immeasurable but no less real. It may demand less endurance, less agility, than your craggy precipitous peak; but it involves a risk against which no amount of mountaineering skill avails. Much, of course, depends upon the configuration of the cone and upon one's knowledge of its behavior. Volcanoes have moods and tenses. By careful study of these it is sometimes possible to predict whether or not a crater may be approached with safety. But predictions of this kind make, at best, a slender reed to lean upon. Many of the most violent eruptions on record were preceded by no warning whatever—and eruptions of the violent sort are common among the volcanic mountains of Japan.

Picturesque scenery and hot springs are the concomitants of volcano action in Japan. Ancient or modern, active or extinct, the monuments of volcanic force may here be relied upon to furnish weird and impressive scenes. The globe-trotter [illegible] taught us to think of Japan as a land "where it is always afternoon," where dainty and seductive [illegible] beguile for the opposite [illegible] tedium of daily existence. Those who have traveled farther afield have found a different Japan. They have found a wild hinterland where contorted primeval rocks rise side by side with lofty "mountains of desolation," where silent, time-worn formations join company with violently active cones. Remarkable effects ensue from the juxtaposition of these contrasted types. On the one hand the shapely curves of a young volcano, on the other the jagged lines of the splintered "old" cone. Both, as often as not, luxuriously wooded—the work of a moist and genial air; while, again, the rugged schistose or granite adds its quota of sublimity.

[illegible] of the products of volcanic energy—in eyes Japanese, [illegible] the mineral spa. Hot springs indeed occur in regions [illegible] of ancient crystalline rocks; but they are more often the legacy of a volcano that is dead and gone. [illegible] per cent. of the onsens, or hot springs, are to be found in the volcanic regions. Strange to say, the most active volcanoes are not thus distinguished. The colossal Fujiyama, which one hesitates to call extinct, has no hot springs about its ample base, while the adjacent Hakone and [illegible], where volcanic action is [illegible], abound in mineral springs.

In Japan the hot-spring resorts are the holiday resorts. When the dog days descend upon the people of the lowlands, there is a rush for the hillside. Your Japanese tripper, however, mounts to some high valley up, where it is cool, where mosquitoes cease from troubling, where at any hour of the day or night he may soak to his heart's content in "mountain water" which, [illegible] milk and honey, without money and without price.

The quest of the volcano in Japan should satisfy the traveler who, after the manner of the Athenians, is in search of "some new thing." Providing, at the same time, a modicum of adventure, it appeals [illegible] to romantic and awe-[illegible]. As it necessitates complete departure from the beaten track, it will give opportunities of seeing that somewhat elusive entity "real Japan." In Japanese volcanoes are sacred. In the temples at their bases the stranger will see the Japanese at prayer; in the springs he will see them at play. Of all the phases of their national life [illegible] always that of the Japanese—these are the ones in which the "little people" of the Far East are seen to the best advantage.

One has not to search for volcanoes in Japan; there is an embarras de richesse. The records of the Tokyo Seismological Observatory show 165 "independent" volcanoes, as distinguished from the secondary or parasitic. Over and above these are innumerable necks, stumps and "basal wrecks." Of the "independent" cones, some forty or fifty are still active at their summit, or principal, craters. To be more precise is not possible. Dead craters have a fashion of coming to life again, unaccountably and at short notice; and, in many cases, it is difficult to decide whether a volcano should be classed as active, or merely as a solfatara.

Among these multitudinous plutonic upheavals of all ages and dimensions—from the 12,000-foot Fuji to the neck which scarcely merits description as a hill—ample scope exists for variety of form and action. The outside world knows but one Fujiyama; the Japanese know many. By them Fuji is recognized as the type of the young, normal and unmarred volcano. While none attains the dimensions of the great cone of Suruga, several show the same perfection of form. But the irregular and the abnormal are also largely represented, while the styles of action vary from the incessant but quiet "breathing" of one volcano to the cataclysmic outburst of another which, with sudden and terrific violence, blows a vast hole in its side and then, as suddenly, relapses into ominous silence.

WHEN THE BAROMETER FALLS.

Enormous Changes Occur in Pressure That Are Offset by the Universality of the Air.

[Kansas City Star:] It is not an uncommon thing at this time of year for the barometer to shift an inch within twenty-four hours. Sometimes the change is even greater. Few persons have any idea what tremendous changes in the atmosphere are indicated by such a rise or fall in the mercury column.

A cubic inch of mercury weighs a half pound. When the mercury falls an inch a weight of one ton is removed from every 4000 square inches of surface. This is a ton for every area 5¼ feet square. If your house, for instance, is 25x40 feet, with an area of 1000 square feet, a load of about thirty-six tons is lifted from the roof every time the barometer shows an inch fall. That is, a thirty-six-ton load would be lifted if the house were airtight. But as air presses in every direction there is as much of a push upward against the roof from below as there is of a push downward from above. So the roof actually feels no effect from the removal of this heavy load.

In the same way, a man of average size would be relieved of a weight of about a ton and a half if there were no air chambers in the human body.

It has been figured that a fall of an inch in the barometer over a territory 400 miles square removes a weight from the surface of the earth of 160,000,000,000 tons. If this were loaded on freight cars, twenty tons to the car, and thirty cars to the train, more than 260,000,000 trains would be required to move it. If each train were 500 feet long they would stretch out in a line more than 25,000,000 miles long.

The only noise that accompanies this great transportation feat is made by the wind that does considerable roaring in the course of such violent atmospheric changes.

Sign-Making by Parachute.

[Washington Star:] If you want to hang a sign on a stack 100 or 200 feet high do not go to the heavy expense of erecting scaffolding, to say nothing of risking the lives of workmen who would be required to ascend such perious heights on a precarious footing. Use a parachute after the unique method employed recently by a power company in St. Joseph, Mo.

When the stack was originally built no means to ascend it from the inside or outside was provided. The cost of scaffolding, which was first contemplated, would have been more than the proposed sign was worth. Then some one thought of the parachute. It was put into the stack and sent up by the flue gas. After reaching the top, 140 feet in the air, it fell naturally on the outside. Attached to it was a line which was utilized to pull a heavier cable into place. Then followed the steel frawerok, and after that the steel framework, and after that the electric bulbs for the sign.

The sign says "Do It Electrically." The letters extend one below another down the stack for over one hundred feet. A flasher turns on the letters one by one. The sign is seen in all parts of St. Joseph because of its height and the central location of the stack.

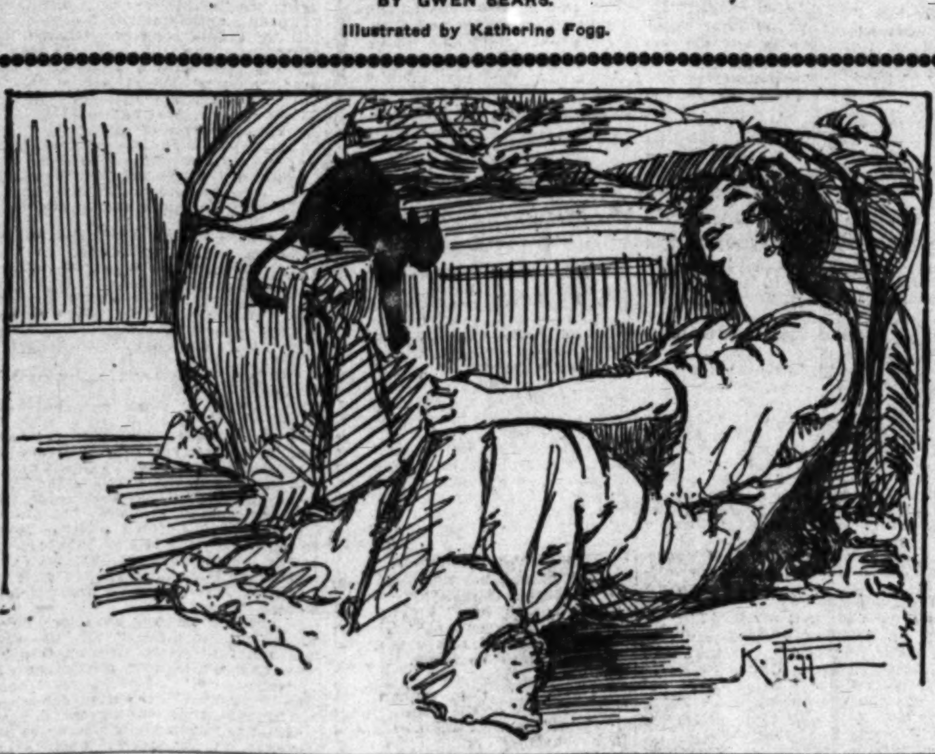
THE MOODS OF GENEVIEVE.

BY GWEN SEARS.

Illustrated by Katherine Fogg.



THE CHILD MOOD.

There is a Mood for me that in the twinkling of an eye can change the whole outlook of my life and make my boasted point of views wretched, monstrous things. Such power has this Mood that always, always must I marvel and go down on my knees before it. The Child Mood, the guileless, gentle Child Mood that comforts me while I pour out my troubled heart.

It is this innocent Mood that compels me to see with crystal vision, blind to all evil. It is this glorious youthful Mood that has saved me from becoming the saddest of all things—a cynic. It is this generous hearted Mood that has kept me young in spirit and immune from hardness even when bitterest disillusionment has been my lot.

Nights I toss on my bed, vividly awake to the treachery and heartlessness of the world. In my troubled mind I rehearse the bitterness of the day, the insincerity I have met, the cruelty I have witnessed.

"Oh, I have lost faith in everyone," I sob. "There is no truth, there is no good anywhere, life is a bitter mockery."

The Child Mood then creeps softly, ever so softly, to my bedside and crouches upon my pillow. "There is faith, there is trust, there is honesty, look with my eyes, dear girl, and you will see," she whispers.

But even while I continue to grieve, with the great sweeping tide of unbelief threatening me, the Child Mood comes close, close, to me and lays her tender cheek against mine, and puts her hand over the heart's wound. "Have faith again, look the whole world in the eye, with candor, and it will not fail you," she murmers.

Oh, she is right, she is always right. I then fall asleep with her watchful eyes upon me, and her loving faith lulling me into childhood dreams, and lo! when I open my eyes hours and hours later, refreshed in body and in mind, the sun welcomes me with its golden pureness, joy sings in my heart again aid eternal tenderness enshrouds my soul. It did not go, the Child Mood saved me. The rapture, the sweetness, the faith of my being lives in this blessed state of content.

Where are the tears of last night's grief? From under my pillow I bring forth the damp little ball of handkerchief, and laugh at it, yea, laugh at it from the very depths of my happy being.

Then down on my knees I fall with the little wad of dampness pressed to my lips. "Oh Child Mood, stay with me, oh, stay with me, never, never, let me grow harsh and bitter. Never let my heart wither and my faith die. Keep me young, young always, dear Child Mood, and full of love and happiness as I am now."

And she heard me—and stayed with me. She sings in my heart every moment, whether it be in the gray commercial world, or my tiny home—she sings to me, this darling optimistic little Child Mood.

Mutual Recognition.

[Indianapolis News:] Entering a tram car, a Scottish fishwife thought she recognized another passenger as an acquaintance. She bent forward and with a smile said: "That's you, isn't it? I hardly kent ye." "Aye, that's me," replied the other, "and that's you, isn't it? Hoo are ye?" "Oh, A'm hae that bad," was the reply. After this silence ensued and the first speaker, on further scrutiny, became convinced that the woman opposite was not an acquaintance, after all. Again she bent forward and with an apologetic smile remarked: "But that's nae you at a'!" "Nae," replied the other. "It's nae nane o' us."

The feature for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday is a two-reel Victor, "The Doctor's Testimony," in which Florence Lawrence, the Maude Adams of the screen, is featured.

Miller's.

"The Billionaire," by his lavish spending and unusual adventures, is creating a roar of laughter that can be heard for blocks around Miller's Theater, where he is the chief attraction for the last times today and tonight. This unusual three-reel farce comedy is in a class by itself and is the talk of the town.

Monday's programme at this popular house includes the exclusive first-run showing of the sixth episode of "The Perils of Pauline." This unusual story of love and adventure is getting more thrilling and exciting each issue, and the troubles of the beautiful heroine and her fascinating lover get worse and harder to overcome right along.

On Thursday the feature is to be that greatest of all American college plays, "Strongheart," made famous by Robert Edeson. This offering has been made into a photoplay by an all-star Biograph cast, headed by Henry Walthall, Blanche Sweet, Frank Lanning and Gertrude Robinson.

Egan School.

The first annual commencement week of the Egan school has been announced by Frank Egan for the week of June 15, commemorating several years of unmitigated labor for the instillation of art in the minds of the children.

Every effort has been made to make the event one long to be remembered. The entire faculty of the Egan school has put its shoulder to the wheel, and each night, at the Little Theater, an entirely different programme will be presented throughout the week, tending to cover the whole range of dramatic expression.

With the double reason of having the pupils appear before playing audiences, and also on account of the limited capacity of the Little Theater, it has been arranged to make a nominal charge of 10 cents for each seat, thus tending to eliminate those who would go merely from curiosity's sake, and giving more opportunity to those really interested in the work to secure seats for the several performances.

Jardin de Danse.

When the Jardin de Danse makes its initial bid for patronage next Wednesday night Los Angeles will have what is declared to be a counterpart of New York's famous Jardin de Danse atop of the New York Theater, and admittedly the most popular and successful amusement place of the kind in this country.

The local Jardin de Danse is located in the old Armory building, at the corner of Eighth and Spring. It will be under the management of the Blackwood Amusement Company, of which John H. Blackwood is the general manager. In the conduct of the Jardin de Danse, Mr. Blackwood will have the assistance of a large and experienced staff of attaches.

The Jardin de Danse will represent all that is newest and most popular in the line of dance palaces. The interior of the building has been transformed into a veritable garden, aglow with electric lamps and brilliantly beautiful with myriads of flowers and plants. The dancing floor, it is said, is the largest in the entire West, and will accommodate 500 couples at a time. The dance music will be provided by an orchestra of twenty, under the direction of E. P. Foot, recently musical director of the Belasco, Morosco and Burbank theaters. Manager Blackwood predicts that the splendid music, together with the spacious and perfect floor, will instantly place the Jardin de Danse at the front of similar resorts in Southern California.

There will be exhibitions of the newest of the modern dances each night at the Jardin de Danse. For the first week the popular Meiklejohn and Hazel Allen will display their most graceful dances and introduce several dances that are the prevailing rage in New York, although they are as yet unknown to Los Angeles. Meiklejohn and Miss Allen will give exhibition dances each night at the Jardin de Danse. The dancing sessions will be held every night in the week, with the exception of Sunday, from 8 o'clock until midnight.

The feminine patrons of the Jardin de Danse will find much to approve in the beautiful parlors that have been provided for their comfort, while the men will have smoking-rooms of generous size and complete equipment. Light refreshments will be served at the Jardin de Danse by a caterer, who promises some novel innovations in this line.

Ruined by Mexico's War.

[F. J. Splitstone in Leslie's:] Hard luck stories are common in Guadalajara. Every few minutes I was introduced to some one with the explanatory remark that Senor So-and-so was from Sinaloa or Sonora or Chihuahua, and that his property was in the hands of the rebels. These refugees get little news from their estates, but what they do get is not comforting. If they were farmers, they are sure that their horses and cattle have been stolen, their machinery ruined, their buildings burned and their laborers dispersed. If they own city property it is probably being rented by the rebels to whoever will take it, after the furniture and other personal property have been looted. There are, today, men in Guadalajara, as well as in most of the other larger cities under Federal control, who three years ago were worth millions, and who are now living on the charity of their friends because they have been forced to leave their properties in hostile hands. The rebel courts are declaring forfeited the properties of many refugees who were unpopular.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN.

BY HAROLD MAC GRATH.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Kathlyn Hare, believing her father, Col. Hare, in peril, has summoned her, leaves her home in California to go to him in Allaha, India. Umballah, pretender to the throne of that principality, has imprisoned the colonel because he fears the American may insist on the royal rights which the king has conferred upon him. Upon her arrival in Allaha Kathlyn is informed by Umballah that, her father being dead, she is to be queen and must marry him forthwith. Because of her refusal she is sentenced to undergo two ordeals with wild beasts.

John Bruce, an American and fellow-passenger on the boat which brought Kathlyn to Allaha, saves her life. The elephant which carries her from the scene of her trials becomes frightened and runs away, separating her from Bruce and the rest of the party. After many perilous adventures she finds a retreat in the jungle, only to fall into the hands of a band of slave traders, who bring her to Allaha in the public mart. She is sold to Umballah, who, finding her still unsubmissive, throws her into the dungeon with her father.

Bruce and his friends effect the release of Kathlyn and the colonel, and the fugitives endeavor to reach the coast, but are overpowered by a band of brigands, and the encounter results in the colonel being delivered to Umballah. Kathlyn and Bruce escape from their captors and return to Allaha, where Kathlyn learns that her father, while nominally a king, is in reality a prisoner. Kathlyn's resourcefulness and bravery are the means of rescuing him, and once more they steal away from Allaha, but return broken-hearted when they learn that Winnie, Kathlyn's young sister, has come to India, and has been forced by Umballah to enter the palace and accept the crown of Allaha. One attempt to free her almost costs Kathlyn her life, but the second plan succeeds.

The people of Allaha, at last weary of Umballah's misrule, rise against him. The revolutionists are being overpowered, when Kathlyn assumes command of the scattered forces. She saves the day for them. Umballah flees for his life.

Umballah has crept back to the city and, with one of the women of the harem as an accomplice, murders the poor old king. It is arranged to have Pundita, a member of the royal house and wife to Ramabai, crowned queen. But Umballah, having secured the priesthood, the great power in Allaha, as ally, comes back to the palace with absolute authority. His first official act is to imprison Kathlyn, Winnie, the colonel and Bruce.

The photodramas corresponding to the installments of "The Adventures of Kathlyn" may now be seen at a number of the leading moving picture theaters. By this unique arrangement with the Selig Polyscope company it is therefore possible not only to read "The Adventures of Kathlyn" in this paper but also to keep pace with each installment of it at the moving picture theater.

CHAPTER XXIII.

There is an old saying in Rajput that woman and the four winds were born at the same time, of the same mother; blew hot, blew cold, balmily or tempestuously, from all points at once. Perhaps.

In the zenana of the royal palace there was a woman, tall, lithe, with a skin of ivory and roses and eyes as brown as the husk of a water chestnut. On her bare ankles were gem incrusted anklets, on her arms bracelets of hammered gold, round her neck a rope of pearls and emeralds and rubies and sapphires. And still she was not happy.

From time to time her fingers strained at the roots of her glossy black hair and the whites of her great eyes glistened. She bit her lips to keep back the sobs crowding in her throat. She pressed her hands together so tightly that the little knuckles cracked.

"Ai, ai!" she wailed softly.

She paced the confines of her chamber with slow step, with fast step; or leaned against the wall, her face hidden in her arms; or pressed her hot cheeks against the cool marble of the lattice.

Human nature is made up of contraries. Why, when we have had the courage coolly to plan murder, or to aid or suggest it, why must we be troubled with remorse? More than this, why must we battle against the silly impulse to tell the first we meet what we have done? Remorse: what is it?

Now this woman of the zenana believed not in the God of your fathers and mine. She was a pagan; her heaven and hell were ruled by a thousand gods, and her temples were filled with their images. Yet this thing, remorse, was stabbing her with its hot needles, till no torture devised by man could equal it.

She was the poor, foolish woman who loved Durga Ram; loved him as these wild Asiatic women love, from murder to the poisoned cup. Loved him, and knew that he loved her not, but used her for his own selfish ends. There you have it. Had he loved her, remorse never would have lifted its head or raised its voice. And again, had not Umballah sought the white woman, this butterfly of the harem might have died of old age without unburdening her soul. Remorse is the result of a crime committed uselessly. Humanity is unchangeable, for all its variety of skins.

And here was this woman, wanting to tell some one!

Umballah had done a peculiar thing; he had not laid hand upon either Ramabai or Pundita. When asked the reason for this generosity toward a man who but recently put a price on his head, Umballah smiled and explained that Ramabai was not only broken politically but was a religious outcast. It was happiness for such a person to die, so he preferred that Ramabai should live.

Secretly, however, Ramabai's revolutionary friends were still back of him, though they pretended to bow to the yoke of the priests.

So upon this day matters stood thus: the colonel, Kathlyn, Bruce and Winnie were prisoners again; Ahmed was in hiding, and Ramabai and his wife mocked by those who once had cheered them. The ingratitude of kings is as nothing when compared to the ingratitude of a people.

A most ridiculous country; to crown Kathlyn again (for the third time) and then to lock her up. Next to superstition as a barrier to progress there stands custom. Everything one did must be done as some one else had done it; the initiative was still chained up in the temples, it belonged to the bald priests only.

But Umballah had made two mistakes; he should have permitted the white people to leave the country and given a silken cord to the chief eunuch to apply as directed. There are no written laws among the dark peoples that forbids the disposal of that chattel known as a woman of the harem, of zenana. There are certain customs that even the all-powerful British raj must ignore.

The catafalque of the dead king rested upon the royal platform. Two troopers stood below; otherwise the platform was deserted. When Ramabai and Pundita arrived and mounted the platform to pay their last respects to a kindly man, the soldiers saluted gravely, even sorrowfully. Ramabai, for his courage, his honesty and justice, was their man; but they no longer dared serve him, since it would be at the expense of their own lives.

"My lord!" whispered Pundita, pressing Ramabai's hand. "Courage!" For Pundita understood the man at her side. Had he been honorless, she would this day be wearing a crown.

"Pundita, they hissed us as we passed."

"Not the soldiers, my lord."

"And this poor man! Pundita, he was murdered, and I am powerless to avenge him. It was Umballah; but what proof have I? None, none. Well, for me there is left but one thing, to leave Allaha for good. We two shall go to some country where honor and kindness are not crimes but virtues."

"My lord, it is our new religion."

"And shall we hold to it and go, or repudiate it and stay?"

"I am my lord's chattel; but I should despise him if he took the base course."

"And so should I, flower of my heart!" Ramabai folded his arms and stared down moodily at the man who, had he lived, could have made Pundita his successor. "Pundita, I have not yet dared tell you all; but here, in the presence of death, truth will out. We cannot leave. Confiscation of property and death face us at every gate. No! Umballah proposes to crush me gradually and make my life a hell. No man who was my friend now dares receive me in his house. Worship is denied us, unless we worship in secret. There is one pathway open." He paused.

"And what is that, my lord?"

"To kneel in the temple and renounce our religion. Do we that, and we are free to leave Allaha."

Pundita smiled. "My lord is not capable of so vile an act."

"No."

And hand in hand they stood before the catafalque, forgetting everything but the perfect understanding between them.

"Ai, ai!"

It was but a murmur; and the two turned to witness the approach of the woman of the zenana. She flung herself down before the catafalque, passionately kissing the shroud. She leaned back and beat her breast and wailed. Ramabai was vastly puzzled over this demonstration. That a handsome young woman should wail over the corpse of an old man who had never been anything to her might have an interpretation far removed from sorrow. Always in sympathy, however, with those bowed with grief, Ramabai stooped and attempted to raise her.

She shrank from his touch, looked up, and for the first time seemed to be aware of his presence. Like a bubble under water, that which had been striving for utterance came to the surface. She snatched one of Ramabai's hands.

"Ai, ai! I am wretched, lord, wretched! There is hot lead in my heart and poison in my brain! I will confess, confess!"

Ramabai and Pundita gazed at each other, astonished. "What is it? What do you wish to confess," cried Ramabai quickly. Perhaps . . .

She clung to his hand. "They will order my death by a silken cord. I am afraid. Krishna fend for me!"

"What do you know?"

"His Majesty was murdered," she whispered.

"I know that," replied Ramabai. "But who murdered him? Who built that cage in the palanquin? Who put the tiger there? Who beat and overpowered the real bearers and confiscated their turbans? Speak, girl; and if you can prove these things there will be no silken cord."

"But who will believe a poor woman of the zenana?"

"I will."

"But you cannot save me from the cord. They have taken away your power."

"And you shall give it back to me!"

"I?"

"Even so. Come with me now, to the temple."

"The temple?"

"Aye; where all the soldiers are, the priests . . . and Durga Ram!"

"Ai, ai! Durga Ram; it was he! And I helped him, thus: I secured permission to go into the bazaars. There an assault took place under the command of Durga Ram, and my bearers were made prisoners. Durga Ram, disguised as a bearer, himself freed the tiger which killed the king. Yes! To the temple! She who confesses in the temple, her person is sacred. It is the law, the law! I had forgotten! To the temple, my lord!"

Before the high tribunal of priests, before the unhappy Kathlyn, before the astonished Umballah, appeared Ramabai and Pundita, between them the young women of the zenana, now almost dead with terror.

"Hold!" cried Ramabai when the soldiers started toward him to eject him from the temple.

"What!" said Umballah; "will you recant?"

"No, Durga Ram. I stand here before you all, an accuser! I know the law. Will you, wise and venerable priests, you men of Allaha, you soldiers, serve a murderer? Will you," with a wave of his hands toward the priests, "stand sponsor to the man who deliberately planned and executed the miserable death of our King? Shall it fly to Benares, this news that Allaha permits itself to be ruled and bullied by a common murderer; a man without family, a liar and a cheat? Durga Ram, you slew the King; you turned upon the hand that had fed and clothed you and raised you to power. . . . Wait! Let this woman speak!"

A dramatic moment followed; a silence so tense that the fluttering wings of the doves in the high arches could be heard distinctly. Ramabai was a great politician. He had struck not only wisely, but swiftly, before his public. Had he come before the priests and Umballah alone, he would have died on the spot. But there was no way of covering up this accusation, so bold, direct; it would have to be investigated.

Upon her knees, her arms outstretched toward the scowling priests, the woman of the zenana tremblingly told her tale; how she had saved Umballah during the revolt; how she had secured him shelter with her sister, who was a dancer; how she had visited Umballah in his secret chamber; how he had confided to her his plans; how she had seen him with her own eyes become one of the fake bearers of the palanquin.

"The woman lies because I spurned her!" roared Umballah.

"Away with her!" cried the chief priest, inwardly cursing Umballah for having permitted this woman to live when she knew so much. "Away with her!"

"The law!" the woman wailed. "The sanctity of the temple is mine!"

"Hold!" said Kathlyn, standing up. In her halting Hindustani she spoke: "I have something to say to you all. This woman tells the truth. Let her go unafraid. You, grave priests, have thrown your lot with Umballah. Listen. Have you not learned by this time that I am not a weak woman but a strong one? You have harried me and injured me and wronged me and set tortures for me, but here I stand, unharmed. This day I will have my revenge. My servant Ahmed has departed for the walled city of Balakhan. He will return with Balakhan and an army such as will flatten the city of Allaha to the ground, and crows and vultures and tigers and jackals will make these temples their abiding places, and men will forget Allaha as they now forget the mighty Chitor." She swung round toward the priests. "You have yourselves to thank. At a word from me, Balakhan enters or stops at the outer walls. I have tried to escape you by what means I had at my command. Now it shall be war!. War, famine, plague!"

Her young voice rang out sharp and clear, sending terror to all cowardly hearts, not least among these being those beating in the breasts of the priests.

"Now," speaking to the soldiers, "go liberate my father, my sister and my husband-to-be; and woe to any who disobey me! For while I stand here I shall be a queen indeed! Peace, or war, famine, and the plague. Summon the executioner. Arrest Durga Ram. Strip him before my eyes of his every insignia of rank. He is a murderer. He shall go to the treadmill, there to slave till death. I have said it!"

Far in the rear of the cowed assemblage, near the doors, stood Ahmed, in his old guise of bhisti, or water carrier. When he heard that beloved voice he felt the blood rush into his throat. Aye, they were right. Who but a goddess would have had at such a time an inspiration so great? But it gave him an idea, and he slipped away to complete it. Balakhan should come in fact.

So he did not see Umballah upon his knees, whining for mercy, making futile promises, begging for liberty. The soldiers spat contemptuously as they seized him and dragged him off.

The priests conferred hastily. Balakhan was a fierce Mohammedan, a ruthless soldier; his followers were without fear. The men of Allaha might put up a good defense, but in the end they would be overwhelmed; and the gods of Hind would be cast out to make way for the prophet of Allah. This young woman with the white skin had for the nonce beaten them. Durga Ram had played the fool; between the two women he had fallen. They had given him power, and he had let it slip through his fingers for the sake of reprisal where it was not needed. Let him go, then, to the treadmill; they were through with him. He had played his game like a tyro. They must placate this young woman who the people believed was their queen, but who they knew was the plaything of politics and expediencies.

The chief or high priest salaamed, and Kathlyn eyed him calmly, though her knees threatened to refuse support.

"Majesty, we bow to your will. Allaha cannot hope to cope with Balakhan's fierce hillmen. All we ask is that you abide with us till you have legally selected your successor."

"Who shall be Pundita," said Kathlyn resolutely.

The chief priest salaamed again. The movement cost him nothing. Once Balakhan was back in his city and this white woman out of the country, he would undertake to deal with Ramabai and Pundita. He doubted Balakhan would stir from his impregnable city on behalf of Ramabai.

The frail woman who loved Umballah raised her hands in supplication.

Kathlyn understood. She shook her head. Umballah should end his days in the treadmill; he should grind the people's corn. Nothing should stir her from this determination.

"Majesty, and what of me?" cried the unhappy woman, now filled with another kind of remorse.

"You shall return to the zenana for the present."

"Then I am not to die, majesty?"

"No."

"And Balakhan? inquired the priest.

"He shall stand prepared; that is all."

The people, crowding in the temple and in the square before it, salaamed deeply as Kathlyn left and returned to the palace. She was rather dizzy over the success of her inspiration. A few days might pass without harm; but sooner or later they would discover that she had tricked them; and then, the end. But before that hour arrived they would doubtless find some way of leaving the city secretly.

That it would be many days ere Pundita wore the crown—trust the priests to spread the meshes of red tape!—Kathlyn was reasonably certain.

"My girl," said the colonel, "you are a queen, if ever there was one. And that you should think of such a simple thing when we had all given up! They would not have touched Umballah. Kit, Kit, whatever will you do when you return to the humdrum life at home?"

"Thank God on my knees, dad!" she said fervently. "But we are not safe yet, by no means. We must form our plans quickly. We have perhaps three days' grace. After that, woe to all of us who are found here. Ah, I am tired, tired!"

"Kit," whispered Bruce, "I intend this night to seek Balakhan!"

"John!"

"Yes. What the deuce is Allaha to me? Ramabai must fight it out alone. But don't worry about me; I can take care of myself."

"But I don't want you to go. I need you."

"It is your life, Kit, I am certain. Everything depends upon their finding out that Balakhan will strike if you call upon him. At most, all he'll do will be to levy a tribute which Ramabai, once Pundita is on the throne, can very well pay. Those priests are devils incarnate. They will leave no stone unturned to do you injury, after today's work. You have humiliated and outplayed them."

"It is best he should go, Kit," her father declared. "We'll not tell Ramabai. He has been a man all the way through; but we mustn't sacrifice our chances for the sake of a bit of sentiment. John must seek Balakhan's aid."

Kathlyn became resigned to the inevitable.

Umballah. He tried to bribe the soldiers. They laughed and taunted him. He took his rings from his fingers and offered them. The soldiers snatched them out of his palm and thrust him along the path which led to the mill. In Allaha political malefactors and murderers were made to serve the state; not a bad law if it had always been a just one. But many a poor devil had died at the wrist bar for no other reason than that he had offended some high official, disturbed the serenity of some priest.

When the prisoners saw Umballah a shout went up. There were some there who had Umballah to thank for their miseries. They hailed him and jeered him and mocked him.

"Here is the gutter rat!"

"May his feet be tender!"

"Robber of the poor, where is my home, my wife and children?"

"May he rot in the grave with a pig!"

"Hast ever been thirsty, highness?"

"Drink thy sweat, then!"

"Give the 'heaven-born' irons that are rusted!"

The keepers enjoyed this raillery. Umballah was going to afford them much amusement. They forced him to the wrist bar, snapped the irons on his wrist, and shouted to the men to tread. Ah, well they knew the game! They trotted with gusto, forcing Umballah to keep pace with them, a frightful ordeal for a beginner. Presently he slipped and fell, and hung by his wrists while his legs and thighs bumped cruelly. The lash fell upon his shoulders, and he shrieked and grew limp. He had fainted.

Among the late king's papers they found an envelope addressed to Kathlyn. It was in grandiloquent English. Brevity of speech is unknown to the East Indian. Kathlyn read it with frowning eyes. She gave it to her father to read; and it hurt her to note the way his eyes took fire at the contents of that letter. The filigree basket of gold and gems; the trinkets for which he had risked his own life, Kathlyn's, then Winnie's. In turn Bruce and Ramabai perused the letter; and to Ramabai came the inspiration.

They would seek this treasure, but only he, Ramabai, and Pundita would return. Here lay their way to freedom without calling upon Balakhan for aid. The matter, however, had to be submitted to the priests, and those wily men in yellow robes agreed. They could very well promise Durga Ram his freedom again; pursue these treasure seekers and destroy them, that would be Durga Ram's ransom.

The return to the palace was joyous this time; but in her heart of hearts Kathlyn was skeptical. Till she trod the deck of a ship homeward bound she would always be doubting.

Bruce did not have to seek Balakhan. The night of Kathlyn's defiance Ahmed had acquainted them with his errand. He was now on his way to Balakhan. They need trouble themselves no longer regarding the future.

"All goes well," said Ramabai; "for to reach this hiding place we must pass the city of Balakhan. I know where this cape is. It is not large. It juts out into the sea, the Persian gulf, perhaps half a dozen miles. At high tide it becomes an island. None lives about except the simple fisherman. Still, the journey is hazardous. The truth is, it is a spot where there is much gun running; in fact, where we found our guns and ammunition. I understand that there are great secret stores of explosives hidden there."

"Any seaport near?" asked the colonel.

"Perhaps seventy miles north is the very town we stopped at a few weeks ago."

The colonel seized Kathlyn in his arms. She played at gaiety for his sake, but her heart was heavy with foreboding.

"And the filigree basket shall be divided between you and Pundita, Kit."

"Give all to her, father. I have begun to hate what men call precious stones."

"It shall be as you say; but we may all take a handful as a keepsake."

Two days later the expedition was ready to start. They intended to pick up Ahmed on the way. There was nothing but the bungalow itself at the camp.

Umballah was thereupon secretly taken from the treadmill. He was given a camel and told what to do. He flung a curse at the minarets and towers and domes looming mistily in the moonlight. Ransom? He would destroy them; aye, and take the treasure himself, since he knew where it now lay, this information having been obtained for him. He would seek the world, choosing his habitation where he would.

Day after day he followed, tireless, indomitable, as steadfast upon the trail as a jackal after a wounded antelope, never coming within range, skulking about the camp at night, dropping behind in the morning, not FICTION.

MUSICAL "TRILBY."

By Ernst von Wolzogen. by Edward Breck and Charles B. W. Huebsch, New York.

way, and with no Svengali, is a musical "Trilby." The pathos, ambitions and musical students who gathered around Liszt are woven into the story of the impetuous Florian, who storms at his "geese" pupils—and sometimes buys them oranges afterward. Ilonka, the little Hungarian maiden who "plays with the fire of the devil" more places than at the piano, is a creature of charm with gay petulancy and moods that run the gamut faster than her own nimble fingers can dance over the ivory keys.

After she and Florian have kept a vigil by the side of a dying child in a home of poverty, and as Ilonka falls on the couch to sleep, Florian puts his arms around her, tells her of his love and wants to marry her at once. She answers nimbly in Hungarian. He demands to know if that means: "I love you." She replies "No. It means you are crazy," and straightway goes to sleep.

Indeed, and she leads Florian a merry chase, and, with a clear conscience, gets him into embarrassments, and sometimes gets him out of those into which she did not lead him, of which Florian has a number.

The character of Liszt is splendid: We learn to know him well. And the happiest day—maybe next to the happiest day of Florian's life is when the master puts approval upon Florian's playing and bids him remain as a pupil.

In places the book is inclined toward the farcical; in many places there are pages after pages of delicious satire on the "creative artist" and the mediocre types who affect genius; and as a whole it is very pleasing—a charming, merry, rather unconventional story.

ESCAPADES WITH BOOKS.

THE SECRET BOOK. By Edmund L. Pearson. The Macmillan Company, New York.

MR. PEARSON'S imagination must be respected. "The Secret Book" is a sort of Alice in Wonderland grown up and turned into a book-lover. It places our eyes, for a part of the time at any rate, at the binoculars of the public librarian and we look at the world from a new viewpoint. The author tells us "this question of the identity of Ibid is one that should be cleared up. High schools and college libraries are full of earnest students who admit themselves amazed at the vast number of his writings, and moreover at the universality of the man. 'The old gink,' we heard one sophomore complain, 'seems to have written a book on every subject in the world.'"

The book takes its title from the imaginary adventure of a delirious bibliophile who wanders into a secret alcove and comes across the "Liber Crypticus" of Cassius Parmensis—the rarest book in the world, of which only one copy remains. He is unable to read anything in it because of interruptions of a busybody in the form of an elderly individual who insists on talking. The bibliophile justly murders the pestiferous individual—let that be a warning to all given to interrupting the readers of books, especially in public libraries!

The volume is shot through with bright threads of irony. It is especially adapted to the pleasure of literary folk, and the chapter on "Writing a Best-Seller" is as clever as pages from Bret Harte's "Condensed Novels."

WHOLESOME LOVE STORY.

THE HEART'S COUNTRY. By Mary Heaton Vorse. Houghton, Mifflin Co., Boston.

THIS is a love story for those who do not like the ordinary kind; it is not rapid in action, not melodramatic in development, and not a mock-heroic between the covers. It possesses an unusual beauty of expression, and—if we may be pardoned for using a word so much abused until it has almost fallen into disrepute—it is a sweet story.

A generation and more ago Ellen was a little girl with tomboyish propensities. She didn't particularly care about growing up, and kept a journal from which Roberta (who tells the story) copies from time to time. Ellen and Alec played together and scandalized the neighbors by innocent escapades.

As Ellen grows up she learns of love and gives her betrothal to a stern youth with rigid ideas on feminine proprieties, and then, gradually, the youthful engagement is broken. Approaching maturity, Ellen gives her love to another—not Alec, who watches and waits patiently. This new sweetheart is a trifle wayward, more than a trifle—irresponsibly so. He wounds Ellen, whose loyalty is unshaken by the protests of friends and family.

In the meantime, more out of sense of obligation than from love, Alec had offered his hand to a girl in a near-by town, and intended to marry and take care of her because he knew she loved him and that Ellen did not.

But—! The author waves her magic wands, and circumstances break up and reform their design to the heart's desire.

THE INNOCENT ADVENTURESS.

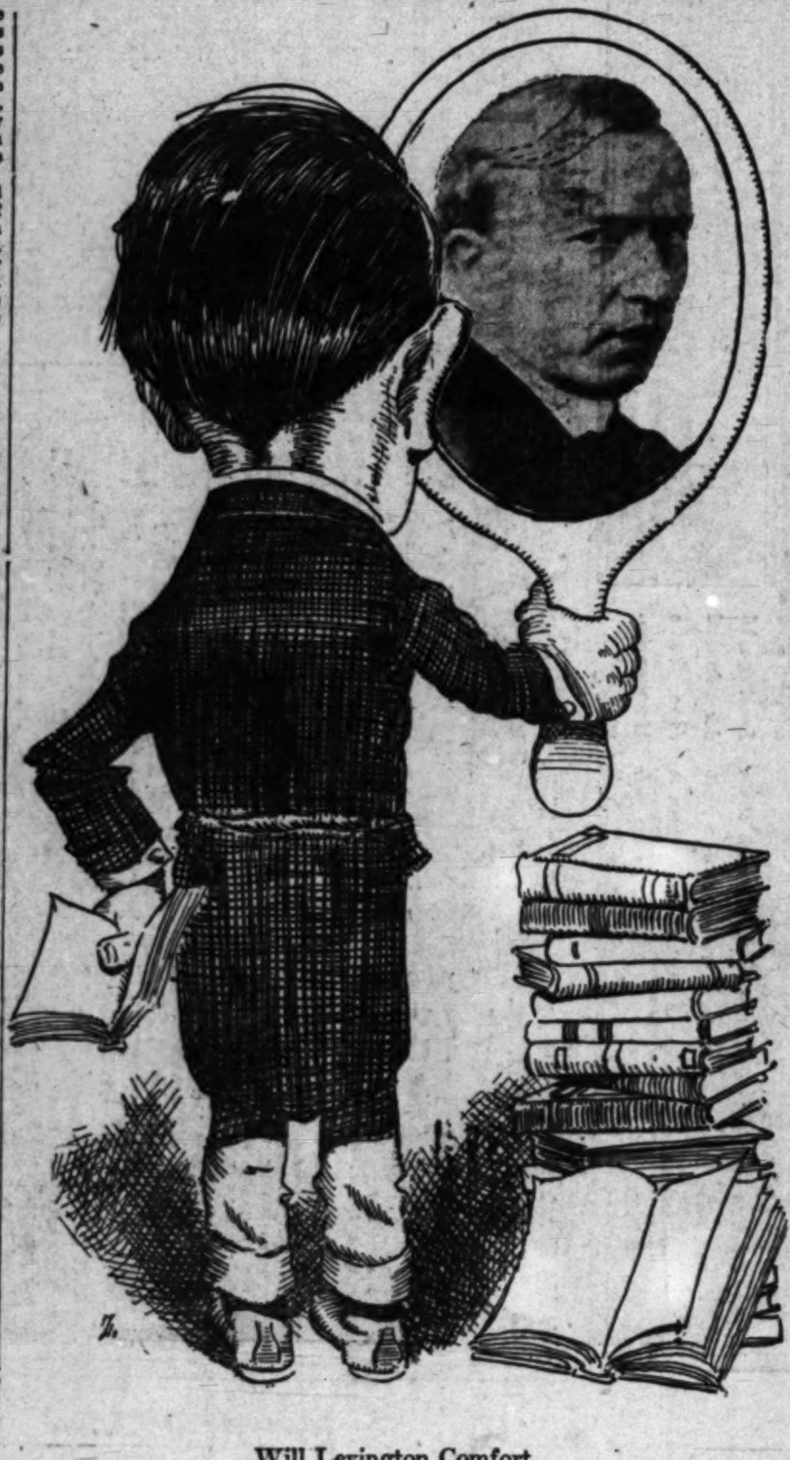
THE SALAMANDER. By Owen Johnson. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

WITH a fifteen-page preface Mr. Johnson tries to make a big book out of "The Salamander." Even the fifteen pages are too few to prove an antidote to the escapades of the lying, lecherous virgin whose charm is alleged to arouse mad passion in all the men whom she meets. The preface sets forth that women through the evolution of suffrage and allied activities are due to evolve into sex adventuresses of the "Salamander" type.

When a girl whose charm we doubt, though the author works any number of ruses to convince us that she has it, crowds flippancies and malicious coquetry into 500 pages it requires all of Mr. Johnson's art to keep the over-dose of chemically-pure indecencies from nauseating; but when, added to and a part of that, the biggest editor in New York, the most fastidious and wealthiest roue, the biggest theatrical producer, an honored and dignified judge, and lesser fry like boyish millionaires, do heavy and passionate melodramatics over a girlish figure with no responsive passion, we believe it takes considerable density on the part of the reader not to be bored or outright disgusted. But the climax comes when she marries one of the stuffed heroes and, so we are informed, becomes "a conventional member of society—rather extreme in her conservatism."

Dore Baxter is represented as a virginal, teasing parasite; lying, luring and bleeding admirers, but remains an unscathed salamander (incidentally, there is no such animal) through all the fires of passion she arouses. Perhaps there are women conceited enough to think they can play the game—and, encouraged by Mr. Johnson's imagination, a few may be instigated to try—and come out untouched.

But only a poor, little, rouged female pining for excitement would ever dream—day dream, that is, and even she couldn't be so stupid as to be serious—of attaining the success in bartering with undelivered goods that this novel uses as its sole excuse for existing. Perhaps it wouldn't have been so apparently foolish if the author's preface had not asked us to take him seriously. In places it reads like a farce, for at times there is humor in it, but that is smothered beneath the ponderous crudities and annoying, unreal, mawkish situations.



Will Levington Comfort.

Upon reaching the age of 35, Mr. Comfort holds the mirror up to himself and invites us to look at what he has been, what he has done, what he is, and what he hopes to be. "Midstream," his latest book (reviewed on this page,) is confessional rather than autobiographical.

GOOD SHORT STORIES.

THE INCANDESCENT LILY. By Gouverneur Morris. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

FORUM STORIES. Selected by Charles Vale. Mitchell Kennerley, New York.

LOOT. By Horace Annesley Vachell. George H. Doran Company, New York.

WE WOULD be at a loss to name an American author of this day who can equal Gouverneur Morris at his best. Before magazines of dubious literary quality lured Mr. Morris to themes that even his exquisite skill can scarcely convert into something more than mediocrity, he stood high and apart as one who wrote strong and charming stories. And in this volume it seems incongruous that "The Incandescent Lily" and "The Custody of the Child" should be accompanied by such an artificial story as "Legay Pelham's Headache."

"The Incandescent Lily" is a modern fairy tale of a poor man accustomed to rich friends who wants to "make good" as a botanist for the love of a woman. Exploring for rare flowers in China, he is tempted by a princess and all of her wealth to forget the outside world. She shows him the sacred incandescent lilies, and offers him his choice between a bulb and a pearl necklace of fabulous value. He chooses the bulb.

"The Forum Stories" are chosen from those by American authors appearing in the Forum magazine. The collection is a credit both to the magazine and to the discrimination of Mr. Vale, who made the selection. Among the better known writers represented are Edwin Bjorkman (who has become identified as an American)) John S. Reed, Reginald Wright Kauffman and Margaret Widdemer. It is perhaps as unfair as it is difficult to attempt to say which of the sixteen stories are best, but "His Immortality" (Kauffman) and "Little Darling" (Rose Strunsky) are certainly among them.

Mr. Vachell belongs to England, and is a great discouragement to young writers. His first three stories under the general title of "At Gloriani's" must cause the sincere, struggling, unknown author to despair of ever writing with such charm around themes so unique. Not all of his stories equal those, as "The Black Pearls of Balgarno" falls flat because the miser remained true to his character; but the "Kangaroo" fills expectations. Mr. Vachell is one of the good short-story writers whom paucity of plot has not driven from romantic themes.

FROM CLOISTER TO CASTLE.

JEHANE OF THE FOREST. By L. A. Talbot. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia and London.

JEHANE is the embodiment of sweet, passionate, but innocent youth. Although she lived in a day long past, she is delightfully real. She has the wild charm of a maid brought up in a forest home, within sound of the sea. She lived in feudal days, when England was not at internal peace, with her warring factions. Jehane has a beautiful older sister, who is gentle, withal, and not so full of the life of red berries that border the wooded paths as little Jehane. The young giant, Edwy, comes to sue the old Woodwarder for the hand of the older sister. But having kissed Jehane in the forest, his peace of mind is gone. Jehane, having never had another object about which to weave the romance of her young imagination, imagines herself in love with Edwy, but she despises him for his duplicity. In the meantime, she meets the great Earl's son in the forest. She performs a service for him by which she saves him from disinheritance, and he takes an oath to grant her any request, to the extent of half of his possessions.

Jehane, later on, to escape the passion of Edwy and insure her sister's happiness, enters a convent to serve as a novitiate. The marriage is consummated, and when she is considering that it may not be necessary for her to make the final sacrifice, Edwy surprises her as she is gathering apples in a tree near the wall of the convent. The bestiality of his passion sends her back, determined to take the veil. But her usefulness in the world of action is not at an end. The romantic rescue at the eleventh hour, the siege of Lord Lambert's castle, Jehane as a warrior maid—the pretty romance is not wanting in thrills. The heroic maid proves herself a better man than the best in the story, but a real woman in the denouement.

GENTLE MEDIOCRITY.

OUR MR. WRENN. By Sinclair Lewis. Harper & Brothers, New York.

MR. WRENN is the sort of character whom nothing short of genius would be able to render interesting. He is one of those human documents of mediocrity, not sufficiently ignorant and uncouth to form a distinct type, yet too hopelessly ordinary and lacking in discretionary qualities to make him otherwise than an irritation to individuals of even ordinary culture. Desk clerk in a New York novelty house, apologetic and acquiescent, he still burns with extraordinary longings. He yearns to travel, to see the world, to thrill over great stretches of ocean, and lands "with a foreign flavor"; and to this end he lays aside every spare dollar, denying himself all pleasures and luxuries. Presently a windfall occurs in the inheritance of a few hundreds of dollars. He has been studying books of foreign travel and Baedeker preparatory to such a moment; but when it comes, he does not find the courage to quit his "job" until he is reprimanded by the "boss," after which he "talks back," and eventually embarks on a cattle ship. After a rough and tumble voyage, in more ways than one, he arrives in Liverpool. But eager as he has been for sight-seeing, Bill does not make a great success of it. He has not the independence of spirit to seek out things for himself, nor has he the social genius to make acquaintances. Overcome by a terrible homesickness, he is ready to return to his own country, when he meets in London the red-headed, slim, uncorseted young woman, who takes an interest in him because he is a novelty. Bill, of course, is delighted, although he is conscious of the gulf between them. Istra amuses herself, and goes on a tramp through England with him. Istra is a little lady with shockingly Bohemian ways [illegible] which she means no harm. Bill has the good sense not to lose his head altogether.

Bill does not remain away long. But his trip has discovered to him his want of friends, and when he returns, he proceeds to make them. Something of a better manliness has come to him through his experience. In fact, notwithstanding his irritating, genteel commonness, he engages the sympathies. And when his final struggle comes between two kinds of love, he rises to a certain dignity.

TRAPPED BY HERSELF.

THE WOMAN'S LAW. By Maravene Thompson. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

GAIL ORCUTT became the wife of a roue when but 17 years of age, and after a six months' honeymoon awoke to find her ideal of the man she has loved suddenly shattered. She then ceases to be a wife to the man, but remains under his roof and bears his child, thoroughly aware of the many liaisons of her husband. When the boy is 6 years of age, the father, in a jealous rage over a woman, kills an artist friend. He goes immediately to his wife, and confesses his crime. For the sake of the child she determines to shield Orcutt. She conceals him in the house, and has her chauffeur drive her slowly up Fifth avenue, while she searches every face she passes. Presently she orders a halt, and alighting approaches a man who in feature and form is an almost exact duplicate of her husband. She asks him to give her one day of his time, and gently pushes him into the car. Once there, she discovers that he is suffering under a condition of mental suspension. Wrapped in her husband's fur coat, he is taken into the house without the servants discovering that he is not Orcutt. The real Orcutt is gotten safely out of the country, and the substitute is sent to a private institution by the State, having been pronounced insane, where he is treated by a famous alienist. The complications set in when he is pronounced cured, saving in the fact that he has no memory of events prior to his strange attack. To his bewilderment he finds himself at the head of the Orcutt household, provided with a beautiful wife—at least in name—and a handsome little son. While he accepts the situation as it is thrust upon him, having always been a man of high moral principle it is very hard for him to believe in his alleged criminal past. The frightful position in which the woman has placed herself furnishes the substance of the story.

A DOCTOR'S SACRIFICE.

SWEETAPPLE COVE. By George Van Schaick. Small, Maynard & Co., Boston.

IN THIS tale everything does not turn out in the cut and dried way, but more after the manner of real life. The story has a peculiar interest, most of the scenes being laid among the quaint fisherfolk of the Newfoundland Coast. Another unique feature of the book is that it is told through the diaries and letters of three or four of the principal characters. Dr. John Grant is in love with a professional nurse in the big metropolis of New York. They have been sweethearts ever since childhood, but the young lady is not so certain of her heart as she was in the childish days, and she is immensely absorbed in her work. Both young people are natives of Newfoundland, and both know the conditions of poverty, sickness and neglect in the little fishing villages. The girl stirs the aspirations in the man to do some good in the world, and he prepares to go to some of these villages to help better conditions, although he well knows that there will be no compensation to himself saving in the deed. While the girl refuses to become a party to an engagement, he declares that he will wait patiently for her. He plunges into his work on the bleak coast, never hesitating to make the most exacting sacrifices, to go long distances by land or sea to the relief of the sick and needy. A beautiful young woman of wealth and position comes with her father in their neat little schooner to the Cove for a season's fishing. Of course the girl and the doctor meet. Likewise, of course, they go together on fishing and boating excursions in the little rifts between the good man's work. The girl becomes interested in his labors, and awakens to her first impulses to be helpful to humanity. The young doctor, in caring for a beautiful little French boy in whom both he and Helen are interested, contracts dyphtheria. The denouement is totally unexpected, although one is constantly on the alert for the clean odor and the starchy swish of the little nurse's skirt.

UNCLASSIFIED.

FOR THE IMMIGRANT.

THEY WHO KNOCK AT OUR GATES. By Mary Antin. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

MARY ANTIN, who won so much attention with her autobiographical book, "The Promised Land," now comes forward as a somewhat impassioned advocate for the immigrant. "They Who Knock at Our Gates" reads very much like an oration, and a Fourth of July oration at that. The book fails in being so effective as the author's obvious sincerity undoubtedly hoped for, and principally because she has not made clear her difference of opinion with those members of the nation with whom she is presumably disagreeing. She says "admit the immigrants." So do we all. We add that we want only desirable immigrants. So does Miss Antin, thus: "I do not ask that we remove all restrictions and let the flood of immigration sweep in unchecked. I do ask that such restrictions as we impose shall accord with the loftiest interpretation of our duty as Americans." But she does not take the pains to define those restrictions which shall not be removed, and talks only vaguely, though eloquently, of "our duty as Americans." A little more attention to premises, and less to adjectives, would have been of material benefit to her argument.

PROOF IN EXPERIMENT.

INDUCTIVE VERSUS DEDUCTIVE METHODS. By W. H. Winch. Warwick & York, Baltimore.

MR. WINCH writes with authority born of long experience in his professional duties as one of the official inspectors of English schools, and, what is, perhaps, more important, he brings to bear upon the problems he has investigated a familiarity with experimental methods—the study of concrete problems of education at first hand in the classroom, with all of the exactness of experimental control. The presentation has the special merit of being sufficiently detailed to enable any teacher who may desire to do so to repeat the experiments and verify the conclusions for himself.

GLIMPSES OF GOOD BOOKS.

MEMORABILIA MATHEMATICA. By Robert Edouard Moritz. The Macmillan Company, New York.

The "Memorabilia Mathematica," or the philomath's quotation book, is different from anything we have ever seen, in that it is a large book filled with quotations from great, quaint and classical authors on various phases of mathematics. In fact, after looking over this book of Prof. Moritz we are inclined to reverse an earlier opinion established some years ago to the effect that mathematics is a dull, dry study.

WITH THE RUSSIANS IN MONGOLIA. By H. G. C. Perry-Ayscough and R. B. Otter-Barry. (Preface by Sir Claude MacDonald.) John Lane Company, New York.

Perhaps the first, and certainly a complete, detailed account of the Russians' financial and agrarian invasion of Mongolia is set forth in this volume. The book is very thorough, describing the people, their customs, their government, and what one may understand between the lines of dispatches that come out from time to time with reference to development and government of the country.

NAPOLEON AT BAY. By F. Loraine Petre. John Lane Company, New York.

"Napoleon at Bay" is the fifth of the author's studies of Napoleonic campaigns, and shows Napoleon after the disastrous campaigns in Germany, left to stand at bay in defense of a sovereignty reduced by the natural limits of the Rhine, the Alps and Pyrenees. His two months' war with the armies of Bohemia and Silesia in Champagne is also described. The publishers affirm that this volume is the first in English to give an account in detail of the terrific campaign of 1814 made by Napoleon.

FRENCH CIVILIZATION IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY. By A. L. Guerard. The Century Company, New York.

This volume, the work of an author who is French by birth and English by education, is a comprehensive and philosophical survey of France during the nineteenth century, touching the political, social and intellectual influences and developments, and supplemented by a study of present-day conditions. The main periods of the century—the First Empire, the Restoration, the July Monarchy, the Second Empire and the Third Republic—are treated at length.

BEAUMONT, THE DRAMATIST: A Portrait. (With Some Account of His Circle, Elizabethan and Jacobean, and of His Association with John Fletcher.) By Charles Mills Gayley. The Century Company, New York.

Calling Beaumont and Fletcher the "Castor and Pollux of Elizabethan literature," Prof. Gayley proceeds to a review of Beaumont's family and early life. His and Fletcher's development is traced to London and their relations with Shakespeare, Johnson and the theatrical leaders of the period are described. The works of the men, their subsequent fortunes and their position in literature is estimated, and Prof. Gayley is competent, indeed, to make an estimate. He, as Swinburne, declares Beaumont to have been the "more heavenly" of the twins.

THE GREEK SPIRIT: Phases of Its Progression in Religion, Polity, Philosophy and Art. By Kate Stephens. Sturgis & Walton, New York.

The author frankly states that this is a book for those who have not familiarized themselves to any extent with the ancient Greeks, and begins far back with the Aegean people and comes up even past the fall of Pericles. The transition and development of art, religion and government is given through all the periods down to the decadence of the Greek spirit. It is splendidly written, but a little too much haste in drawing to an end is apparent.

REPRESENTATIVE ENGLISH COMEDIES. (With Introductory Essays and Notes and a Comparative View of the Fellows and Followers of Shakespeare.) Vol. II. Edited by Charles Mills Gayley. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Volume II deals with "the later contemporaries of Shakespeare: Ben Jonson and others"—the "others" being Chapman and Marston, and the plays included are "Everyman in His Humour," "The Alchemist," "The Silent Woman," "Eastward Hoe" and "The Merry Devils of Edmonton." It is difficult to speak too highly of the work that is being done to bring out these representative English comedies. Many of them are now inaccessible to even the zealous reader, and it is to be hoped that this classification will be followed by the tragedies.

TERRY'S JAPANESE EMPIRE: With Chapters on Manchuria, the Trans-Siberian Railway, and the Chief Ocean Routes to Japan. By T. Philip Terry. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

We could scarcely imagine anything more comprehensive and compact. Over 1150 pages, with twenty-one maps and plans, are crowded into a volume of a comfortable size for handling. Bits of history, places of interest, the best roads, and ample descriptions of cities and territory are presented in abundance. As a guide book it seems as complete as anything possible.

THE REVOLT OF DEMOCRACY. By Alfred Russel Wallace. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York.

Mr. Wallace was the last of Nineteenth Century titans. He lived to see the present tension between the men who work and the men who hire, and encouraged the revolt of the working class against existing conditions to a moderate degree. He believes that each and every man who needs it is given self-supporting work, but draws an emphatic line between supplying the opportunity for work and the opportunity for idleness.

ESSAYS AND MISCELLANIES. By Joseph S. Auerbach. (Two Volumes.) Harper & Brothers, New York.

Mr. Auerbach's essays are a negative sensation. We mean by that, this is the period of affected paradoxes and outraged metaphors, and Chesterton has been imitated until the height of originality is saneness. These essays have it. The essay on the Bible is very fine, and the discourse on "A Club" is remarkable in its sympathy and pleasantness—it is something that we might have expected from Thoreau had he lived in a city.

FRENCH NOVELISTS OF TODAY. By Winifred Stephens. John Lane Company, New York.

The first edition of this book was published in 1908, and served to introduce to English readers some novelists who had attained recognition in France and were unknown to us. The missionary aspect of the volume still gives value to it, although most of us are familiar (at least with the names) of Anatole France, Paul Bourget, Rene Bazin and Pierre Loti, though hardly so much so with Marcel Prevost, Maurice Barres and Edouard Rod—all of whom are discussed. A list of their more important writings is also given.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST., by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life. Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL. MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HELP; HELP.

So you are going to rush right out and match your knowledge of automobile values with some poor boob of a second-hand broker? In your own line of business what happens to the wise guy that tries to beat you at your own game? If he gets the best of the deal, it is a good sign somebody's foot slipped. Find me a man who ever got a real bargain in a second-hand car, and I will show you several who have been stung by some philanthropic gent who was "suddenly called East." Remember, that most any one can "guarantee" the condition of a rebuilt car, but a reliable firm's guarantee is usually based upon an expensive rebuilding job rather than a hasty tinkering up covered by a cheap job of paint. One of our regular rebuilt APPERSON JACKRABBIT CARS, with the regular SHETTLER guarantee as to their mechanical condition, is worth more to you and will give you better service than any new low-grade car that you could purchase at an equal price. APPERSON cars are high-grade, and free from petty troubles, no matter how old they are. Some of our most valued customers are the purchasers of our rebuilt cars. They were told the exact truth when they bought their cars, and are satisfied with their purchases.

Attention! Contractors, road builders, lumber dealers and house movers.
I have a Knox Martin tractor that will haul 12 tons of any material with a 20 per cent. overload and will guarantee this Knox tractor to do everything that I claim, by a bond to indemnify any purchaser from loss for one year.
Investigate this before you purchase any trucks, because tractors will haul twice as much material, as the largest truck manufactured at one-half the cost of maintenance. This tractor has an automatic dump body attached.
Terms to suit responsible party or discount for cash. Address 2B, box 113, TIMES OFFICE.

I BOUGHT 2-ACRE LOT IN THE SANTA MONICA foothills, between Soldiers' Home and the sea, San Vicente Blvd. and car line close by; this lot overlooks a vast expanse of mountain, valley and sea; I paid $2800; quarter down, but can't go through with contract, second payment being due; the property is very cheap at $3000, and will soon go to $5000, there being little of it; convenient building sites with elevation and view are scarce at $2000 per acre; this is one of the very best; take up this contract and give me a Ford touring car for my equity; you will have a wonderful bargain. LEWIS, 60437.

FIRST OF SEVERAL.

Bungalow Just Started on Reno Street, One of Number to Be Erected in Silver Lake Terrace.

Construction has been begun upon the first of a series of six or more bungalows to be erected by Sydney B. Brown and L. M. Passmore in the Silver Lake Terrace tract in the North Wilshire district. The house now under way is on the west side of Reno street, north of Temple. It will contain seven rooms and is being built to order for a buyer. The place will complete a block of similar improvements erected by the same builders on Reno.

Two of the additional bungalows planned are to be started on the east side of North Vendome street, north of Temple, late this month. The others will follow shortly after. All are to be of unusually attractive design and appointment and each will contain seven rooms.

The tract is in a district that is being given a considerable development impetus as the result of the early prospect of the beginning of work upon the magnificent Silver Lake parkway and boulevard, to extend from Silver Lake on the north to Sixth street on the south. The northern boundary of Silver Lake Terrace lies entirely along the Occidental boulevard arm of the land condemned for the parkway.

Walter, southeast corner Third and Chicago streets, Boyle Heights, Los Angeles, and lot on Figueroa street, near Sixty-fifth street, being taken in payment.

BUYS BOULEVARD HOME.

The home of Harold Hyde Braly, a member of the Janss Investment Company, at No. 238 Andrews boulevard, was sold during the past week to A. V. Andrews, a Los Angeles attorney. The consideration is not given. The house is of an English type of architecture, the exterior being of shake construction. There are twelve rooms. R. E. Ford, manager of the house and lot department of the Janss company, handled the transaction.

OVERLOOKING THE SEA.

The first of a number of attractive new residences projected at Clifton-by-the-Sea is now under construction at that shore place. F. S. Hill of Venice is the builder, and expects to make the house his permanent home. The dwelling will be of the chalet type and is being erected on D avenue, facing the Clifton Country Club. Other homes, it is announced, are to be started at once by various of the recent purchasers of sites in the subdivision.

POLITICAL TIPS.

Believing that in the coming elections there will be a large gain in the number of Republican members of Congress, the Republicans in Washington enjoy the preparation of estimates of the numerical strength of the next Congress. A gain of at least eighty-five seats from the Democrats is expected, which would give the Republicans control of the next House by a small margin—about ten votes. There may be a tidal wave, but this is not figured upon in the counting of the political chickens. In the present House the Democrats number 290, and the loss of eighty-five seats would reduce their number to 205; the Republicans number 124, and a gain of eighty-five seats would increase their number to 209. There are in the present House fifteen Progressives and five Progressive Republicans. Some of these seats may be gained by the Republicans, thus making them a pretty safe majority. The dissatisfaction throughout the country over the result of the Wilson tariff promises a large Republican gain in the coming elections; the only question is how extensive it will be.

In his speech before the foreign trade convention at Washington, Secretary Bryan apparently enunciated the present government policy toward foreign trade development. "It is our desire," he said, "to obtain for Americans equality of opportunity in the foreign markets, but," he continued, "the Wilson administration cannot in any way assume responsibility for, or guarantee the financial standing of Americans who engage in commercial or industrial enterprises beyond the boundaries of the United States, and the support promised by this government does not imply any obligation to interfere by force or by the menace of force in the financial or political affairs of other countries." In other words if Americans make a poor investment abroad, the present administration at Washington will not help them out. This is probably the first time that the government of one of the largest countries in the world told its business people that it would not help them in the preservation of their foreign business. If China, for instance, should desire to cheat the American builders of its railroads out of the money due them it could do so without interference by the administration at Washington. This is free trade with a vengeance."

This is a white man's administration, or the southern representatives in the President's Cabinet want to know the reason why. For years without number the recorder of the Treasury has been a colored man; not so with the Wilson administration. In a similar way the recorder of the District of Columbia has been a colored man, but now Hoke Smith, the Senator from Georgia, demands that the President appoint a white man to the place without further delay, the term of the incumbent having expired.

Democratic Representative A. Mitchel Palmer of Pennsylvania wants to go to the Senate, and President Wilson is understood to have promised to aid him in every way possible, and may even take the stump in the Keystone State, as he realizes that Pennsylvania will be an important territory to both parties in the coming campaign. Roosevelt will undoubtedly take the stump in Pinchot's aid to try and land him in the Senate in opposition to both Penrose and Palmer. This will make a triangular contest that will have its interesting features.

There are going to be some surprises in the Ohio campaign. Besides Foraker there will be two other candidates for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, former Congressman Ralph D. Cole of Findlay and Warren G. Harding of Marion. The former was the chief opponent of Foraker until Harding entered the field; the latter has been a lifelong personal and political friend of Foraker. Nevertheless, when informed of Harding's action Foraker welcomed him into the race. But whoever may be nominated it is believed that the friends of all the candidates will unite and support him in the campaign.

A canvass of the Democratic members of Congress from Kentucky indicates an expectation that former Gov. Beckham will get the nomination for the United States Senate as the real successor of the late Senator Bradley. At the same time it is understood that what is known as the "Bradley organization" in Kentucky will get behind Marshall Bullitt of Louisville, formerly Solicitor-General of the United States. Gov. McCreary is evidently more favorable to Johnson N. Camden of Versailles, whom he will appoint to serve out the balance of Senator Bradley's term, thus giving Camden an inside chance for the Senatorship nomination.

The recent primary election in Pennsylvania cost the State not less than $500,000, or about $1 or more for each vote cast. As the nominating results are not much different from what they were under the old convention method, which cost the State nothing, it seems to be a high price the taxpayers of the State are paying for the primary fad. Practically the same results of the primary elections prevail in all the States which have adopted the system. Human nature seems to be a pretty poor article when it costs so much to just put candidates in nomination, and the same or more expense is incurred on election day.

The Democrats in Washington are inclined to lay the expected administration slump in the coming elections to the door of Secretary Bryan because of his foreign policy, or lack of policy. One thing in particular stirs them up, and that is the exportation of munitions of war to Mexico. Vera Cruz was closed to a German shipment to Huerta, but the same was landed at another port. The Constitutionalists are permitted to secure shipments of arms and ammunition through Tampico. Nothing besides the waving of an olive branch at Niagara is done to stop bloodshed in Mexico, and meantime the American forces are at Vera Cruz fighting the insect pests and the malarial atmosphere at three-quarters of a million dollars a day expense.

Congressman Slemp of the Ninth District of Maryland would like to retire, but may have to again become a candidate in order to save the district, as he seems to be the only person whom the Republicans believe can be elected. Gov. Stuart (Democrat) has announced his intention to take the stump in the district to help elect his friend, R. Tate Irving, as Slemp's successor, that the district may be brought into the Democratic column.

BRITISH GUIANA GOLD DISCOVERY.

Rich Finds Are Reported on the Rupununi River.

American Prospectors Have Staked Twelve Claims.

Big Rush Is Expected Into the Interior Region.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, June 6.—A statement made recently by Sir Walter Egerton, the Governor of British Guiana, at a meeting of the Royal Agricultural and Commercial Society in Georgetown, the capital, to the effect that gold had been discovered on the southern frontier of the colony, has now been confirmed by news from the Rupununi.

It appears that two American prospectors, Messrs. James and Hart, sent applications to Georgetown by the government officer of the district for twelve claims between the head of the River Takutu and the Tucurutu Mountains, the district being situated in forest country about twenty-five miles from the savannah.

It is reported that these prospectors expect, judging from the results of preliminary trials, to make as much as sixty ounces per day with each sluice so soon as they can obtain the services of expert spade men.

The gold hitherto produced in British Guiana has been won from alluvial areas on the Demerara, Essequibo, Potaro, Mazaruni, Cuyuni, Puruni, Barima and Marama rivers; but scarcely any attempt has been made up to now to prospect the real hinterland of the country toward the Brazilian frontier.

The Rupununi, not being navigable during the dry season beyond Upocari, the route from Georgetown to the new field would be by steamer to Wismao on the Demerara River, thence by rail to Rockstone on the Essequibo, and by steam launch to Potaro mouth. From that point the navigation is by canoes, and there are chains of considerable falls and rapids to haul over in the ascent of the Rupununi.

Having traveled as far as possible up the latter river it is necessary to cross the savannah to the Maniri and thence up the Takutu from near its junction with the Ireng to its headwaters. This means a long and expensive journey and would render the cost of transporting food almost prohibitive except in the case of a fairly rich deposit.

The Demerara Daily Argosy states authoritatively that it is quite certain that gold has been found and, according to information from a trustworthy source, in abundance; but it prints a warning from Capt. Napier, A.D.C., writing under instructions from the Governor, to the effect that any expedition fitted out to explore this far-distant corner of the colony must carry with it the food it requires and arrange for more to follow for use when the supplies taken up are exhausted.

The reason for this precaution is that the Indians only grow sufficient food for their own requirements. Should this reported gold field prove rich and of any extent it will probably be found that the most used, because the cheapest and most expeditious mode of transit, will be via the Amazon by steamer to Manaos and thence to Boa Vista, which is only about sixty miles from the spot on which the claims have been located.

Sensational stories are being told in Georgetown of the excitement on both sides of the frontier and it is stated in the local press that the tales of the Indians who have arrived from the field recall the narratives of the early English adventurers in the Guiana wilds, who described the bottoms of the rivers and lakes as covered with gold.

SALVATIONISTS BURIED.

Seventeen Victims of Empress Disaster Are Interred in the Cemetery at Toronto, Ont.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TORONTO (Ont.) June 6.—Seventeen Salvation Army victims of the foundering of the Empress of Ireland were buried at Mt. Pleasant Cemetery here today in the presence of Commissioner McKie, representing the army's commander-in-chief, Gen. Booth, and a large assemblage of army people. Bands from all parts of Ontario massed in the arena, where the funeral services were held, playing a funeral march together, as an impressive part of the ceremony. Commissioner McKie paid the last tribute to his comrades.

In the procession from the arena to the cemetery color sergeants bearing flags led, followed by a section of massed bands, the caskets containing the bodies, the mourners following them, another section of bands, and a group of survivors of the disaster. Field officers, men and women soldiers, interspersed with bands, came next. Friends and delegations from other organizations closed the long procession.

BAITED MARTYR ATTACKS JOKERS.

PICKANNINY DOES PENANCE FOR BEAUTY; FAILS; FIGHTS WITH PICK-AXE.

The pick and the pickanniny were both taken to the Police Station yesterday when little Sammy Radabout went flying forth for vengeance on the trail of some neighbor children.

Sammy is 11 years old, and has his first "girl." He introduces himself as her beau. They both go to the same school and live in adjoining houses in the unnumbered district along the river bed in the southeastern part of the city.

To do credit to his position as beau to Martha Williams, Sammy has been paying more attention to his appearance of late, having doubled the strength of his suspenders by adding a bright yellow strip over his left shoulder. He has also superficially tattooed his right leg, to lend attractiveness.

Recently, he took a dislike to the kinkiness of his hair. Martha's is not so kinky as Sammy's and she prefers straight hair. And worse, she likes light hair, almost blonde.

Secretly he told of his hirsute troubles to some neighbor children. They were Sammy's age and a little older. After having two days to think it over, they told Sammy yesterday that he could bleach his hair and make it straight, but to do it, he had to bury himself in sand, and sit all day long in the sun with bared head.

He had other plans for the day, but was a gallant lad when things concerned Martha. So with the aid of his advisers, he dug a pit in the sand, let his friends completely bury him, then they took off his hat and left him there.

It was early when the experiment started. Noon came on, the sun grew blistering, flies came inquiringly and remained to munch. Sammy was abandoned, but he would stand much for the sake of beauty.

The afternoon grew late. Sammy could not see his hair, but he felt that if sunshine and heat would work the miracle, surely it was accomplished.

At 4 his counsellors returned to scoff and jeer. "Proudy cat," they called Sammy and jumped about the buried boy in glee. They rushed up to him, tweaked his nose, pelted him with minor missiles, rubbed sand in his ears, and made so merry that Sammy realized he was a victim of misplaced confidence.

He made such an uproar in his wrath that a woman came and released him from his cell of sand. Immediately he went into the woodshed behind his house, where his private mirror, three cornered and half-scaled of its mercury back, informed him that if anything his hair was blacker than ever and certainly just as kinky.

With a scream he picked up the first weapon at hand. It was a pick-axe. He chased after the jokers, who fled in a squad. When he almost reached the smallest of them, who unwillingly lagged because of less speed in her chubby legs, he slashed the air so close to the girl's head that her mother fainted when she observed the attack.

The police were called and Sammy was taken to the Central Station, where he explained the cause of his anger. And Patrolman Kerrigan, with three boys of his own at home, all blondes, smoothed the little fellow's hot head and went out and bought him some candy. And Sammy went home.

Architects Complete Plans for Attractive Improvement—Permit Let for Hundred-Room Apartment.

Architects Fisen & Sons have completed plans for a four-story brick hotel building to be erected by I. L. Levy on Figueroa street just south of Pico. The structure will contain five stores on the ground story and eighty-five rooms on the three upper floors. It will be faced with ruffled brick and will be 95x111 feet in size.

The Noonan-Murphy Company has finished plans for a three-story brick apartment-house which it is to build at Twentieth street and Magnolia avenue for Mrs. Jessie Ellis. The building will cover a ground area of 67x108 feet and will contain thirty apartments. It will cost about $35,000.

A building permit was granted during the past week for a four-story brick apartment-house to be erected by A. Jamieson at No. 915 South Carondelet street. The structure, which will cost about $40,000, will be 90x102 feet in dimensions and will contain about 100 rooms.

The steamship Lady Grey was requisitioned for the task of bringing the bodies of the victims to Quebec, where many of them still lie unidentified. Oh, My!

BACKWARD HIT AT FASHIONS.

CONVENTION SPEAKER TELLS HOW MAY KNOW A LADY.

Many Questions Fired at Official Advocate of the Red Light Abatement Act—Thirty-seven Questions Which Will Appear on Ballot Discussed at W.C.T.U. Meeting.

Announcing that one could tell a lady nowadays by the fact that she is not in fashion, Mrs. Mary Roberts Coolidge of Berkeley, one of the principal speakers before the legislative meeting of the Southern California W.C.T.U. at Blanchard Hall yesterday, answered one of the questions put to her as to the bearing of dress on character.

The question was one of many asked the speaker at the close of her dramatic address for State ratification of the redlight abatement law, which comes before the people at the next election. Mrs. Coolidge, who was formerly associate professor of sociology at Stanford University, pleaded vigorously for every temperance worker to take up this measure as well as the prohibition amendment, and told the members that unless California ratified the law passed by the State Legislature in April, 1913, the State would be flooded with undesirable people who would be driven out of other States that were voting on the same proposition next fall.

Mrs. Coolidge bitterly scored the wives of landlords who rent their property for immoral purposes.

"There was a time," she said, "when women were kept in ignorance of their husband's business, and did not know where the money came from, but the time has arrived when even such innocent partnership must be held up to shame."

Thirty-seven different questions were discussed at the meeting, which was presided over by Mrs. Hester T. Griffith, vice-president of the Southern California W.C.T.U. Mrs. E. C. Bellows discussed the measure dealing with property qualifications for voters on bonds, the blue sky law, excess condemnation and consolidation of city and county government; Senator N. W. Thompson spoke on several amendments, among them being the one that will make California dry; Mrs. Wilbur C. Campbell explained the Torrens land law; Senator William E. Brown, the anti-prize fight law; Mrs. Rosemonde Wright, the well-known lobbyist, made a telling address in favor of the open-door bill, and W. S. Odell spoke for California dry in 1914.

Yesterday morning's session of the State convention, which is being held at the First Congregational Church, was an interesting one. Reports were heard from the superintendents of the various departments of work being conducted by the W.C.T.U., after which a touching memorial service was held in memory of Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, national president, whose death ocurred recently. The service was conducted by Mrs. Susannah M. D. Fry. A pleasing musical programme was given during the morning session.

A splendid musical programme was given in connection with the gold medal contest, which was held at Blanchard Hall last night. Seven young orators contested for the handsome gold medal, which was presented by Mrs. Lucy Blanchard, State president. Those who assisted with the musical numbers were Miss Marguerite Goodwin, Mrs. William Davis, Miss Ethelwyn Foster, Mrs. P. H. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Harper and T. B. Harper. The convention will close Tuesday at noon.

About the Usual Bumping.

[Youth's Companion:] The limited express tore madly along through the midnight darkness. Suddenly the alert engineer sprang to the lever and set the brakes. The sparks flew from the rails as the locked wheels slid along as with a cry of pain. The lights were extinguished as car after car toppled from the rails. Then came a shuddering silence more terrible than the harsh grating of iron on steel.

Some passengers made torches from fragments of wreckage and searched for dead and injured. A sound singularly like a snore issued from a pile of debris. Hastily removing several pieces of twisted iron they dragged forth a slumbering porter.

"Great heavens!" they exclaimed. "Didn't you know there had been a wreck?"

"Well, gemmun, I sho' felt somethin', but I don't thought we was couplin' on de dinin' cah at Jackson."

Fascination of Railroading.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] Men cannot be long in touch with the transportation industry without realizing that, despite the increasing burdens and complex problems constantly demanding attention, railroading has a fascination for those engaged in it which never seems to diminish. This is peculiarly true in the electric railway field, where problems are ever changing in character and where the progress of electrical engineering and of operation, the broad yet close relations with the great public and the mechanical aspects of the country demand the most careful analytical study. The "call of the rail," says the Electric Railway Journal, is as real a challenge to men of red blood and keen minds as the sustained impulse to employ one's talents in pioneer work on the fast-disappearing frontier of civilization. Once it is heard, it stays for a life time, and a sympathetic interest in railroad problems is never lost.

Wistaria Day.

"THE TIMES" SCHOOL OF DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

WITH a fetching little bunch of purple wistaria arranged in her glossy dark tresses, Mrs. Bertha Haffner-Ginger announced to The Times class in domestic science yesterday that the day must be known as "wistaria day," and then she proceeded to tell the class why.

Yesterday the Wistaria Sweet Shop of No. 312 South Broadway opened up its first branch establishment on Broadway near Sixth, and Peter Kanellos, the far-sighted proprietor, reading in the morning paper that Mrs. Haffner-Ginger intended giving her class a lesson in the art of confectionery making, telephoned that he was sending up a generous supply of his delicious candies for distribution as samples of the way his candymakers turn out sweets. Of course the candy which Mrs. Haffner-Ginger demonstrated for the class was unusually good, but the visitors all enjoyed the added treat of the Wistaria candy, and the little spray of purple bloom which is ever associated with far-away Japan, made each member of the class hurry away after the lesson was finished, in order to secure one of the charming favors which the Wistaria had made to give its guests yesterday. The new sweet shop, which opened yesterday, is one of the most attractive of its kind in Southern California. Soft grays blend with the wistaria purple for the color scheme and even the pretty girls who serve the customers are dressed in this pleasing combination of colors.

Mrs. Haffner-Ginger made two different kinds of candy fondant yesterday, and from this base made many different kinds of confections. Perhaps the most attractive of all was the little candy baskets which she fashioned of the brittle syrup colored green. These candy baskets she filled with little wistaria-colored the afternoon was really a one.

As an added treat a cup of Stoll's coffee was served, Mrs. ner-Ginger using the Earl brand, and making it in one of new tricolators, which are being onstrated by the Parmalee- company. This new tricolator the place of the old-fashioned drip coffee percolator and can be on any ordinary coffee pot. being very reasonable, the coffee in this tricolator is most Yesterday tiny salted wafers, as the Bishop's Petite Wafers, served with the coffee.

A most interesting lesson is ised for Tuesday, and several have been arranged for next week cluding a trip on Wednesday to the home of the Holsum

Schools and Colleges.

FACT AND COMMENT.

On other pages of today's issue of The Times are presented facts, figures and illustrations relating to the progress of the San Fernando Valley. It is a wonderful story of development activity and of the modern Southern California kind of initiative, push and hustle that is told in these pictures and in the accounts that go with them, a story that probably has no parallel in any other part of the United States.

What has been the most potent factor in the transformation of the old-time ranches of the valley into such a beautiful suburban domain? The question suggests itself to the visitor the moment the valley is unfolded before his view. "What kind of magic," he is likely to inquire, "was invoked to change an unbroken sea of barley fields into a settled community of fine homes and city conveniences in so short a time as four years?"

Good roads did most of it. In this answer lies the solution, too, of the problems of many another backward neighborhood, both in the country districts of the Southland and, what is of particular interest to Los Angeles, in the cities and towns as well. The San Fernando Valley's superb highway system made the San Fernando Valley, literally putting it on the map, so to speak. As an example and inspiration to the rest of Southern California, the value of this splendid valley achievement should not be lost.

Had No Illusions.

The men who less than a half-decade ago assumed the big task of developing the sleepy old valley into a modern suburban home and farm community began their work without any illusions. They recognized the fact that the valley, even in its more developed parts, as in the San Fernando and Lankershim districts, had always suffered from its comparative isolation from the rest of the country. The existence in the very heart of the valley of an enormous undivided tract of land was not the only obstacle to the advance of the rest of the vast area.

The people of the rich territory outside the Van Nuys-Lankershim holding had in a large measure been responsible for their own backwardness in development, having failed to realize the prime importance of getting into close and easy touch with other districts through the construction of proper highways. The first thing the purchasers of the great valley ranch property thought of in planning their development programme was the building of a magnificent highway system that, connecting with the public roads and systems outside, would make the San Fernando Valley so accessible that no one who ever thought of going anywhere could fail to see it.

Not Yet Content.

The people of the San Fernando Valley are enthusiasts on the subject of highways. Since the completion of the splendid Sherman way, there has been an almost feverish activity in road building throughout the district. The construction of the State highway along the south side of the valley and the extension of the county's good roads across the north end led to a determination to make the whole valley from the foothills at Chatsworth on the west to Glendale on the east, a network of smooth paved boulevards and drives. Three macadamized roads, built like Sherman way by the syndicate developing the ranch land, extend across the great holding on the north and south lines, meeting similar highways from the north and linking the publicly and privately constructed roads into one great boulevard system.

But even yet the valley people are not content. Already possessing the most complete and costly road system in an area of its size in the country, they have worried, because the foothills that gird their mighty agricultural and horticultural principality on three sides have shut them from direct communication with the beaches and with neighboring valleys. Having made the valley practically a great suburb of Los Angeles, they still had a shut-in feeling, and, as in the San Fernando Valley, to think on new highways is to act, these road builders are now setting out to make the hills "as if they ain't."

Work Stared.

The syndicate itself is starting the work at Owensmouth by building a wide, smooth roadway from that town straight south to Topanga Canyon, where it will meet the new county road now being constructed through the mountains to a point just west of Santa Monica. Thus for all time is being settled the problem of getting to and from the beaches for the dwellers in the western part of the San Fernando Valley.

Now shaping and with every prospect of early realization is the project of cutting a road from a point on the State highway just south of Van Nuys on through the hills to Benedict Canyon and thence on an almost straight line to Beverly Hills. This highway will serve a double purpose in that it will cut the distance by automobile between Van Nuys and Santa Monica by half and will carry a great deal of the travel between Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley, thus relieving the already congested Cahuenga Pass route.

At the extreme northwest corner of the valley, the people had become dissatisfied with the steep and arduous old Santa Susana Pass road into Ventura county, and as the result of a consequent agitation, the county is now building a brand new route, with a maximum grade of 6 per cent., through that canyon. This will stimulate travel through the upper end of the valley and will bring Los Angeles and Ventura counties into much closer touch than heretofore. Another project long brewing is that of linking the San Fernando and the Crescenta-Canada valleys with a roadway suitable for travel, giving the towns of the former district a direct route into Pasadena.

City Could Learn.

Having learned from experience the value of proper communication with the rest of the world, the valley people, in short, are not going to be satisfied until they can get to and from every other place on the map of Southern California on direct and easy lines. Such progressiveness spells prosperity untold to the valley and its inhabitants and incidentally is going to give this section a number of magnificent new automobile routes of unsurpassable service beauty.

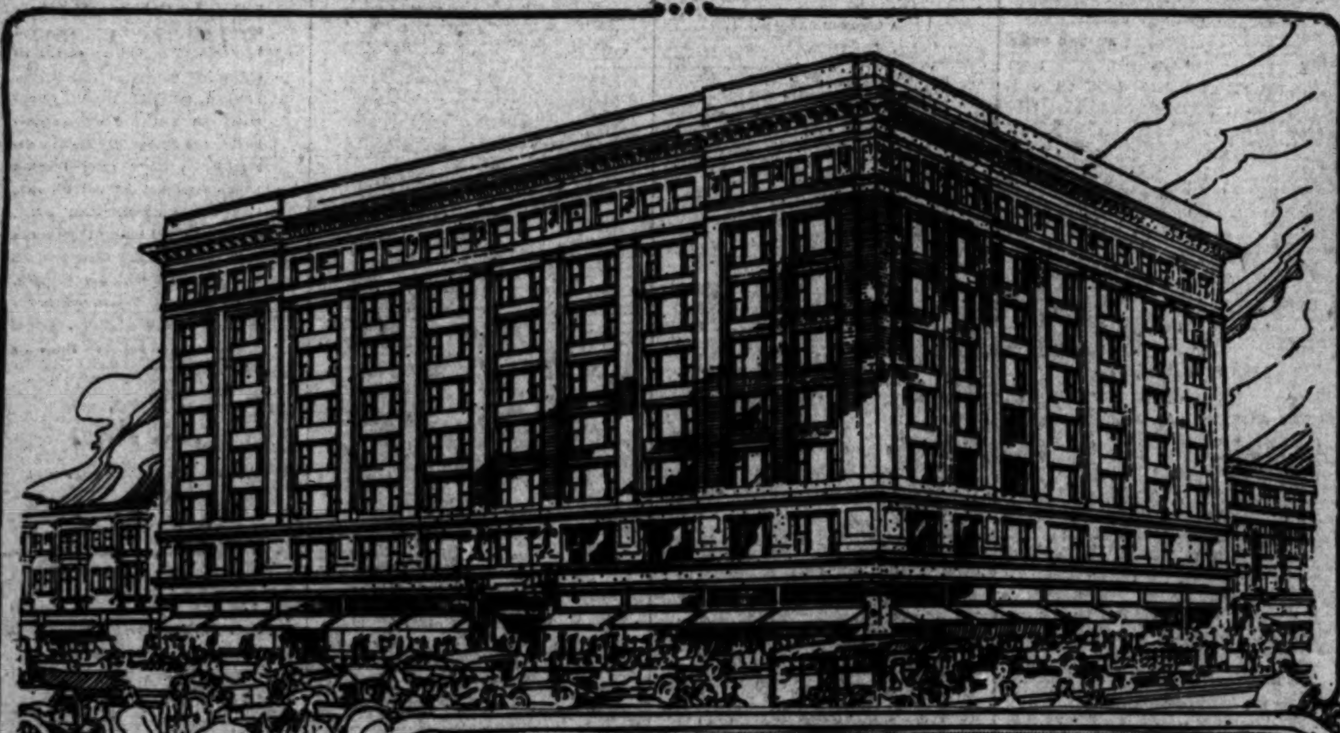
Could the city of Los Angeles, floundering along as it is in a haphazard growth, undecided whether to spread north, east, south or west or to stay where it is, with its streets cut in two and deflected by any and every variation of topography, outside of a dead level, and its business section shut off from direct access to half its population, only come to its senses, it might take a leaf from the experiences of these valley hustlers.

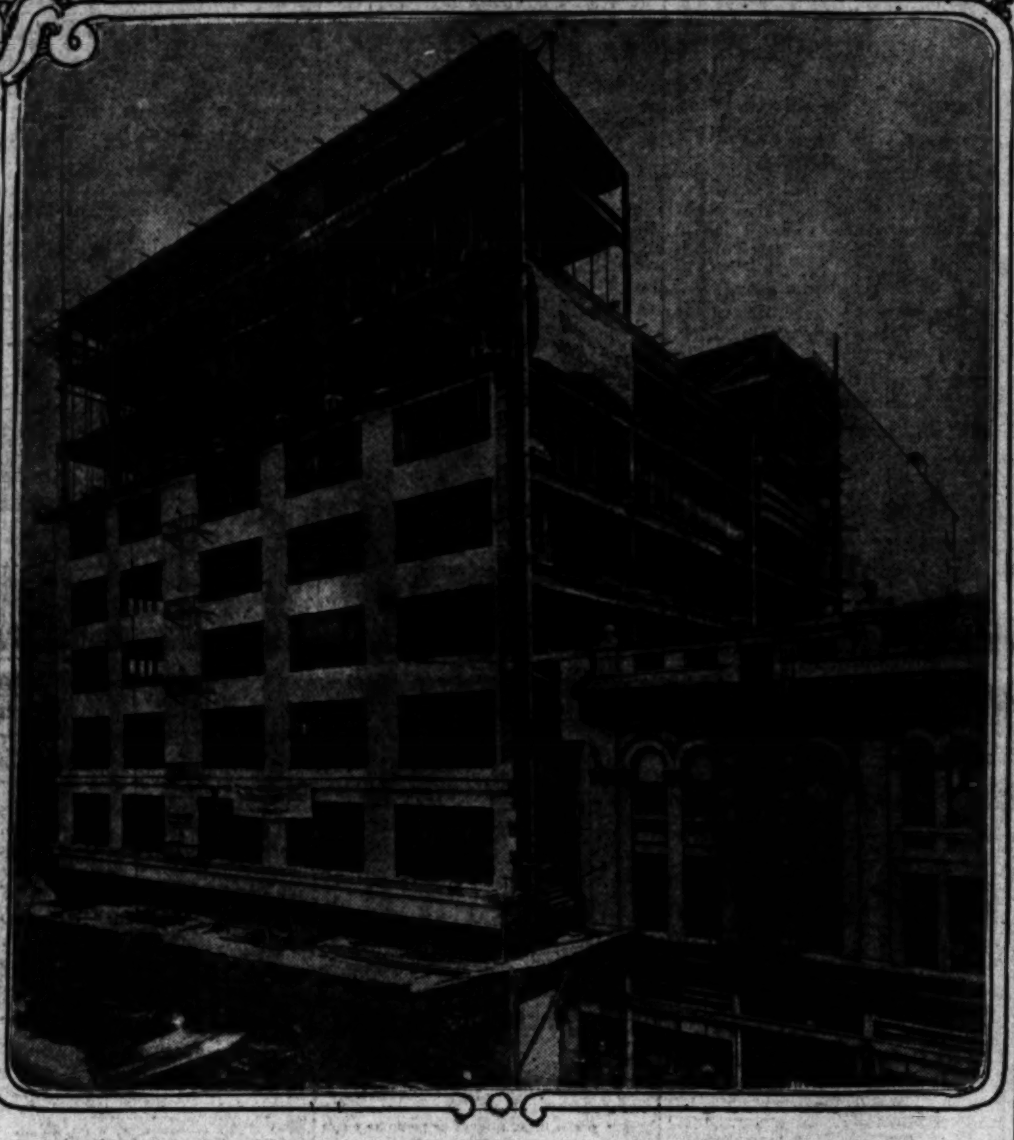
Bunker Hill would have been a thing of the past long ago had this city ever had a hint of the vision and foresight that has been displayed and is being displayed by the people of the San Fernando Valley since their great awakening. Maybe that's what Los Angeles needs—an awakening.

ALTERING HOTEL.

Extensive improvements are under way at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo, on South Grand avenue, near the east approach of the new Colorado-street bridge, in Pasadena. The hotel is of the bungalow type, and Henry M. Fowler, the proprietor, is expending in all, about $30,000 in alterations and additions. A new kitchen is being built and will be connected with the dining-room by an arcade. A recreation hall has just been completed and the entire front of the dining-room is being altered.

Magnificent Improvement on City's Retail Thoroughfare.





Architects' perspective of "New Broadway" and present appearance of building.

The street front of the first unit of the $1,000,000 mercantile block now being constructed for the Broadway Department Store at Fourth and Broadway has been faced with brick and terra cotta to the seventh-story level, and it is expected that this part of the big structure will be ready for occupancy in July. The rest of the store will be started immediately thereafter, it being the intention of the builder to have the whole completed by the time the 1915 exposition visitors begin to come this way. By building such a structure Arthur Letts has demonstrated in the most convincing way possible his faith in the stability and permanency of the present downtown business district and his confidence in the future of Los Angeles.

FEELS PULSE OF BROADWAY.

Letts Declares Wheels Can't Be Put Under It.

Business of the Country Hurt by Uncertainty.

Los Angeles Leads as Modern Progressive City.

Arthur Letts, proprietor of the Broadway Department Store, returned home on Friday night from a two months tour of the South and East, wither he went in the interest of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, of which he is president. He was the guest of honor last night at a banquet given in the Clark Hotel by the members of the Buyers Association of his store, of whom thirty-three were present. The room was handsomely decorated, and many of the department - heads made optimistic and interesting talks, preceding the principal speech by Mr. Letts.

The leading cities he visited were San Antonio, New Orleans, Atlanta, Nashville, Jacksonville, Savannah, Charleston, Richmond, Baltimore, Kansas City and New York, and knowing this the significance of his talk can be better appreciated. He said, in part:

"Being a close observer, I naturally investigated the conditions in the different cities. I will frankly say

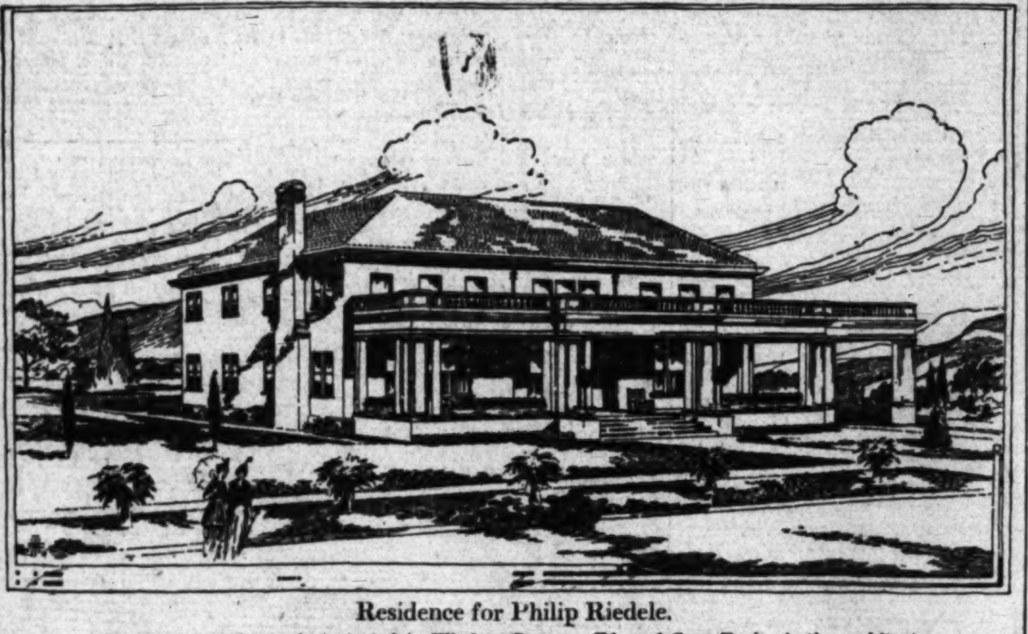
WORK BEGUN ON FINE RESIDENCE.

BUYER OF WINDSOR SQUARE SITE TO LAY OUT ATTRACTIVE PLACE.

Excavation has been begun for a fourteen-room residence to be erected in Windsor Square for Philip Riedele, president of the Cambria Spring Company. The site, which is an east front, faces Windsor boulevard and commands a fine view of the mountains. It is composed of two large lots lying a block north of Wilshire boulevard and comprises 112x186 feet.

The residence was designed by Architect Edward Cray Taylor and will follow the Italian Renaissance type of architecture. Across the entire front will be a wide and spacious piazza. The exterior of the house, as well as the garage, will be faced with white plaster. Both will have clay Spanish tile roofs.

The interior finish throughout will be in hardwoods. The entrance hall, including stairs and landing, will have a high Flemish straight-grain oak wainscot, crowned with an ornamental plaster ceiling. The dining-room will be finished in black and Circassian walnut with a wood cornice of the same wood. Both the living-room and the billiard room will be in mahogany, the former having a tile mantel and hearth. The rest of the rooms will be in white enamel over cedar. There will be four baths.



Residence for Philip Riedele.

OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought we manage to instill a certain INDIVIDUALITY into each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modern five-room cottage, at $900, to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Hermosa Beach and San Pedro, on easy terms.

LAY THAT NIMBLE DOLLAR HERE.

We believe it useless to advertise unless we offer a bargain. Read this, and be our judge.

It is a brand-new home located near Van Ness ave. and 5th st. The lower floor consists of a big living-room, den, dining-room, breakfast room and kitchen, with all the usual accessories. The upper floor has 4 bedrooms and a fine sun parlor, a large bath, and a small balcony. The closets are immense. There are hardwood floors all through, a fine basement and furnace pipes, a garage, and drive in from the street. We give you our word there is nothing like this to be had in all Wilshire. The owner gives a bargain because he must sell.

A BLUE-RIBBON HOME.

Except for size, this is certainly a $40,000 place. You cannot find better class in any home in the city. It is located on Ardmore ave., on a high east-facing lot, beautifully and completely improved. No chalet type house in the city has broader, handsomer lines, deeper porches, wider windows or sunnier rooms. There are 10 in all, a great big living-room, a cozy library, a handsome dining-room and a splendid lounging-room and conservatory combined, which opens on a shrub-embowered lawn. There are 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, a maid's room and bath below stairs, a big sleeping porch, beautiful mahogany and white enamel finish, a furnace, garage, etc. We guarantee you will be pleased with the property. It has that beauty and charm which an artistic home-maker can give.

WATCH ME "NIMBLE UP."

I'm not a dollar, but need 'em, and you'll be surprised at the cut I'll make on my 6-room bungalow, modern and up-to-the-minute. Was built for a home and our street is asphaltum; assessments fully paid. The place has a value of $6000, but "I need the nimble dollar;" considerably less might tempt me. Come look at my home. Don't wait until next week and answer a cleverly-worded ad written by a real estater for this same house, but COME TO THE OWNER and keep the commission yourself. Your choice of two car lines—West Adams or West Jefferson, and tell the man to stop at Hobart. You'll like the place and the price, too. Let's get in touch through this ad, then we'll talk. The location is 2907 HOBART BLVD. Phone for appointment. West 1266.

R. S. BASSETT.

40-Acre Foothill Ranch.

Reader this may be just what you are looking for, yes, longing for, possibly, the good health-giving mountain air will be good for "just what is ailing of you." To say the least you could do worse, for this ranch has good soil, about 35 acres good tillable land, about 10 acres level, land good for alfalfa, near the stream, that is when there is a stream only part of the year. Water only about 20 feet from the surface. About 4 miles from a town, junction of S. P. Railroad, about 40 miles from L. A. Fine large oak tree, located where you would want to build; also some other trees. What could you raise, you ask? Say, I hardly know what you could not raise, as it is fine rich soil, most any kind of fruit would do well, then there is good money in bees, and this is a dandy location for that, while your fruit trees are coming on. But from your alfalfa, which you know you can get several cuttings the first year, you can raise stock. This ranch is located near Saugus, in the San Francisquito Canyon, where there will be great activity soon, with teams and autos going up to the L. A. Electric Power Works, on which our city voted $1,250,000 a month ago.

Say, come in and talk it over and we will go up and see the ranch if you wish.

R. S. BASSETT,
202½ S. Broadway, Room 208.

FOR SALE— SAN FERNANDO VALLEY.

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY.

And in the very best part of this wonderful valley at that. Absolutely the best valley in Southern California; the best soil, the best water conditions, and immediately adjoining this great city of Los Angeles. The value of Owens River water to land in this valley can hardly be estimated, but it is a reasonable assumption that land having Owens River water will go to almost unbelievable figures if we should have a couple of dry years, as may be expected at any time.

We have for sale several snaps, due to tight money conditions which have prevailed for the past few months. Conditions are already much better, but we can deliver at bargain prices if quick action is taken. Will absolutely guarantee Owens River water. One piece of especially fine citrus land at a bargain. Another snap especially fine for alfalfa; fine soil, level as a floor. Another piece, a fine proposition for deciduous fruits, oranges, or berries. Don't fail to investigate these few properties if you mean business.

BEAUMONT—THE BEAUTIFUL.
Live where the conditions are always the best, all the time. Pure mountain water, in the best and most prosperous fruit growing valley in Southern California.

It's a health resort, of the most extravagant scenic beauty, a panorama of delight, unsurpassed, where you can see (and it's fair to look upon.) The deciduous orchards of the valley, with shining water ditches, mingled with the tree rows (with or without bungalow homes.) Abundance of water goes with all.

Have your bungalow homes amongst snow-capped mountain peaks. They are good investments; you retain health and affluence. Then again, I have elegant villa and beautiful residence orchard tracts nestled in the foothills, with full water rights. They join the Mesa Miraville, with mansions costing upwards of $35,000. One of these standing in 54 acres planted to apples, cherries, etc., etc.; ornamented with imported plants and shrubs, it's a beauty spot, grand beyond compare.

I have sound and good investments in these highly improved orchard homes, with perfect surroundings, and conditions. And orchard tracts with full water rights, and perfect titles (ready to plant and improve.) Beautifully located, that you should investigate, prices are right. Also villas, bungalows and cottages, gas and electricity, modern and up to date in every way, $1500 up. Large vacant lots. Good building sites, at very reasonable prices, and terms.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

COME IN AND LET US SHOW YOU HOW YOU CAN BECOME THE OWNER OF SOME OF
THE CREAM OF THE SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY.
DOS PALOS RANCHO.

We offer in parcels to suit, 15,000 acres of the finest lands for the growing of alfalfa, dairying, fruit trees, grapes, olives, nuts and vegetables that can be found in the State of California.

It is located in Fresno county, about 55 miles west and a little north of the city of Fresno, being but three miles south of the station of Dos Palos on the Southern Pacific Railroad, and connected by excellent roads, giving good transportation, freight, passenger and express facilities.

The soil of this tract is ideal in texture, being easily worked at practically any season of the year. It is a rich, deep, productive silt about 45 feet in depth and of great fertility, as evidenced by the native growth, and further proved by the crops we are raising there, and the splendid growth of our planted fruit trees.

There is absolutely NO ALKALI, NO HARDPAN, NO ADOBE, on this tract. It lies as level as a floor with a fall of ten feet to the north and 6 feet to the south, making it ideal for irrigation. The cost of preparing for irrigation is thus nominal. The soil takes water easily, retains it a long time and the water table is low though to insure its never becoming water-logged or sour.

We have a banner stand of alfalfa, planted last April 2, 1913, yielding 4½ tons to date, with another heavy cutting on the way.

Fruit trees of all varieties planted about the same time last year have made a strong, healthy growth.

We have fully demonstrated the water supply as ample as to quantity and excellent as to quality, developed by wells and pumped by electricity.

Experts who have but recently examined our tract report it as one of the finest they have ever examined in California or elsewhere.

We will sell tracts in any size, with or without water development, at very low prices compared with real values.

Call at our office for full information and to see soil and crop samples, or write for descriptive circulars and information.

This property will stand right up to our every representation, and will bear the strictest investigation.

If you are looking for the VERY BEST at today's low prices, on liberal terms, do not fail to look into our offer on this property. We will consider offers for large acreage on a basis that will be satisfactory to you.

INVESTIGATE THIS WITHOUT FAIL.
IT WILL PAY YOU.

COTTON
CALIPATRIA.

The greatest cotton land in America lies around Calipatria. It has proved this by actual production. There are 5000 acres in cotton today within two or three miles of Calipatria. The flower is just about ready to break open, and next year will see double this amount of acreage planted to cotton. Calipatria lands produce the highest average pounds per acre of any section on the globe.

500 LBS. TO THE ACRE.

Nowhere else does cotton do as well. And, too, the quality is the very finest on the market. The lack of rain here is our big asset. The product is

PURE WHITE WITH LONG FLEECE.

Come to Calipatria and see those great cotton fields, and see the land that we are offering for sale adjoining for ONLY $85 PER ACRE.

The richest and softest soil in the whole valley. If you are acquainted there, you will know it is rich soil because it is located in that

GREAT SOFT SOIL BELT
BETWEEN THE RIVERS.

You can buy this land on terms of one-fifth cash and the balance in 1, 2, 3, 4 years.

There are only about three sections of this land left—and it is going fast. The land is cut up in 40, 80, 160-acre pieces.

The cotton raised at Calipatria will be ginned there this year.

The machinery for one gin is already on the ground. Come down and see us about a trip to this property. See the land for yourself and talk with the contented ranchers who are now THERE and who are making money.

Talk with Mr. Schader.

FOR EXCHANGE—I OWN ONE THOUSAND ACRES of land in a very rich valley in Southern California, about ninety miles from Los Angeles, practically all in cultivation; by actual demonstration of five wells dug on the property ten inches of water can be had at 90 feet, so that when the land is subdivided and sold in 20-acre bodies, each man can have a well containing 10 inches of water, which is ample for fruit or alfalfa; the sun never shone on a more beautiful piece of land; it is on the main boulevard, for one mile, which passes by the property; land across the street has already been subdivided, and sold at $250 per acre; it is land that will produce an enormous income on an investment of $1000 per acre when in fruit or alfalfa; it is true apricot land, but will grow oranges, prunes, pears, etc.; of the very finest quality. My land is worth $200 per acre, or $200,000; it is clear of incumbrances, and I want to exchange it for income property, such as apartment-house, business property; railroad bonds, mortgages, or gilt-edge business property in any northern or eastern city; the point with me is that I want to convert this property into something that will pay me 6 per cent. net income, and let the other man take it and double in value in his hands, as I am satisfied with what I have done in my business affairs, and I am practically ready to quit my large business. Address O. S. HOUSTON, owner, 1008 Union Oil Bldg. A4203.

ANSWERS CRITICS OF LIBRARY SITE.

COMMITTEE'S STATEMENT SAYS BOYLE HEIGHTS PLANS MISREPRESENTED.

In a statement addressed to the residents of Boyle Heights regarding the library site at First and Chicago streets, the Boyle Heights Library Lot Committee made public yesterday the exact costs to be levied upon the property holders for the improvement. The statement announces that an erroneous impression has been created; that the total cost will not be more than $16,000, as against the estimate of $20,000 suggested by opponents.

The statement, signed by Mrs. R. H. F. Variel, chairman, reports: "When this committee worked on the subscription plan, before assessment districts for libraries were provided for, the Huntington Land Company held the power-house lot at $20,000, and they assured the committee that it would be deeded for $10,000 for library use only. This did not include the corner triangle, which they valued at $2500.

"When the assessment district was perfected, and the condemnation proceeding took its regular course, the presiding judge struck an average between the values as given by disinterested real estate men, as witnesses for the city, and the company's estimate, and fixed the price at $15,000. This also covers the triangle, making the total only $2500 more than the original estimates. No one will contend that it was unwise to secure this little plat of green to face the library, rather than have it utilized for some objectionable building."

This assessment is to be spread over 2500 lots, and no street paving or storm drain expense comes against the district, as the city and library funds care for those improvements.

As to the incidental expenses, the committee has learned from Col. W. G. Schreiber, chief of the Assessment Bureau, that they will not exceed $1000, and will probably not be more than $800. In contrast, the Central-avenue library lot cost $25,235. The reason for the delay in the building of the library is given as due to the congestion of work in the Assessment Bureau.

The statement is given because of some opposition that has recently been created, in which exaggerated estimates of cost are said to have been used to alarm property owners. In concluding her statement, Mrs. Variel says: "This committee greatly regrets that the community should be again stirred up over this subject, and it severely censures the chief promoter of the opposition, who admitted to the chairman of this committee that he did not mind the assessments, but he did not want Mr. Huntington to get that much money."

AMATEUR FISHER HOOKS OWN NECK.

TRIES CASTING LINE BEFORE ATTACKING TROUT; GOES TO HOSPITAL.

Some trout in a secluded pool on the Sespe would be greatly interested in a record made at the Receiving Hospital yesterday. It announces that Roger Hanford, No. 1178 North Coronado street, was treated for a deep gash in the neck.

For several weeks Hanford has been industriously planning an extended fishing trip along the Sespe, particular attention to be paid to a certain pool where trout are fat and friendly. What is better, the pool is hidden away behind a big bank and is so easily passed by that fishermen seldom reach it. An old guide in the district informed Hanford of the pool's treasures.

Three weeks ago Hanford went to a fishing tackle store and purchased a new steel casting rod, with a complement of flies and line. But he was not familiar with the art of casting. So he purchased a book providing such information. Being confined to a business office throughout the week, with only Saturday afternoon off, he was handicapped in following the instructions of the book.

Yesterday afternoon, relieved of duty, he hurried home, trained his casting rod into action, and went into his back yard to whip an imaginary pool. The instrument in his hands was mischievous and intractable. He tried it out for more than half an hour, then fastened a real fly to the line and cast long and hard into a phantom pool near his chicken house.

The fly frisked high, then with devilish speed darted back and hooked Hanford in his right gill. He attempted to loosen the hook, but it had a safe hold. He went to the Receiving Hospital and the hook was cut out. A severe gash, just missing a large vein, was stitched. And the new fishing rod was given to the surgeon as a souvenir for the treatment. The trip to the trout pool has been abandoned.

LAW SCHOOL YEAR BOOK.

The sixth annual year book, published by the students of the Law School of the University of Southern California, was issued yesterday. It represents more than 600 students. Its cover is done in purple and gold, the school colors, with a seal of the school and the words "Stare Decisis" on the front. All of the school activities, oratorical, athletic, etc., are reviewed with an unusually large number of cuts of the faculty and students. It is the largest and finest publication in the history of the school. It is dedicated to Judge Craig in the following language:

"To Hon. Gavin W. Craig, author, jurist and scholar, we respectfully dedicate this volume. Secretary, and a member of the faculty of this institution, Judg. Craig has labored for this school as no other man, and by his might of intellect and unswerving rectitude of high purpose, has won the respect of all who are loyal to S.C. Law."

"The Times" Joyriders.

KLEAR THE KOAST FOR THE KIDSES' KARAVAN

HURRAH for The Times joyride! It's getting to be a habit. There's another gigantic jag of joy next week, with Newsboys' Home in the lead on Monday.

Did the Kid Karavan have a good time last week?

Why, the time those youngsters had would make a fire in a fireworks factory look dull! Forty kids a day, 200 during the week. That's the record of The Times's joyride up to date.

Every day at 2 o'clock The Times motor truck started for Venice with forty youngsters aboard. With the youngsters all crowded in comfy and snug like, that high-voltage chauffeur made the classic old dame who dwelt in a shoe look as lonely as a whistling buoy on a foggy night.

And the three-ringed circus of Venice just naturally proved a spellbinder to each fresh relay of happy youngsters.

The best of it was nobody had to play gallery; everybody had a chance to bump the bumps and go round the merry-go-round and roll the roller-coaster. And as for the ballyho in front of the Rapids, he was certainly their favorite actress. Even the blind old manual labor musician down by the St. Mark Hotel, playing his old plush album favorites like "White Wings" and "Silver Threads," came in for his share of patronage, and more than one precious [illegible] penny found its way into his [illegible]

Naturally they had that [illegible] feeling as soon as they struck [illegible] beach; so the fifty-mouse-[illegible] high-geared peanut roaster got a [illegible] box chuffing to supply the [illegible] youthful appetites; and the [illegible] sters spent long-hoarded [illegible] the crumpet lady, and for [illegible] suckers and gum which [illegible] foot-ease, only not so good.

There was a kidproof railing [illegible] the seal tank, else some of the [illegible] sters might have got a ducking, [illegible] eagerly did they gather round it. [illegible] one little girl got very mad [illegible] they wouldn't let her feed [illegible] the seals!

Of course the midway was the [illegible] show. Yet a few youngsters [illegible] to bestow a passing attention [illegible] the ocean. One little girl, who [illegible] never seen nor heard it before, [illegible] round-eyed and awe-stricken [illegible] pier, as the waves boomed [illegible] "My, don't it hit hard!" she cried.

And when it was all over, [illegible] were packed once more into the [illegible] tor truck, some roared [illegible] hoarse all the way home, [illegible] others, tired and happy, fell [illegible] on one another's nice, sticky [illegible] ders.

The Newsboys' Home will lead joyriders tomorrow and the Macy [illegible] Ann-street schools will fill up the remainder of the week.

A WARNING VOICE.

Objections to the Imperial Irrigation District Buying the California Development Company System.

BY HENRY C. WARNACK.

Some weeks ago the board of directors of the Imperial Irrigation district issued a pamphlet which bears no date. This pamphlet is fathered by the full board of directors of the district.

They propose in this pamphlet that the land owners of the district sign a petition calling for an election to vote bonds to the extent of $2,500,000 for the purchase of the California Development Company system. They state that $500,000 of these bonds are for a separate emergency fund and will not be used for the purchase of the system.

I fail to find any statement in the circular to the effect that it is known positively that the creditors will accept the aggregate amount of $3,000,000, instead of what is decreed to be their interest, as shown in the judgment entered by Hon. Walter Bordwell, judge of the Superior Court of the State of California, on January 4, 1913.

Imperial Valley newspapers have recently published from time to time statements regarding these matters. It seems pretty clear that the Southern Pacific Company has agreed to accept $2,000,000 in bonds, for which they will convey to the district "such property belonging to the California Development Company and the Mexican Company as the district can legally become possessed of." I am curious to know who shall determine what the district can be "legally possessed of." I am curious to know why the board of directors would agree to pay the Southern Pacific Company $2,000,000 and permit them to retain $1,000,000 worth of Mexican lands and over $900,000 of assets of the California Development Company, concerning which Judge Bordwell decreed as follows:

"It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that all transfers of properties of the California Development Company made to the Southern Pacific Company at any time from and after the 20th day of June, 1905, and while the Southern Pacific Company controlled and dictated the affairs of said California Development Company, be annulled, void and of no effect, and all such transfers are hereby set aside and cancelled."

The decree of Judge Bordwell specifically gives the sum the Southern Pacific Company is entitled to as $1,501,903.63. With interest thereon from the 30th day of December, 1909, at 7 per cent., this would amount to $1,975,000 July 1, 1914.

I am curious to know what grounds the directors have for believing that the other creditors, the New Liverpool Salt Company and the bondholders, will accept less than the amount named in the decree, which, combined with interest added to the principal, will amount on July 1, 1914, to $1,367,574.72.

The people who must pay the bills are entitled to know these things before giving power to the board of directors to make a settlement with the creditors.

I very positively object to giving the present board of directors the power to settle this important matter. This board is under the domination of an attorney by the name of Conkling, who is known throughout the valley everywhere as being employed by the Southern Pacific Company.

Second, I very positively object to this board settling this very momentous question, because I do not believe their business experience qualifies them to handle a matter of such great importance. An expert of the highest type should have been selected rather than a country lawyer having no experience in matters beyond the ordinary practice in a farming community. If the bonds should be voted, they must pass the scrutiny of the shrewdest financiers of the world before they will be accepted as legal. Is Mr. Conkling known as a careful, painstaking lawyer, or is the rumor that he is known to be extraordinarily careless in his preparation of papers, true?

Third, I object to the district acquiring the California Development Company property under any circumstances. The water must pass through a foreign country on its way to Imperial Valley. The act of the California Legislature creating the district, could not, and does not, give the district officers any authority or power to deal with this foreign country problem that enters into this great transaction.

Fourth, I object to the district buying the system, because I believe that the charges for water in one way and another will be more than double to the water users. I believe that efforts will be made to put water upon lands not now lying under the canals, and for which there is no permanent water supply until the Colorado River watershed is provided with storage reservoirs. I object to jeopardizing the water rights of Imperial Valley belonging to the farmers within the present territory under the canals by spreading the water over any larger country. Mr. Conkling is a known advocate of putting water on the mesa east of the east high line canal; he is also a known advocate of putting water west of the west side main canal. I do not believe that if the [illegible] knew of his advocacy of [illegible] the irrigated area in the valley [illegible] is already dangerously large [illegible] would support the irrigation [illegible] under Mr. Conkling's domination [illegible] direction.

I object to any further effort [illegible] the way of throwing upon the [illegible] of the people the burden [illegible] that the acquirement of the [illegible] system would cause until the [illegible] matters are settled, and settled [illegible] way that seems permanent [illegible] to American water users clearly [illegible] fined rights to pass the water [illegible] require through Mexican [illegible] free from hindrance.

I object to the district [illegible] the enormous cost of controlling [illegible] Colorado River in a foreign [illegible] a work which should be done [illegible] two governments. By concerted effort on the part of the [illegible] believe that the voice of [illegible] zens would get a hearing in [illegible] The disposition, however, seems [illegible] be to follow the suggestions [illegible] great Southern Pacific [illegible] and bow to any decree that [illegible] issued by Epes Randolph of [illegible] It would cost but a reasonable [illegible] to awaken every man, [illegible] child in Imperial Valley to the [illegible] cessity of protection against [illegible] croachments of the Colorado [illegible] in future years, and this could [illegible] spoken in a voice loud enough [illegible] heard in Washington.

I object to the mis-[illegible] made in the pamphlet as [illegible] to injure the valley, and if [illegible] any other than a board of [illegible] portance would be called [illegible] statement that "at present [illegible] owner dares to rent land [illegible] antee to his tenant that water [illegible] be supplied when needed," [illegible] Every person who desires to [illegible] the truth, knows that with the [illegible] tion of the lands west of New [illegible] there has been no shortage [illegible] 1910, Imperial Valley receiving [illegible] best water service today of any [illegible] gation system in America.

Why was it necessary to [illegible] fully insert what I have quoted [illegible] the pamphlet?

I object to the purchase of [illegible] water system because it is not [illegible] investment. The pamphlet [illegible] that it is a good investment, [illegible] not true. The receipts have not [illegible] sufficient since the receiver [illegible] pointed to meet all of the [illegible] of maintenance and operation [illegible] there has never been a more [illegible] nomical, careful management of [illegible] great business than that exercised [illegible] the receiver over the property [illegible] came into his charge. It is [illegible] to juggle with figures. The [illegible] states there was a net profit [illegible] $200,000, in 1913, which is [illegible] ly untrue. It is not probable the system will ever pay its [illegible] in total, and the desire [illegible] of the district, should it become owner, to do expensive things, [illegible] though they are desirable, will [illegible] sult in assuming that which [illegible] a burden upon the people.

My concluding advice is to let [illegible] enough alone. The law suit will [illegible] the Southern Pacific company undoubtedly buy the system, [illegible] while they have shown considerable asininity in the past in [illegible] with this irrigation plant, they [illegible] tainly will have sense enough [illegible] keep the water going, when [illegible] acre of land under irrigation [illegible] duces considerable more than [illegible] of freight, and some acres [illegible] many tons of freight.

Therefore, I advise all [illegible] owners in Imperial Valley [illegible] to sign the petition for the [illegible] district, and if you fail on [illegible] petition, vote no at the [illegible]

OIL STOCK QUOTATIONS. SAN FRANCISCO CLOSING PRICE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.] SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—Following are bid and asked prices:

[illegible]

SALES—1000 T[illegible]

COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Fresh vegetables are becoming more plentiful and there have been some declines in the market in this line. Chile peppers have dropped to 7 cents from double that amount during the week. Bell peppers are not so plentiful and are holding up to 10 cents as an average. Tomatoes have dropped and daily carload shipments from Imperial are being received. They are selling fast, quotations ranging from $1.25 to $1.35 per crate. Cucumbers are down and outdoor stock is so plentiful that it is selling at 50 cents per lug box. Cauliflower of good quality is so difficult to obtain that few of the dealers are quoting it at any price. Good lettuce is still selling around $1 per crate. Cabbage is bringing as high as 95 cents per sack. Green corn is selling for as little as 65 cents per lug box. Celery is very scarce and the price has a wide range, according to quality. Crookedneck and summer squash are in good demand, the quotation running from 50 to 65 cents a box for either variety. Peas and beans have made scarcely no change in several weeks, the receipts being steady and the shipments from the north continuing light.

Egg prices advanced as expected, owing to the advances which have been taking place in the north. The local market on case-count has gone up to 24 cents. Receipts were only 461 cases yesterday. Butter receipts were 92,420 pounds. The arrivals have been very heavy this week, so large, for a fact, that considerable butter is being placed in storage. Prices have been steadily maintained for this reason. Cheese arrivals were 6490 pounds. The eastern arrivals have not subsided as yet and receipts have averaged about 16,000 pounds a day.

Potatoes are moving steadily, with no heavy shipment of new spuds to outside markets. Receipts of old potatoes from the north have been less than 1000 sacks a day for the average of the week, and only 871 sacks were reported in yesterday. Onions are moving normally and prices on the white varieties continue high. Receipts were 347 sacks. There were no changes yesterday in fresh fruits and vegetables.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

Market Is Very Dull, With General Tone Slightly Easier, but With Changes Nominal.

The market was the dullest in some time yesterday on the stock exchange. Price changes were of the slightest, with the general tone just a shade easier. Ten shares of Union sold at $70, the lowest figure in some time. National Pacific was at 4 cents, and closed 3¾ bid at 4. Associated was firm. Consolidated Mines was unchanged. Producers' Transportation bonds revealed a slightly firmer feeling, but were not traded in on the exchange. Los Angeles Investment was practically unchanged.

New York Cotton Market.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, June 6.—The cotton market was uninteresting today. The usual week-end dullness prevailed. Some rains were reported in the East, but they cannot be said to have relieved the drought, although some promises are held out for more during coming week. General predictions are for fair weather in the West, but authorities expect rain in Texas and Oklahoma over Sunday, and found market operators willing to listen. Following is range of quotations:

Local Stock Market Activities

BY JNO. O. KNIGHT.

Of all the pessimistic publications throughout the country, wails of the Wall Street Journal probably have been loudest and it is now refreshing to note a tendency toward almost cheerful editorial comment in its more recent issues. In a late number the Journal concludes that after all a majority of the people in this country, particularly in the West, are getting tired of talking politics, trust legislation, the railway rate case and even the Mexican situation. Crops are maturing, says the Journal, and a large portion of our population are now much more vitally interested in getting ready for harvest, where a large army of help is going to be needed, than in most anything else. Politics, the Journal concludes, will from now on become a more or less negligible factor. The situation is then summed up as follows:

"Prosperity is coming, if weather permits, and regardless of politics. The political and legislative bogie has been paraded quite too much of late to be taken at full value. What people want is a return to business at full tide. The man with his hands on the plow has no time to look back to watch people threshing over old straw."

There is no denying plenty of room for improvement exists locally as well as elsewhere, and while there may be a difference of opinion as to whether the change has already set in there is great unanimity upon the question that increased activity in almost all lines of business cannot much longer be delayed. There are too many enterprises in Southern California awaiting profitable development, and too great a spirit of optimism for the future to allow any extended period of even relatively slow progress.

Tom Reed Gold Mines was one of the most active local traders during the week, the price advancing to $2.12½ on report that the main ore body has been tapped at the 900-foot level.

Gross earnings of the Southern California Edison Company for the four months of this year ending April 30, amount to $1,573,934, an increase of $44,075 as compared with the same period of last year. The depreciation charge for 1914 was $160,000 as compared with $218,000 in 1913, and the surplus figured for the stocks was $302,947 as compared with $216,600 for the first four months of 1913.

Tremendous Yield.

FIELDS OF WHITE FILL IMPERIAL'S COFFERS.

Season's Crop of Twenty Thousand Bales Brings Nearly a Million and a Half Dollars—Industry Will Be Trebled in Next Twelve Months, With Many Additional Gins and Auxiliary Plants.

IMPERIAL VALLEY'S cotton crop for the season just closed amounts to approximately $1,400,000. Twenty thousand bales have been ginned. The aggregate value of the cotton crop, machinery, equipment and land now in cotton is estimated at $10,000,000. There are twelve cotton ginning plants comprising forty-eight gin stands in the valley. Four more plants will be built this year. The estimate for next season is 60,000 to 75,000 acres with a probable producing capacity of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

The reclamation and cultivation of 90,000 acres of fine land in the north end of the valley, made possible by the purchase of 47,000 acres of deeded land by the Imperial Farmlands Association, and the construction of a high line canal, has given the cotton industry a tremendous impetus. Many thousands of acres of this land have been planted to cotton near Calipatria and all through that part of the valley preparations are being made to plant cotton.

Cotton is the white magic of Imperial Valley. It will never become whiter, but its magic increases for every year of this wonderland's phenomenal development.

In the long look ahead, when all of the Pacific Coast is in town lots, the big farms of Imperial Valley on both sides of the international line will be cut to from five to 100 acres, but this will not mean the end of cotton. Instead, it will mean that under intensive culture the land will produce two and one-half and three bales instead of only one bale to the acre. There is one crop of cotton in the year and a bale weighs between 500 and 600 pounds, exclusive of the seed, which is worth from $17.50 to $20 a ton. The farmer does or does not get the seed, according to the terms he makes with the gin, but in any event he gets the net value of fiber and seed.

In all the wide romance of agriculture never has a story of growing things been more picturesque or vivid than that of the cotton industry in Imperial Valley the seven brief years of its production here. This land is assured of seven times seven fat years and of forty-nine times that. In that other Nile land they waited for the river's overflow and sometimes it never came. In this land the farmers make their own rain and they make it when it will do the most good and in the place that it is the most needed. The sun, too, is always on the job here and the soil is inexhaustible. So long as there is left within this green vale and its vast sunny stretches a hand left to plant, or to harvest the cotton, will not fail as a source of increasing fortune.

FOURTH VOLUNTEER STAND.

What the net cost of producing cotton will be per acre in the Imperial Valley is yet problematical. One man, who planted five years ago at an initial harvest cost of $10 an acre, is still harvesting that original planting at a net output of $6 an acre, and this year's crop is so exceptional that from a fourth volunteer stand he will get at least two bales to the acre, instead of one.

That man is T. D. McCall, until twelve years ago a drummer of the International Harvester Company and now president of the Imperial Valley Cotton Growers' Exchange. McCall has a farm of 500 acres near the city of Imperial. He calls it La Corina. It is low land, three miles east of Imperial and they call it Mesquite Lake.

Up at Needles, Dan Murphy gives the Indians half of the driftwood they can drag out of the Colorado River during the overflow. Murphy furnishes the rope. McCall works on the same plan. He lets his land out to tenants, giving eighty acres to two or three live people on halves. They furnish the labor and the food. He provides the land and seed, the water and the live stock. After watching cotton a long time he saw that the people who got more than a bale per acre were those who had small acreage. That is why he divides his land among many men. This year from a volunteer crop on 320 acres, the total product will be between 600 and 700 bales. In many countries it takes two acres to make one bale, and that would be a good crop.

One of McCall's renters is Elzora Wood, a girl less than 20, whose father, R. F. Wood, was killed on the ranch about a year ago in a quarrel with a fellow tenant. She finished the crop, took her profits and accepted a fresh lease.

On McCall's place there are twenty-one voters and fifty-five persons, including many healthy babies. This is a good record for 500 acres of land and there are no labor troubles on that ranch. With an outstanding crop, nobody quits for the coast the first time a July sun reminds him of the ocean breeze.

BEST COTTON LANDS.

As to what land in the valley will grow the best cotton, McCall is in favor of all of it. He says, "The man with hard land says he has the best in the world; the man with the soft land says he's got it, and the man with the medium soil knows his is the best. All of them are correct. Some Imperial land may be better than other, but it is all good for cotton. It's like this: Imperial Valley is the crowning glory of the farming land of the world and each man's farm is the brightest gem in the crown.

"There is the north end of the county, for instance. It used to be the tail end and now all the rest of us have to irrigate nights to keep the tail from wagging the dog.

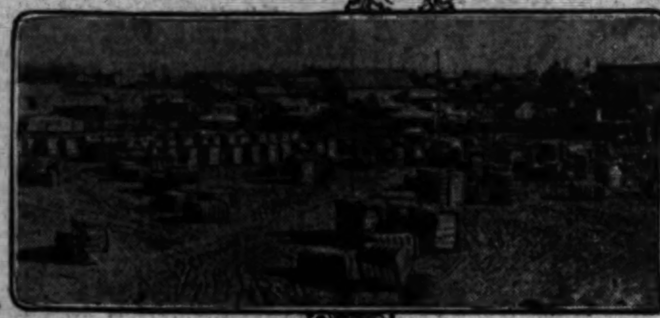
"I didn't begin raising cotton five years ago because I wanted to. My wife's father grew a little patch and cleared $114 to the acre. I had a deep prejudice against cotton, but I had no prejudice against $114 to the acre. I was tired being chambermaid night and morning to a lot of cows, anyhow. So I sold my cows, plowed my alfalfa under and planted cotton.

"I haven't regretted it, but I have not had a chance to change it if I wanted to. That one planting kept coming and it's still in the ground.

PICKING ONCE A MONTH.

"Here it is June and my cotton is in head when I barely got through my last crop by the 3rd of April. I had to pick more cotton in May. That means that every month of 1914 will be harvest month on the McCall ranch.

"At the outset you can plant cotton here anywhere from March 1 to some time in July. We've got no pests here of any kind. The boll weevil doesn't exist. He doesn't like our quality of sunshine. Nothing does but things that live and that are worthy of life.



Where cotton grows two bales to the acre.

The girl in the photograph at the top is Elzora Wood. She is only in her twentieth year, but is a successful cotton grower. The picture below shows how cotton is stacked in bales at the ginning mills. The cotton pictured next below was grown on the Edgewild ranch, near El Centro, from seed furnished by the New England Spinners' Association. It is long staple and brought twenty-one cents per pound. The yield was one bale to the acre. The way growers haul their product to the gins is illustrated in the bottom picture. In the height of the season heavily loaded trucks drawn by mules are frequently seen in all parts of the valley.

"The best test of this country and its cotton, and the best proof I ever saw of any land, is that out of twelve cotton buyers that have come to this valley on a temporary deal, ten of them have gone to ranching for themselves and made a success of it, and one of the other two tried it, but didn't know how. I guess the one man who didn't try doesn't need the money or doesn't love the business."

The cotton exchange has its present headquarters at El Centro and a present membership of 130 growers, representing only 20,000 of this year's crop of from 60,000 to 75,000 acres. McCall thinks the rest haven't been approached right. In answer to the question of "Why is a cotton exchange?" he asks, "What's the idea of an orange growers' association?"

Many people in the valley have very much larger acreage than McCall. B. F. McDonald, who lives at Calexico and part of whose land lies across the line, cleared $50,000 on cotton last year and has 2000 acres under cultivation this time. Daily Bros. have 1000 acres down there and the California-Mexico Land and Cattle Company has an immense acreage which is constantly increasing. A man named Autry has 1000 acres in cotton within three miles of Imperial.

GIN AT CALIPATRIA.

Near Calipatria an acreage of 9000 has already been planted and this will be increased to 15,000 next year. A gin is already being constructed at the new townsite, the machinery being on the ground.

All around Niland the people are preparing for cotton. Next year 85,000 acres will be a conservative estimate for the valley. This means an immense increase to the valley's income because they can figure on anywhere from $60 to $75 per bale on the white stuff.

Tariff makes no difference to cotton. It is as good on one side the line as on the other. There is no duty on raw material. It is one product where the port of entry cuts no figure. This is the salvation of the American owner of land on the other side.

The railroads make a rate on the compressed article and it is delivered to the compresser in transit. This means a flat rate on cotton from the plant where it is compressed to the port of destination.

For the first time in the history of the Southwest this problem of compressing is solved. The Imperial Compress Company has 108 cars of machinery and material on the ground at Imperial preparatory to installing a plant with a capacity of 1000 bales a day. It is the only compresser west of Houston, Tex. It will be in operation by the middle of August and has a warehouse covering five acres.

The Imperial Valley Cotton Growers' Exchange went out of existence last Wednesday, to make way for a new organization to be known as the Imperial Valley Long Staple Cotton Growers' Association. The organization will permit any who raise cotton to become members, whether they raise long or short staple cotton, but the prime object of the association is to promote the production of the long-staple variety as much as possible. Some time ago the government, which has rendered valuable assistance to the valley cotton growers, made the demand that the valley growers unite in an effort to establish one variety of cotton in the valley, else the government aid would be withheld. It is to establish a united effort on the part of the valley growers that this new organization has taken the place of the old one.

Feels Pulse of Broadway.

that so far as progressive methods in merchandising go, Los Angeles can well hold its own in the front ranks. Many cities seem to think that progressive merchandising simply means the correct handling of proper merchandise. They may have the proper merchandise, merchandise that is right up to the last minute, and still they are nonprogressive in their system and management of their stores, and toward their employees, and this, I am sorry to say, is very noticeable in some of the cities. Employers do not seem to have given their employees the same consideration that they have to the merchandise. However, while they are moving a little slowly in the line, they are moving, and good results may be expected.

BAD POLITICS.

"Business conditions were not as good throughout the East as they had been; due, I believe, to a mixture of politics in business. In interviews with merchants throughout the East there was a general complaint that the mixture of politics with business and the uncertainty as to what the administration would do at Washington was the cause of the present condition, as there was no reason why business should not be prosperous in this country. I saw indications of magnificent crops everywhere.

"I understand that since I left Los Angeles some interested parties have tried to wheel the business section of this city around. I was bombarded with telegrams before reaching New Orleans and they kept coming until I reached New York. I could not eat my breakfast without first receiving a bunch of telegrams, the general tone of which was 'Come back, come back, we need you here,' and I could see that some people were losing their heads. However, I started out to do certain work and I intended to accomplish it, and I can frankly say I did not hasten my return one minute.

FIRM BROADWAY.

"I was quite satisfied in my mind that no man, or group of men, could move the business district off Broadway. At no time did I worry about it. I want to tell you that the location of the Broadway Department Store is one of the best in Los Angeles. Even if all the merchants north of us move south or west, the Broadway will still do business. A store of such commanding size as the new Broadway will be, so thoroughly modern in its equipment, with merchandise priced the lowest and still up to the latest minute in styles, need have no fear. With adequate means to take care of the big crowds, and accompanied by the increased enthusiasm of my employees, with the loyalty that they have always shown me, I tell you, gentlemen, it never entered my head to fear that I had made a mistake in putting the tremendous amount of money that I have in a modern building at the corner of Fourth and Broadway.

INJURING THEMSELVES.

"However, I think the merchants are making a mistake in going down to Seventh and Grand and in endeavoring to make a new location. They are injuring the city; they are creating an upheaval in established real estate values that will make it very difficult to get reasonable loans on real estate for improvements; they are creating a doubt in the minds of property owners who have property north of Fourth street, whether or not it will be wise to improve their property, and the worst mistake they are making, in my opinion, will be in injuring themselves.

"Before deciding to permanently locate at Fourth and Broadway I went over the whole situation carefully and visited all of the desirable corners. I looked over the corner of Seventh and Grand, and the conclusion I came to was that the saving in rent would be so small that it was not worth while considering. I have visited a great many cities and I have never seen them take business away from an established corner having a modern store of the size that the new Broadway will be, and it would not take a very wise man to decide which is the better location.

LOS ANGELES LEADS.

"Frankly, as I have traveled through the different cities and met the heads of both the small and the large stores, I have come back to Los Angeles proud in the knowledge that Los Angeles is positively in the lead. There is no doubt of it. The investigators of industrial conditions have told me that they looked to Los Angeles as the most modern and progressive city in the United States, and my advice to the rest of the merchants on Broadway is to go slow and think carefully before they change their location. It is very easy to move, but it will take an enormous amount of work to draw business off Broadway; it will be like commencing life over again."

EXTENSIVE PLANTING.

Large Acreage Being Set Out to Citrus Fruits in Chatsworth District—Pass Road Started.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CHATSWORTH, June 6.—The most important project under way in this section of the San Fernando Valley at the present time is the construction of the new Santa Susana Pass road into Ventura county. The old pass route was laid out in the early days of the valley and is of an almost prohibitively-steep grade in many places. The new road, on the other hand, will have a maximum grade of 6 per cent. and will boast a thirty-foot macadamized roadbed. It bids fair to become one of the most popular automobiles drives in Southern California.

Chatsworth is feeling the effect of the wonderful development activity in the central part of the San Fernando Valley and since the completion of the splendid boulevard connection with Owensmouth, has taken new life. Thirty acres of lemons and as large an acreage of oranges have recently been planted in the foothills of this place. The planted area of deciduous fruit is also growing apace.

TRACT SOLD OUT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

The original subdivision of the Nuevo Rancho in the Lakeview-Hemet-Perris Valley, comprising 480 acres of small farms, under irrigation, has been sold out, and the second allotment will be increased to 1000 acres, according to the James R. H. Wagner Company, which is handling the property. Six purchases were consummated within the week, the buyers being as follows: J. G. Comstock, ten acres, to be set out to apricots; L. M. Winston, ten acres to be prepared for apricots and olives; W. P. Strong, ten acres set to fruit; S. L. Compton, Orange county, ten acres unimproved; B. T. Lakin, ten acres to be improved with a house and set to pears; S. R. Stanley, twenty acres, part of which will be utilized for diversified farming and the rest for fruit.

WHEAT MARKET RULES HIGHER.

FIRM CABLES HELP BULLS IN CLOSING PRICES.

Sale by Commission Houses on the Advance Is Much in Evidence and Results in Setback from Top Rates Reached—Provisions Are on the Upgrade.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 6.—Notwithstanding the fact that the government crop report due on Monday restricted business today in wheat, the market ruled higher throughout the session. Firm cables helped the bulls, closing prices, though easy, were a shade to ⅛@¼c above last night. Corn finished at a net advance of ⅛@¼ to 1c., oats unchanged to ⅛@⅜c higher. Provisions with a gain of 7½ to 12½. Commission-house selling of wheat on the advance was much in evidence during the last hour of trading and resulted in a setback from the top prices reached, but failed to overcome all of the rise. Corn went sharply higher and developed much activity. Arrival of Argentine shipments in Europe out of condition had considerable to do with the increase of buying here. Oats, which first were easy, owing to good crop reports, gained strength later with corn. Provisions went upgrade, influenced by hogs and grain. Packers were looking for only 130,000 hogs here next week, as compared with 155,000 for the corresponding time a year ago.

CHURCH GETS PERMIT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, June 6.—The erection of a new edifice for the congregation of the St. Francis de Sales Church is assured through the issuing of a permit to the Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles for the moving and repairing of the parsonage, which occupies a portion of the site of the new building. The plans call for a structure costing approximately $35,000, and of the mission style of architecture. It will have entrances on both Twelfth and Lime streets, where property comprising an entire city block is available for a church, and a group of buildings which ultimately will be erected for a parochial school.

DEVELOPERS OF VALLEY RANCH MAKING HISTORY.

Productive Orchards and Poultry Farms; Modern Towns, With Schools, Churches, Fine Homes and Growing Industries; Electric Railways and Paved Boulevards Mark Site of Barley Fields.

When a syndicate of Los Angeles men paid $2,500,000 in the fall of 1909 for the 47,000-acre Van Nuys-Lankershim ranch holdings in the San Fernando Valley there was consummated a realty deal which future historians of this county will note as one of the [illegible] events in the annals of Southern California's growth and development. Of record-breaking proportions, as real estate transactions go, this huge transfer was fraught with a significance that is only now beginning to be realized and which has long since overshadowed the magnitude of the deal itself.

Prior to the sale of this, the largest of the intact ranch properties of the valley, the Van Nuys-Lankershim tract had been for nearly [illegible] century in practically the same [illegible] as when the dons and the [illegible] held sway over the vast land [illegible] penetrated by the king's highway. It was a sea of barley beyond the memory of the oldest living [illegible] and it was a sea of barley when the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company took possession early in 1910. In all the development history of the country there probably never been another instance in which primitive conditions [illegible] for so long a time over a [illegible] body of fertile and accessible [illegible] at the very gateway of a [illegible] city.

But if the development of the Van Nuys-Lankershim tract lagged when [illegible] the sleepy old ranch places [illegible] all the activity in a large [illegible] of the San Fernando Valley, [illegible] that the new [illegible] of the big holding have more than made up for lost time. With the [illegible] generated by the hustling [illegible] operations that have in less than half a decade so completely transformed the former grain empire there has come, too, an awakening in all the rest of the far-reaching [illegible] around. The entire San Fernando Valley, from the edge of [illegible] high on the hills back of Chatsworth to the limits of the [illegible] little city of Glendale in the [illegible] outskirts of Los Angeles, is coming into its own.

Four years ago the only public highway through the main body of the San Fernando Valley was the dusty old Ventura road, skirting the foothills at the southern edge of the district. A spur railroad, laid by the Southern Pacific to haul out the harvested grain constituted the only means of transportation, in what is today the most accessible part of the valley.

Up against the northern foothills was the old town of San Fernando, practically dormant in so far as actual progress went, and to all intents and purposes in almost the same state of development as when the wise old Franciscans picked out its smiling slopes and planted out their olive and citrus groves on the mission lands. Up in the northwest corner of the valley was the village of Chatsworth, in the midst of a district to all appearances almost unchanged in a generation. In the southwest corner the settlement at Calabasas would have made a pioneer of thirty years before feel perfectly at home. At the valley's eastern end, Lankershim and Burbank had fallen into the ways of staid inaction that come over old-time towns once the settlement and development of the district immediately responsible for their existence has been accomplished and when new impetus, such as can only come from back country expansion, is lacking.

AND NOW.

Today the San Fernando Valley is a network of magnificent paved highways that as streets would do credit to any city in the country. City streets and boulevards in the country is a far hail from the barley fields and the dirt roads of four years ago, and somewhat of a strain upon the imagination of the uninitiated, but the road-making achievements of the San Fernando Valley have already passed into Southern California history along with the opening to modern intensive development of the valley itself. Already Sherman way, with its parked center, its glistening double roadway and its tree-lined and rose-embowered curb spaces and its brilliant lighting has gained a national fame, while the countless miles of splendid drives and boulevards, built by the State, the county, the Suburban Homes Company and other agencies throughout the valley, have come to represent paradise to the autoists. And, at that, new highways are constantly being projected throughout the district.

The old ranch houses with their clusters of barns and outbuildings are practically the sole reminders of the old days in the main body of the valley. The once unbroken reaches of level land are dotted with attractive houses in every direction. Two thriving towns, Van Nuys and Owensmouth, each the center and distributing point of a rapidly-advancing agricultural and horticultural district, lift their buildings against the sky. In each are modern schools, churches, business blocks, industrial plants, fine homes, and all that goes to make up the best in urban life.

SYNDICATE TO DEVELOP BIG FOOTHILL HOLDING.

Property Lies Near Owensmouth and Comprises Thousand Acres, Part of Which Has Just Been Planted to Orange, Lemon and Grapefruit Trees.

A syndicate composed of forty strong and influential men has purchased the unsold portions of the townsite of Owensmouth and nearly 1000 acres of choice foothill land lying to the west of that town. The Owensmouth Land and Townsite Company is the name of the new organization, whose membership comprises twenty bankers, a number of business men and others prominent in San Fernando Valley affairs.

The property acquired was purchased from the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company at a reported consideration of about $400,000. The syndicate of buyers was organized by Ross F. Whitley, who is associated with L. F. Rankin, George Jess, Alfred Brant, W. H. Ginn, George Hanna and W. F. Oliver on the board of managers. Roy Milner is the secretary.

An active selling campaign will be inaugurated and arrangements have been made with J. M. Johnson & Co., real estate dealers of Los Angeles, to represent the company in this city. I. W. Ketchum, formerly cashier of the Bank of Lankershim, has been selected as tract manager, with headquarters at Owensmouth, while W. H. Ginn, a man of experience along agricultural and horticultural lines, has been placed in charge of the development work on the acreage, where fifteen acres of orange, lemon and grapefruit trees have already been planted.

The acreage taken over by the syndicate will be still further improved by the construction of roads skirting the foothills and subdivision of the land into choice foothill home sites. Other developments will be made which will increase the popularity of the tract.

W. F. Wickersheim of Santa Ana recently purchased forty-two acres of land in the vicinity, and will plant the tract to Valencia oranges at once. Wickersheim is an experienced orange grower and after careful investigation decided that the west end of the San Fernando Valley is peculiarly adapted to the citrus fruit industry.

A well is now being developed on the syndicate acreage, and this promises a good yield of water at a depth of twenty-seven feet, where a strata of water-bearing gravel has been encountered.

The improvements already made in the townsite of Owensmouth will be kept up, and other developments will be undertaken as occasion requires. The syndicate will lend its support to all movements having as their ultimate object the highest interests of the people of the valley town and vicinity.

PROVES WONDER OF OIL FIELDS.

Lakeview Gusher's Tremendous Flow Continues.

General Petroleum Has Big Well on "Annex."

Progress and Activities in Kern Fields.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TAFT, June 5.—The Lakeview No. 2 Oil Company's gusher on Maricopa flat continues to be the wonder of the oil fields. With oil shooting fountain-like 200 to 300 feet into the air, the gusher is now producing more than 50,000 barrels of 23 to 25 gravity oil a day. The flow is very irregular, however.

After the well had flowed at the rate of 25,000 barrels daily for three weeks, the force of the stream Tuesday threw out two joints of eight-inch casing and later in the day two joints of six-inch casing. Still later the flow suddenly doubled, and the immense stream of oil formed a crater fifty feet deep and, possibly, seventy feet in diameter. The phenomenal flow has continued, taxing to the utmost the ability of the Lakeview company, as well as others, to handle the product.

The redrilled well No. 2 of the General Petroleum Oil Company, on section 32, 12-23, on the annex division, which came in during May with a flow of 10,000 barrels, is defying all efforts to keep the flow under control. The well is now sending oil high in the air and is producing about 8000 barrels daily.

A thirteen-mile ten-inch pipe line is being laid from well No. 3 of the Northern Exploration Company on section 2, 31-23, to the lines of the Midway Gas Company and the big output from the well will be sent to Los Angeles. The well has been flowing oil and gas for six weeks, the oil being saved and the gas allowed to go off into the air. The output of gas will now be conserved. It will pass through the pipes to the compressor plant on section 23, 32-24, where oil and all impurities will be removed before it is sent through the pipes to Los Angeles.

Well No. 3 of the Record Oil Company on section 28, 31-23, has sanded up after flowing 7000 barrels daily for two months. The heavy flow of oil washed away the derrick and a new one will be built and an effort made to clean out the well and put it in production again. Since the sanding of the Record No. 3 the gas pressure in well No. 9 of the North American Consolidated, which offsets the Record well, has increased greatly. The roar as the gas escapes can at times be heard in Taft, seven miles distant.

The Section Twenty-five Oil Company on section 25, 32-23, will redrill well No. 30 and the derrick is being rebuilt for that purpose.

Because of the increasing demand for road oil the Hanford-Sanger wells on section 3, 11-24, near Maricopa, in the heavy oil district, are being reopened. The property is owned by the California Hills Mining Company.

The Kern Trading and Oil Company's well No. 21, on section 1, 32-23, is in with a 1000-barrel flow under perfect control.

NORTH MIDWAY.

BOOM IN PROGRESS.

FELLOWS, June 5.—Section 26, 31-22, in the North Midway, has the appearance of an old-time Texas oil field in the boom days, for at every point new rigs are going up and wells are being drilled at a lively rate. The State Consolidated Oil Company on section 26, 31-22, is preparing to overcome all chances of fire from a blowout of gas which might be ignited by the torches in use at the rig. A contract has been let for the installation of a private electric lighting and power plant. This will do away with the torches.

The J. B. Dabney Oil Company, a new organization which started operations less than three months ago, now has No. 1 on the beam with a production estimated at 300 barrels daily. This well was off production for two weeks because of casing trouble, but has again become a dividend payer. No. 2 well is doing 250 barrels daily. No. 3 is drilling and a derrick is being erected for No. 4.

The State Consolidated Oil Company on section 26, 31-22, now has three wells completed and two more are being drilled. No. 1 is the biggest well in the neighborhood, its production being 450 barrels daily. Nos. 2 and 3 are on the beam, doing respectively, 250 and 300 barrels. The derrick for No. 6 is up.

As it is believed that oil underlies section 22, 32-24, despite the fact that the Maple Leaf and H. and H. wells have proved failures. The General Petroleum Company is preparing to drill a new well on the H. and H. lease. The derrick is practically completed.

GEOLOGIST IN SOUTH.

Dorsey Hager, the well-known geologist and petroleum engineer, has gone to the Gulf Coast fields on an important mission, and will be absent for several weeks, perhaps longer. An eastern concern is arranging to do some prospecting in a promising locality in Mississippi, and Hager is assisting in locating the well.

PROGRESS IN SIMI.

Petrol and Santa Susana Syndicate Continue to Bring in Light Oil Producers in Valley.

SANTA SUSANA, June 5.—Although success still crowns the efforts of but two of the concerns operating in Simi Valley, recent developments in this section have not been without significance, in relation to the extent of the field. Both the Petrol and Santa Susana syndicate are steadily operating their holdings, and each concern has lately brought in a good well.

The syndicate's No. 4 was completed with a production reported to be about 200 barrels daily and is holding up fairly. The company also brought in its No. 2 well with an output of about twenty barrels a day. The Petrol company's No. 11 is maintaining its output fairly, being good for about one hundred barrels daily.

The Hidalgo Oil Company's well has a very small quantity of oil. The Dabney & Roberts and Miley & Ruby wells are suspended.

The Calabasas, on the south side of the valley, has a fishing job on its hands, while the Midway Simi has encountered only two strata of hot water in its well. The hole is down about 1700 feet, and drilling is still in progress. This concern is backed by the Wright Brothers, who operate several properties in the Kern fields.

The Standard Oil Company is preparing to lay a two-inch pipe line from Tapo Canyon to the property of the Petrol company, for whose oil a contract recently was entered into. The line will be about seven or eight miles long, and will probably cost about $25,000.

Goldfield.

IS MAINTAINING ITS PRODUCTION.

CONSOLIDATED'S FINAL REPORT FOR APRIL PUBLISHED.

Shows Over One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars Net for Month—Jumbo Extension Ready to Begin Shipments to Consolidated Mill—Record of Development.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) June 4.—The report of General Manager Albert Burch, concerning the production and earnings of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company for the month of April, which has just been made public, shows that the mill treated during April, a total of 28,221 tons of ore, which yielded net profits of $150,764.47. The falling off from the previous month was small.

Manager Burch states in his report that preparations are being made for establishing connections between the Combination mine and the Mohawk, which will make it possible, if necessary, to hoist the ore of the former through the shaft of the latter. He explained that work has been undertaken, because for several months past the ground between the Combination shaft and the glory hole has been moving slowly and that eventually it will probably result in the discontinuance of the use of the Combination shaft.

The most notable development in the properties of the company occurred in the Mohawk. The 407-0 sill between the third and fourth levels was extended the usual distance and produced 376 tons of $22 ore, which is an increase in both tonnage and average value over the month of March.

Jumbo Extension.

Within the next few days the Jumbo Extension Mining Company will begin shipments of its ore to the mill of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company, which means that it will cease sending its output to its leased mill at Bonnie Clare, south of Goldfield, after having it treated there for a period of about two years.

The diversion of the Jumbo Extensions output to the Goldfield Consolidated mill is in line with a plan arranged at the time of the purchase, several months ago, of the Velvet claim from the Goldfield Merger Mines Company. The details of the plan were completed several days ago by General Manager Burch of the Consolidated and Vice-President Sprague of the Jumbo Extension.

The diversion of the ore will give the Jumbo Extension several advantages not afforded under the present arrangement of shipping to the Bonnie Clare mill. The Consolidated mill will make a saving of values from the Jumbo Extension ore as good as that made by the Bonnie Clare plant at a slight reduction in milling costs. Furthermore, it will be possible for the Jumbo Extension to increase its shipments, if conditions in the mine warrant, which is not now possible, as in handling the present daily production of eighty tons, the Bonnie Clare plant is working at full capacity.

Underground conditions at the Jumbo Extension mine continue highly satisfactory. The face of the northeast drift into the new acquired Velvet claim on the 850-foot intermediate level, is exposing seven feet of ore that averages $73.05 a ton. The stope above this drift is being advanced eastward on six feet of $12.52 per ton ore.

Florence Goldfield.

According to General Superintendent Harry B. Clapp, no developments out of the ordinary have occurred during the past week in the Florence mine. Three carloads of ore were shipped, making a total of thirteen thus far this month.

Los Angeles.

IS GAINING PROMINENCE AS AN OIL EXPORT PORT.

WITH shipments to foreign countries from the Southern California customs district this year totaling over 12,000,000 gallons (some 300,000 barrels,) valued at nearly $200,000, as revealed in the records in this city, Los Angeles may be said to have gained considerable importance as a shipping point for petroleum products since the first of the year. Very little oil was exported from this section last year, except in the case of Gaviota shipments, principally to Hawaii, which are not included in the above figures.

The decided increase in exports is due to the shipments to South America and other points from the General pipe line at the harbor. The tank steamer De Sabla has taken several cargoes of fuel oil to Chile, and last month the steamship Henry left with a cargo for Hongkong—one of first fuel-oil shipments to be sent to that section from California. This State only recently has been entering the fuel oil market in China, although refined products have been exported to the oriental country for some years.

Most of the refined oil shipped from the Southern California customs district is sent to Mexican points by rail, although not in any great quantity. If peaceful conditions were established in the southern republic a good trade could be built up, and help to relieve the congestion in the California market.

ARE WORKING OUT PROCESS.

Trinity Company Would Solve Reduction Problem.

Operations at Keystone to Be Resumed.

Britishers May Reopen the "Hetty Green" Mine.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDDING, June 5.—There is a strong probability that stockholders of the Trinity Gold Mining and Reduction Company, will receive more favorable news from their Trinity county holdings ere long. A thorough examination of the Headlight mine, at Carrville, is about to be made by an English engineer, and a corps of metallurgists is engaged in working out a satisfactory reduction process. Within a short time it is believed the metallurgical problem will be solved. In this case operations will be immediately resumed.

A great quality of ore assaying $4.50 per ton in gold and silver, together with considerable copper, has been developed, and at a depth of 150 feet the ore body is eight feet wide, as disclosed by the diamond drills. The management estimates it will require the expenditure of $25,000 to develop the ore sufficiently for economical mining, and that about $50,000 more is needed to place the big mill in shape.

The Trinity Consolidated Hydraulic Mining Company is prospecting a huge deposit of low-grade gravel near Douglas City, with a view to operation next winter. The deposit is traversed by pipe line system, bearing water to the Union Hill mine, and averages 5 cents in gold to the yard. The company is profitably working the Union Hill, where the gravel averages 5 cents to 6 cents per yard, and is confident of good returns from the new holdings. The deposit is the third largest in Trinity county.

Before the end of June it is planned to resume production at the famous Keystone mine, near Amador City. Twenty stamps of the old sixty-stamp mill have been placed in shape for immediate service. It is estimated that sufficient quartz is blocked out on the 2000 and upper levels to keep the stamps running steadily. A portion of the profit attending milling will be used in extending further developments, and the management intends to have the entire complement of sixty stamps in commission at the earliest possible period. The Keystone was a phenomenal producer in pioneer days, being credited with an output of $11,000,000 above the 700-foot level.

TO REOPEN MINE.

An examination of the Eureka mine at Sutter Creek, was made recently by an engineer said to represent prominent English capitalists, and it is reported the noted old property is to be reopened. The Eureka is owned by Mrs. Hetty Green, but she has never made an effort to work it, although large bodies of profitable ore are exposed in the old workings, and the mine adjoins some of the best producers in the county. Friction among stockholders forced the closing of the mine about two decades ago, after it had recorded a phenomenal output.

The Shasta-Belmont Mining Company has started production after several years of patient development. The mine is situated in the Pit River district, in the eastern section of the Shasta copper field, and is owned by Nevada people, headed by W. E. Casson of Carson City. Shipments of high-grade ore are going forward to the Mason Valley smelter, at Thompson, Nev., satisfactory rate having been secured from the Southern Pacific Company. The Shasta-Belmont ores carry important gold, silver and copper values, together with considerable zinc, making an excellent smelting product.

FOR ZINC SMELTER.

Representatives of eastern zinc companies have recently examined the East Side mines, including the Shasta Belmont, Bully Hill, Afterthought and Arps, with a view to installing a zinc smelter near Copper City. The zinc deposits in this district are considered among the most extensive in the West, but have been neglected because of the lack of reduction facilities. In fact, the zinc has militated against development, as custom smelters penalize ores when a considerable quantity of the metal is present. It now seems certain that the hitherto disdained ores are soon to become the leading support of the district.

Tests of the Field refrigerating process for control of smelter fumes are again in progress at Redding.

Experiments have been handicapped by mechanical troubles, but the greatest difficulty has been the precipitating of the valuable mineral elements in commercial form. The inventor states he has had no trouble to deprive the fumes of their harmful contents; the difficulty has been doing it economically—best accomplished by recovering the valuable minerals which are lost by modern smelting methods. An expert chemist has been engaged to assist in working out the difficulty, and within a short time it is believed the process will be a commercial success in all particulars.

The famous Zeila mine, for years a prominent producer, has been definitely closed down and the plant dismantled. The passing of the mine was not due to impoverishment of the ore bodies, but because of the distance of developed ore from the shaft workings. The work of years exhausted all the ore near the shaft, and it has become necessary to sink a new shaft if the distant veins are to be profitably worked. Rather than expend over $30,000 in new work, the owners decided to close the property. It is located near Jackson.

The Yosemite Dredging and Mining Company has placed its new dredge in commission on the Merced River, near Snelling. It is a small boat, the buckets being of 3.5 cubic feet capacity, but is handling light gravel and yielding excellent returns. Small dividends are paid monthly.

The recently incorporated Oro Fino Company is vigorously proceeding with the operation of the Bellevue and Bullion mines at Ophir, Placer county. Electrical equipment has been installed at the mine. Outside holdings will be developed later. All the mines were formerly large producers.

STANDARD OIL CHANGES.

Hanna Now Treasurer and Storey Secretary of Standard Oil—Two Vice-Presidencies Created.

The most significant changes in the Standard Oil Company personnel shown in the announcement made last Thursday, were the selection of R. J. Hanna for the office of treasurer, vice W. S. Miller, and H. M. Storey for the office of secretary, vice F. H. Hillman. Both Hillman and Miller, who were respectively secretary and treasurer, were made vice-presidents, there being now four holders of that office with W. S. Rheem, as senior, as compared with two heretofore.

Hanna still retains his office as director of manufacturing, as does Hillman as director of producing, and Storey as director of pipe lines. For the rest the personnel, as regards the principal officials of the company, remains unchanged.

This is the second reorganization of the Standard officers during the past year, the first having occurred when William Edwards resigned as president of the big company. However, it is said that the higher titles just conferred on the directors as above outlined are mainly of an honorary character, as a great part of the actual work is done by the assistants.

Hanna, who was selected for the position of treasurer, has been with the Standard of California for only three or four years, but was formerly connected prominently with the refining department of the Pennsylvania company. Storey, with a few exceptions, has been associated with the California company longer than any of the other members of the present board. He joined the company's forces about 1900.

Tonopah.

NEARLY DOUBLES ITS SHIPMENTS.

MERGER SENDS OUT THREE-FIFTY TONS A WEEK.

To Add Fifty Per Cent. More in Another Quarter—Dividend of Tonopah Extension Stimulates Interest in Western Division of Nevada Camp.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) June 5.—Tonopah Merger has increased its shipments from 200 to 350 tons a week. The property is now in such shape that it is a foregone conclusion that it will add 50 per cent. more to the output in the next three months, when the water level will have been passed and the flooding is overcome through installation of pumps at the Victor.

The Victor is now finishing cutting the station for the pumps and all material is on the ground so the actual work of putting in the pipes and machinery will not occupy more than a week or ten days. After this the Victor will continue the cross-cut to the vein, which is expected to open up within the next thirty feet. Should this expectation be realized the company will enter the shipping class by the first of August.

More interest is taken in the properties at the western end of camp since the declaration of a dividend by the Tonopah Extension. The Extension is now treating an average of 200 tons daily and proposes to increase this to 300 tons, with a possibility of eventually reaching a milling aggregate of 500 tons a day.

Reports of a compromise of the differences between the West End and Jim Butler have proven unfounded, according to the statement of Clyde Heller, president of the Jim Butler company, who arrived in Tonopah this week on one of his periodical visits. This time he comes from Surf Inlet, on Prince Rupert Sound, where the Tonopah Belmont, of which he also is director, has taken an option on an extensive gold quarz deposit.

This option runs to the first of July, 1915. In the meantime the Tonopah men will do some extensive development to prove the existence of the ore bodies they have been led to believe are continuous in the property under bond. Heller says there have been no negotiations looking to a settlement of the lawsuit with the West End other than the original proposition suggesting the adoption of vertical lines by both companies.

In the meantime the Butler and West End are outputting a greater tonnage than ever from their claims, without regard to the ore that may exist in the territory under litigation. The Butler has increased its tonnage to 1050 tons a week, from an average of 500 tons weekly, which was the maximum output less than six months ago. The values also have increased in like ratio. Consequently the earnings of the company from $15,000 have reached $35,000 a month.

West End netted in April $43,336. This is after spreading $9000 in litigation work to establish the apex of the West End-McNamara ledge. This is credited to "dead work," since it is not of any value to the company for more than demonstration of the truth of its claims to the disputed ledge. West End is now producing and milling 1400 tons a week and is constantly opening fresh ore-bodies.

Owing to the splendid physical condition of these properties the story of a possible settlement through consolidation has been revived and the consensus of opinion is that this would be eminently more satisfactory than to continue the struggle in the courts. A merger of the two companies would bring into being a corporation that would be second to none in the district.

Rescue Eula has come back after losing the ledge discovered three weeks ago. The trouble was due to faulting of the vein which branched off in two segments. The recovery establishes the value of the ledge to be better than at first understood, and it only remains for the management to develop stoping ground.

LOST HILLS.

WASCO, June 4.—Two new wells in one day and both flowing is the record of the General Petroleum Company in the Lost Hills field. Nos. 20 and 31 are the wells and they have an aggregate flow of nearly 2000 barrels per day.

The Universal Oil Company started redrilling on the No. 11 well in the Lost Hills field yesterday. Rigging up to redrill No. 35 is also in progress.

Goldfield Oro.

With the work of cutting a station at the 810-foot point in the 825-foot shaft on the property of the Goldfield Oro Mining Company practically complete, the management is now making preparations for the inauguration of lateral work fully to explore the big vein that has been revealed. Drifts will be advanced north and south from the shaft.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Sulphides.

SHARP (Nev.) May 15.—Q.: I am sending you some ore from this section of country. Please tell me something about it. J. A.

A.: The sample is a mixture of solid and granular matter, carrying low per cent. quartz, manganese dioxide, iron oxides, traces of lead and of antimony sulphide, with low-grade tetrahedrite in the mass.

Unless assays show silver present in paying quantities, the ore would be a very doubtful one to mine, ship, etc.

Calcite.

LOS ANGELES, May 16.—Q.: Desire to know percentages of strontia and of lime carbonate, and if any potash? If it contains potash, it is obtainable for use in fertilizing by grinding the ore and applying on soil, as they do ground limestone? There has been some question about the amount of strontium in this ore. Has strontium any fertilizing value? Would this ore be called a double carbonate? If strontium has some value as lime for fertilizer would this be of more value than ordinary limestone, and if so, why? A. P. M.

A.: The sample is not a double carbonate. There is no obtainable or available potash in the sample "by grinding the ore and applying on soil, as they do ground limestone," or ground gypsum, for that matter.

We have no formula for fertilizer which calls for "strontium" as an ingredient, and we never "heard tell" of strontium being one of the component parts of fertilizer.

Many limestones carry low percentages of strontia, and such limestones are of no more value as fertilizer than good, old lime carbonate, alone.

We have tested the sample as follows: Lime carbonate, 56.2; strontia, 3.5, percentages, respectively.

It would be a pleasure to go further on this analysis if more samples were at hand, and the approximate lcoality known.

Altered Rock.

SAN FERNANDO, May 15.—Q.: I am leaving a sample of ore at The Times office from Antelope Valley, which please analyze and greatly oblige. C. O. G.

A.: The greater per cent. of the mass carries magnesium carbonate with lime carbonate. Quartz, aluminum, silicate and iron trace present.

Dolomitic Limestone.

LOS ANGELES, May 17.—Q.: Would you kindly let me know what enclosed sample is; of what commercial value and use? Oblige an old subscriber. J. R.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The sample represents material of fair grade in the manufacture of so-called carbonic acid gas. It would not injure producing farm lands if used as a dressing for grasses, etc. Its commercial value, however, is of a very doubtful nature.

"Cotton Ball."

NEEDLES, May 17.—Q.: Locality north of Needles, Cal. I never saw a mineral like it, and it occurs in limited quantity in ball shape, when taken from the locality. What is it, please? N. H.

A.: Some people call material represented by the sample ulexite, and, a collection having ulexite on the shelves of other varieties would be in a condition of doubt, to say the least.

Ulexite of mineralogy today (hydrous borate of lime and sodium,) has a number of varieties, and the ablest mineralogists do not agree as to just what minerals represent ulexite. In brief there are too many minerals to which the name is applied.

Ulexite is "a valuable source of borax in California, and Nevada. . . . Color, white. Tasteless. Hardness 1. . . . Occurs usually in rounded masses, loose in texture, and consisting of fine, silky fibers. Locally known to the miners as "cotton balls," occurring in rounded concretions from the size of a pea to over a foot in diameter. Synonyms: Borate of lime, tiza, cotton balls, sheet cotton, and to which may be added the old and proper names: Hayesine, franklandite, cryptomorphite, etc.

There are varieties of ulexite that resemble selenite (gypsum,) with other samples that are often confused with crystallized Halite (common salt.)

Tellurium Absent.

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) May 17.—Q.: Under separate cover I am sending you sample of quartz from Gunnison county, Colorado, which I would like to know if it contains tellurium. The arsenopyrites look very promising to me. Please inform me through the "In the Earth" column, of which I am an interested reader, and oblige. G. F. B.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The quartz is ferruginous, and the arsenopyrite, with other sulphides, is, and are, very sparingly disseminated throughout the mass and in microscopical forms.

Manganese and lead present in low percentages. Not tested for gold or silver.

Baryte.

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—Q.: As I am not able to test the rock I send you by my brother, will you please tell me what it is? Some claim that it is tungsten, others say it is lead ore, and all I can say is that the rock is very heavy. A. L. G.

Marl.

POMONA, May 18.—Q.: Please find sample herewith, and it comes from Spadra, Cal. I would like to know about this. J. E. T.

A.: The sample is marl of mineralogy. Chemically, while the chief ingredient of the sample is lime carbonate, magnesium carbonate, with silica, is in the mass.

The sample possesses certain values as a dressing for grasses, etc., and material represented by the sample will burn to a fair grade lime.

Consult Paint Dealers.

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—Q.: Enclosed find sample of ore, ground and unground, from a large deposit of same in Arizona. Is it of any commercial value? Please test it and give results in the usual Times column. W. E. G.

A.: The sample is chiefly hematite (iron peroxide.) Silica present, with trace of graphite and traces of manganese.

The sample represents pigments of commercial value, and it can probably be used, if properly treated, for the various iron oxides (mineral paints) and probably for umber also.

The profits to be made from this deposit depends on the distance from railroad, transportation, cost of supplies, and so forth.

Quartz With Oxides.

MIAMI (Ariz.) May 19.—Q.: In sending you two samples of rock, Nos. 1 and 2, I desire to know what minerals they carry? I take the daily Times. C. C. C.

A.: Glad to hear from you. No. 1 is quartz, with iron oxides. Hornblende with tourmaline is p microscopical forms that confused with wolframite. T acid is absent, however. No. quartz, in part ferrugino with iron oxide coating. No tested for gold or silver.

Growth of Van Nuys Notable Even in Southland.

Grain Field Three Years Ago; Now Modern City.

Valley Metropolis Advancing by Leaps and Bounds.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, June 6.—Van Nuys, the townsite established in the center of the San Fernando Valley on February 22, 1911, is beyond any doubt one of the most phenomenal places that has sprung into existence in this great region of phenomenal developments. Its growth in population and importance in three years has been such as to astonish even Southern Californians and that in itself would constitute a record for any community.

The present population of the town and immediate vicinity, which three and a half years ago was but a large grain field and practically unpopulated, is now over 1500. The transportation facilities include the Van Nuys line of the Pacific Electric Company built at a cost of nearly $1,000,000; the Southern Pacific coast line, running two miles north and having trolley connections with the town, and the Chatsworth branch of the Southern Pacific, running directly through the town. The Pacific Electric line branches at Van Nuys, one route going to Owensmouth and the other to San Fernando, making Van Nuys practically a junction point.

Other public utilities operating in this new town are the Pacific Telegraph and Telephone Company, the Western Union Telegraph Company, the Wells Fargo Express Company and the Southern California Edison Company, furnishing light and power. Natural gas mains have been surveyed from a point on the Midway Gas Company's line, eight miles north, to this part of the valley.

Two fine church edifices have been erected in the town, the First Presbyterian, costing $10,000, and the Methodist Episcopal, costing $8000. Besides these two congregations the Christian, Baptist and Catholic denominations have organized and are holding services in temporary quarters.

The Van Nuys grammar school building was erected in 1912 at a cost of $60,000. The total enrollment in this school June 1, 1914, was 198 pupils and six teachers are employed. Bonds have been voted and plans have been prepared for a splendid High School building to cost $120,000. Work on the structure will be started in July. There are at present about forty-five High School students from this district attending the Hollywood school. These, in addition to the number who will graduate this year from the Van Nuys grammar school, will provide an opening attendance for the new High School of about 100.

The First National Bank of Van Nuys, which was established in 1912, with a capital of $50,000 and a $5000 surplus, now has present resources of approximately $200,000 and depositors numbering about 600.

The Johnson Organ and Piano Manufacturing Company located its factory here in 1913. The building cost $35,000 and the total plant represents an investment of about $250,000, and employs 100 persons. The products of the company are famous from coast to coast and the acquisition of this enterprise was a real achievement for Van Nuys.

The buildings erected in and immediately around Van Nuys represent a total expenditure of over $500,000. During the year 1913 the total value of buildings erected was about $150,000. The 1914 record is expected to be substantially larger.

The main thoroughfare of the town is Sherman way, which is 110 feet wide, with two roadways and the street railway in the center. Through the residence section this wide boulevard is parked on each side with beautiful roses and ornamental shade trees. The streets of the town are partially lighted by ornamental electroliers and other electroliers are now being installed to cover the entire town.

Van Nuys is the hub of all the extensive highway improvements that have been made in the San Fernando Valley during the past four years. The town now has direct communication by paved highways with all points in the San Fernando Valley, with Los Angeles, Pasadena and the San Gabriel Valley. The proposed new road through Benedict Canyon, joining Van Nuys with Beverly Hills, will cut the distance from this place to the beaches by half.

VARIED INDUSTRIES.

Steps were taken late last year to establish the poultry industry on the ranches surrounding Van Nuys on a scale that would rival the Petaluma district in the northern part of the State. Expert poultry men, with years of experience and who had made successes, were induced to locate in this field after they had carefully examined all the conditions here. Others quickly followed their lead and today, even in the short length of time that has elapsed, the poultry industry around Van Nuys is on a sound, profit-making commercial basis. Only the latest, improved methods are being followed and the type of houses are far above those found in any other poultry colony.

Fruit-growing may be said to be at present the principal pursuit in the valley. Over 1,000,000 fruit trees have been set out during the past three years on lands near Van Nuys. Many of the young trees are now coming into bearing and will produce an abundant crop this season. The varieties planted include peaches, pears, apricots, apples, plums and other deciduous fruits. A number of walnut and olive orchards have also been planted. Many growers are combining the fruit and poultry industries to advantage.

[illegible] last year established the Van Nuys watermelon on the Los Angeles market. The quality of the melons grown in this vicinity was so superior that they commanded a price of $20 per ton at a time when the market was flooded by supplies from other sections, selling at $5 per ton. The ranchers here who had melons planted sold them for a good price up until late in the fall and made good money. Berries and vegetables are being grown near here and are also bringing fine results.

THREE LOTS SOLD.

The McCarthy Company reports three sales in its West Ninth-street Heights tract, as follows: Lot on Kenmore avenue, to August Bolt, $3200; lot on Fedora street, to Thayer Decorating Company, $3000, and lot on Fedora street, to Clara Vallely, $3000. The completion of all improvements in this tract are progressing rapidly.

Curbs and gutters are now being laid on Mariposa avenue and Normandie avenue between West Eighth street and West Ninth street.

BUILDING PERMITS.

Following are the building permits for structures costing $1500 and over, issued in this city from May 28 to June 4:

Bungalow, five rooms, No. 1443 Manzanita street; A. E. Stone, $1500.

Bungalow, six rooms, No. 306 Normandie court; J. P. Hines, $2500.

LARGE INVESTMENT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA, June 6.—Thomas Higgins is spending close to $100,000 in new buildings in Santa Monica, all along Arizona avenue. At the corner of Second street a $12,000 residence is in the course of construction. At the corner of Fourth street he is building on a large lot twelve small bungalow-apartments to cost $16,000. Near his residence, Higgins is putting up at a cost of $50,000 an apartment-house.

"My young son produced 800 bushels of potatoes to the acre on this land—netting $484 per acre. This country is a money-maker."
Heber Gillins.

"I searched for ideal farming conditions in a dozen States and found just what I wanted at Milford. This is the place to make money fast."
J. H. Doran.

"A man can become independent here on 40 acres. Have netted $334 per acre from potatoes. We get $19 a ton for baled alfalfa. It is a good fruit country."
William Kelsey.

"I covered 10,000 miles of territory in my automobile looking for perfect soil, water and climatic conditions—and I found them all at Milford."
J. C. Belshe.

"This is the land for men who want to make money. I get 110 bushels of oats to the acre—and the finest oats you ever saw. If you want to succeed, come to Milford."
W. B. Wood.

"I have been in this valley for 50 years. This is a wonderful country. We have no crop failures. A stand of alfalfa here is permanent. Re-seeding is unnecessary. There is no foul grass. Soil and water conditions perfect."
George Marshall.

What we have done YOU can do on Milford Lands $30 AN ACRE

The Milford irrigated lands are for men who demand the best soil, water and climatic conditions—the best opportunities to make money fast—the best markets, railroad facilities, social and educational advantages—the best opportunity for increase in land value—for men who want the best of everything and are in a position to pay for it. Milford is a high-class project and is not intended for men of the "homesteader class"—Milford is for those who have made good—and who are now in a position to demand something out of the ordinary.

If you believe you are the type of man this project calls for—if you are in a position to pay cash for your land—go up and make your selection at once. The early buyers gain a tremendous investment advantage by buying directly suburban to the live town of Milford, Utah. Although this project has only been open a few weeks, you'll find the highest type of well-to-do farmers from nearly all the best farming sections of the West already on the ground. They have come from California—Imperial Valley, the Whittier and Ventura districts—San Joaquin Valley—from Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and other States. They are rapidly developing their property. The entire project will be settled by men of means—not a poor man in the Valley.

The lands are going fast. And no wonder! Milford has the type of red sandy loam that has made the Redlands district famous—a wonderful gravity irrigation system, a perpetual water right that is sold to and controlled outright by the settlers—a water system that experts state should not exceed 25 to 30 cents per acre yearly to maintain—a sunny, exhilarating mountain climate that will add ten years to your life—the greatest alfalfa, hog and dairying country in the West—the cheapest land and water of this type in the United States—not isolated land, but right on the main line of the Salt Lake Railroad—directly suburban to a modern, rapidly-growing city. There'll never be another Milford—when this opportunity is gone, you'll hunt the country from coast to coast and not find another like it. Write or call for new illustrated booklet just off the press. Get this booklet at once—it will open your eyes. Special Saturday excursions at low, homeseekers' rates.

PAST YEAR ONE OF PROSPERITY.

QUIET TIMES FAIL TO HURT GLENDALE PROGRESS.

Million in Structural Permits in Eighteen Months Now Drawing to a Close—Large Amounts Expended in Street Improvements and Lighting Projects.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDALE, June 6.—The past twelve months have been busy ones for Glendale, and the most prosperous in point of improvements in its history. Building permits for 1913 and up to June 1, 1914, amount to $990,076. The country around Glendale, and, in fact, the entire eastern end of the San Fernando Valley, has witnessed a like activity.

The electric light system has spent about $25,000 in the last year on general extensions, including an underground system, by which they have succeeded in removing most of the poles from the streets. On Broadway, especially, there are practically no poles either for the electric lights or telephones.

More than $135,000 has been spent the last twelve months on street work, including grading, sidewalks and curbings. Probably $100,000 more will be spent in the next twelve months. Twenty-eight five-light standards have been installed in the business district at a cost of about $2000; fifty-six additional lights of the same kind are to be installed, these at a cost of $5000. Thirty-three single standards have been placed in the residence section at a cost of $2000, while nearly sixty more are to be installed at once at a cost of about $3000.

The contract has been let, and work begun on the foundations for the household arts and the mechanical arts buildings of the High School. The grounds and buildings will cost $100,000. During the last year eighteen teachers were employed in the High School, and it is thought at least twenty-two will be needed to take care of the pupils next year. At present 425 pupils are enrolled, which is practically double the number enrolled last year.

Recently bonds were voted for $97,000 for grammar school purposes. This will be expended in buying new ground and for two new buildings and in improvements on the older buildings. When these schools have been completed, Glendale will have eight grammar schools. In the past three years the attendance at the intermediate school has practically doubled.

The Carnegie library at Fifth and Louise streets, is nearly completed, only the finishing of the interior work remaining to be done. The building is of pressed cream brick and is finished in white. It cost $25,000.

The Masonic Temple, which was completed within the past thirty days at a cost of $15,000, is now ready for occupancy, and the Odd Fellows Temple, a brick structure to cost $10,000, will be completed within a month.

Members of the First Methodist Church are raising funds with which to build a $40,000 church on their new location at Third and Kenwood streets. The erection of several large business buildings is contemplated for the near future.

The fruit outlook, including both citrus and deciduous varieties, is excellent, and the grain crops near here are said to be above the average.

INTEREST IN BUILDING.

POMONA, June 6.—There is an awakening interest in building here and activities along all lines are on the increase. City Building Inspector Cowles reports that the building permits issued the past month amount to about $35,000, and mostly represent new homes. The erection of several business buildings is in contemplation and the new school building in the southeast part of the city will be rushed. Contractor Fleming has started work on the paving of First street from Garey to Park avenues and along the Salt Lake tracks and the $150,000 worth of new road improvement work will soon be under way.

Ranchers Make History.

tract, in the older parts of the valley, the newer, modern development is crowding out the old. San Fernando, with its beautiful up-to-date improvements, looks like a young, new city, sprung like Van Nuys from the barley fields of yesterday.

DEVELOPMENT IN INFANCY.

Always an empire of the soil, the San Fernando Valley is only now beginning to come into its own in an agricultural and horticultural sense. More than a million deciduous fruit trees, apricots and peaches principally, have been planted in the valley in the past three years alone and hundreds of thousands more will have been planted before the present year is over.

In the older districts around Burbank and Lankershim and in spots near Chatsworth and San Fernando some of the finest peaches and apricots annually put upon the market have been grown. The output from these is already being increased by that from trees two and three years old and in a year or two at the most, canneries for fruit and vegetables will be imperatively demanded in both ends of the valley. Five years from now the San Fernando Valley will be a second Santa Clara Valley, with suburban advantages undreamed of in that famous district.

SUBURBAN FARMS.

The suburban farm idea has been strictly adhered to in all the valley development work. The proximity of the valley lands to Los Angeles and the scheme of truly urban general improvements carried out only serve to make unusual and ultramodern a programme of operations having for its prime object the intensive utilization of the rich valley soil and the wonderful valley climate for income purposes. The developers of the valley set out at the beginning with the fixed object of creating a practical farming and horticultural community that should be unique through its possession of everything that makes city life worth living.

In line with this idea every encouragement has been offered in the past year to those entering the poultry business. The result of one year's effort in this direction is to be seen in the great number of small poultry ranches that have sprung up in all parts of the valley, which is already a rival to the Petaluma district. The dairy industry has only started in the valley, but is already full of promise. Vegetable gardening and melon growing are well established valley industries.

In the foothills near San Fernando the great citrus and olive industries established by the padres are receiving renewed attention. All along the hill slopes, as far as Chatsworth, land is being set out to young trees. The wave of development is now sweeping over the western end of the valley and groves are being set out almost within the limits of Owensmouth.

The foothills at the southern edge of the valley are rapidly being cut up into sightly country estates, being in demand because of their beautifully-wooded canons and slopes and their proximity to the State highway. Observers predict that these hills will be dotted with picturesque country homes within the next few years and that they will become the main attraction, in a scenic sense at least, in the San Fernando Valley.

Connecting San Fernando Valley With the Sea.

Building three-mile stretch from Owensmouth.

The roadbuilding shown in the picture is on the tract of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company. The company is constructing three and a half miles of highway to connect with the Topango Canyon road that is being constructed by the Board of Supervisors. The two roads form a direct highway, fourteen miles long from San Fernando Valley to the sea. The road will be completed in about a year.

PAVING UNDER WAY.

Improvement of West Adams Street West of City Begun During Week. Will Benefit Whole Southwest.

The paving of West Adams street from the city limits to Washington boulevard was begun last week. A total of 12,447 feet, or more than two miles of roadway, are to be improved, affording a new outlet to the sea for the entire southwest section of the city.

This important improvement, coupled with the decision of wealthy property owners to convert West Adams street into a magnificent boulevard within the city limits, is believed to be the forerunner of great improvement activity in the whole of the West Adams district and in the territory along the new boulevard to the west of the city.

The cost of paving West Adams street west of the city is being borne jointly by the county and the property owners, and will amount to about $25,000. The Brashear-Burns company is handling the contract.

BUYS TO IMPROVE.

Crown City Man Is to Build Eight Houses on Lots Just Purchased in Culver City.

CULVER CITY, June 6.—O. M. Packard of Pasadena purchased eight lots this week in Culver City for a reported consideration of $12,800. Packard has arranged to start two new homes every fifteen days for the next sixty days on his property. He is said to enjoy the distinction of having purchased the first business lot sold in Long Beach, a property which he recently sold for a consideration of $150,000, and to have built the first bungalows constructed in Venice.

The Gildner Block, Culver City's attractive new concrete office and mercantile building, has just been opened and several tenants are already occupying space in it. The Fremont Dye Works of Los Angeles will open a branch store in Culver City at the corner of Pico boulevard and Welsh avenue. Andrews & Duncan, formerly of Glendora, will open a paint-and-wall-paper establishment in the Gildner Block.

NOTABLE FOR CIVIC PRIDE.

San Fernando Aspires to Be "City Beautiful."

Has Spent Enormous Sum in General Improvements.

Is Center of Growing Citrus and Olive Industries.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FERNANDO, June 6.—Civic pride is the keynote of the town of San Fernando, which is frankly out to win in the "City Beautiful" contest, recently launched by the 1915 Entertainment Committee of Los Angeles.

Through the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce, the Southern Pacific Railroad has been induced to co-operate in the building of a city park to embrace a plot of twelve acres belonging to the railroad and located in the center of the town. When finished this park will compare with any of the small parks of Los Angeles. The work of grading the park site has already been begun.

San Fernando is hoping to capture the proposed State Citrus Experimental Station and College of Horticulture and Agriculture, the location of which is to be decided by the board of regents of the University of California on Tuesday, June 9. The experiments to be made at this college are to be of a far-reaching nature and will prove of wonderful value to the citrus industry of California. The State will expend $150,000 for the buildings alone.

San Fernando is putting the finishing touches on the new $40,000 High School, and has just made improvements amounting to $40,000 on the district grammar school, while bonds amounting to $50,000 have just been voted for the purpose of building a grammar school for the Morningside school district of San Fernando.

Distributing stations costing $20,000 each have just been started here by both the Standard and the Union Oil companies. This will mean the addition of ten families to San Fernando and will be of great convenience to the orchardist, who will be able to get his smudge oils close at hand. Besides these improvements, the General Pipe Line Company of Los Angeles has spent more than $100,000 the past year on the installation of a tank and pumping plant. This is located within a mile of the depot and is used as a place for storing oil as well as for pumping it to Los Angeles and San Pedro for shipment.

Recently issued building permits here have amounted to $122,000. The Porter Hotel, built by the Mission Land Company at a cost of $60,000, is the finest of the newer structures in the town. During the past year nearly $150,000 has been spent in extensions to San Fernando's splendid street system and in lighting provisions and as much more will be expended during the coming twelve months.

At a cost of $40,000, T. J. Walker has just completed for the Fair View Mutual Water Company a complete pumping and distributing plant for the irrigation of the bench district, back of the town of Pacoima, and a mile and a half from San Fernando.

During the past year over 300,000 orange and lemon trees were shipped out from here and for this season 360 carloads each of oranges and lemons have been shipped to the eastern markets, with 100 cars yet to go.

The Los Angeles Olive Growers' Association, which owns the mammoth olive grove to the northwest of San Fernando, said to be the largest in the world, reports one of the most prosperous years in its history. The concern has just put out 90,000 gallons in pickles and more than 120,000 gallons in olive oil.

Bumper hay and grain crops in this vicinity are assured, as conditions are the best in the history of the valley, and it is expected that the average will run the full 100 per cent.

Much citrus fruit is now being planted at and around San Fernando. In the Mission district A. J. Wilson has just finished planting 200 acres in lemons, while the California Vegetable Union has planted 150 acres and the Perrine ranch has put out forty acres to lemons. Hundreds of acres additional have been put out in this fruit in five and ten-acre tracts.

In the Little Tejunga district 130 acres have recently been planted to lemons by a company composed of J. B. Lippincott, former assistant chief engineer of the Los Angeles aqueduct; Frank Shearer, superintendent of the Los Angeles parks; Matt Lambert, superintendent of Elysian Park, and D. L. Reaburn, chief engineer of the United States government's Alaska railroads.

SOME STANDARDS ALSO DISPENSE WITH EXTRAS.

Reductions Are Offset by Increases in Rates of Others, and Bonus Record for Former Subsidiaries Shows That Payments Are Holding Up Well as a Whole.

[From Wall Street Journal:] The declaration of an $8 dividend by the New York Transit Company, as compared with $10, which has been paid every three months since the beginning of 1912, makes the fourth reduction in dividends by the pipe line companies as a result of a diminished consumption of petroleum.

Most of the Standard Oil companies have declared their dividends for the first six months of the year. It is now possible to make a comparison with dividends paid in the last two years.

Within the past six months, in addition to the reduction in pipe line companies' dividends, several other concerns in the Standard Oil group have reduced and in some cases omitted their extra dividends.

Following are the dividend rates of the Standard Oil group of companies for the first six months of 1914, as compared with those of the full twelve months of 1913 and 1912:

INCREASE IN VALUE.

Valuation of May Building in South Pasadena Greater Than That of Year Ago.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOUTH PASADENA, June 6.—Building operations in South Pasadena are continuing at a good rate. Although the number of May permits was smaller than in May last year, the value was greater, showing that a good class of buildings is being erected. Twelve permits were issued for May by Building Inspector John W. Moore, as against twenty-two for May, 1913, and the total value was estimated at $24,857, or approximately $1000 more than for the same month last year.

A. C. Ong of Pasadena took out the largest permit of the month for the construction of a handsome new $10,000 brick and tile store building on Fair Oaks avenue, between Mission street and El Centro. The structure will contain two storerooms and a theater, will have a west front and will be 50x120 feet on the ground.

Anna M. Chasan of Los Angeles and Ida K. Shepard of South Pasadena took out permits for two attractive houses. The house of the former is being erected at No. 2079 Meridian avenue, and is to be a seven-room bungalow costing $3022. Ida K. Shepard is building a $3000, one and a half story house at No. 1419 Lyndon street. A. Wilstam took out a permit for a six-room bungalow costing $2400 to be built at No. 825 Stratford avenue.

Mabel Packard of Los Angeles secured a permit for an eight-room house to cost $3800. Smaller buildings are being erected by Karl Mohler at No. 846 Glendon Court and by C. C. McKee in Hope Court.

RANCH CHANGES HANDS.

Merced County Tract Purchased from Olive Grower by Syndicate. Will Be Placed Upon Market.

A syndicate of Nevada men headed by C. A. Duborg, a millionaire sheep grower, has purchased from Charles P. Grogan, the largest individual olive grower in the United States, a tract of 3360 acres near the town of Merced. This property has been known for years as "Grogan's Merced tract." The sale is one of the largest in acreage recently reported in the State, and it is announced that the purchase price totals $498,000, a considerable part of which is said to have been cash.

Both the buyers and the sellers were represented by J. B. Stearns, manager of the country lands department of the Janss Investment Company. Negotiations have been pending for some time and the details were arranged last Monday in San Francisco, and the final papers signed later in the week at Reno and Los Angeles.

The Duborg syndicate will prepare the acreage for the market as quickly as possible, and the entire tract will be retailed by the Peck-Sample Company, with offices in Reno, Oakland and San Francisco. Later offices will be established in Los Angeles.

The Grogan tract lies directly west of the town of Merced, beginning at the municipal boundary. It has a system of canals and water rights in the Crocker-Hoffman Ditch Company, which secures its flow from the big dam on the Merced River. The tract is all bottom land and is said to be well adapted to the growing of alfalfa, figs, peaches and for dairying.

Bright Outlook.

TRADING POINT FOR WIDE AREA.

Owensmouth Well Located for Distributing Center.

Surrounded by Fertile Back Country Lands.

New Road to Beaches to Be Great Asset.

BY D. P. MITCHELL.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OWENSMOUTH, June 6.—Owensmouth has been referred to as "the crown city of the San Fernando Valley" owing to its location near the foothills, where, encircled on three sides by converging ranges of mountains, it rests in a natural amphitheater. From this eminence a commanding panorama of the entire valley may be obtained.

In a commercial sense the location of the new town is most strategic as regards tributary territory, Owensmouth being the natural trading point and distributing center for a well-settled district lying to the west, as well as for a fertile section on the north. Last, but by no means least important, is the large acreage of rich lands contiguous to the townsite, land which will produce, without irrigation, the most luscious peaches, apricots, apples, plums and other fruit, as well as the finest of watermelons, casabas and muskmelons.

During the past four years a marvelous transformation has been witnessed in this section, the vast grain fields of former days having in large measure been replaced with handsome homes, and thrifty orchards. Still greater developments are planned for the near future.

Many thousands of dollars have been expended in preliminary work at the townsite of Owensmouth, in laying the foundation for a modern city, destined to become the metropolis of the west end of the San Fernando Valley. Handsome business blocks have been erected, a $50,000 grammar school is under construction, a domestic water system has been installed, electric lights provided, and, in short, all the activities which go to make a desirable suburban city have been employed at this point.

One of the most potent factors in the development of a new country is good roads, and in this respect Owensmouth is especially fortunate, being easy of access from every direction. A splendid system of graded and macadamized roads connects the town with many miles of prosperous farming country, and no new town ever began its career with a more perfect road system than obtains here.

In addition to the three roads which cross this part of the valley from north to south, intersecting Sherman way and connecting with the State highway on one side and the county highway on the other, a great network of minor roads has been constructed by the Homes Company, in pursuan their liberal policy of pr every worthy phase of develop work over the district. The results achieved the past three years are remark Some of the highest-priced Guernsey cattle in the United have been imported from the for the rancho.

A real thermal belt extends tht foothills at the west end of valley, many orange and lem chards having passed throug severe freeze of two years ag scathed. One farmer near O mouth has ripe tomatoes at thi growing on vines which are tw old.

A development that is now ing considerable attention here that of the 1000-acre tract of recently-formed Owensmouth and Townsite Company, lying foothills to the northwest of place. CITY AND VALLEY FORGING AHEAD.

BURBANK AND ITS VICINITY REPORT PROGRESS.

Miles of City Streets and Country Highways Completed in Past Twelve Months—Over Hundred Thousand Dollars in Building Operations.

BURBANK, June 6.—The Burbank [illegible] and valley section has shown [illegible] improvement and general advancement during the past twelve months than for the same number of years previously, and has kept pace with the rest of the San Fernando Valley. In the city eight [illegible] have been improved under the Vrooman act, at a cost of $175,-[illegible]. The improvement of Magnolia avenue west, to connect with a like improved street from Lankershim, has been accomplished, the city bearing part of the expense and ranchers of the valley the rest. Another improvement is being inaugurated on [illegible] avenue west to connect Burbank directly with Hollywood and Santa Monica.

There is also a storng civic movement looking to the extension of the [illegible] Brand boulevard in Glendale, to [illegible] a fine street, near the mountains, down through the famous [illegible] ranch and connecting with the San Fernando Valley boulevard. [illegible] will furnish automobilists one of the finest scenic drives in Southern California. When tae new boulevard [illegible] in and through Burbank are completed, the large auto travel at present will be more than doubled.

During the past year Burbank city has installed a municipal water plant at a cost of $50,000, and a municipal electric light plant costing [illegible]. The supply of pure water pumped from deep, spring-like wells is sufficient for a population of [illegible] and can be further developed as the need arises. Most of the homes of the city are now using electricity and an ornamental street lighting district is about to be formed. Burbank is also on the main pipe line from the Midway natural gas field and the crude oil pipe line of the General Pipe Lines Company runs through this city.

The recent building improvements in Burbank reach nearly $100,000 and include the $15,000 Farmers' and Merchants' Bank Block and fixtures, the $9000 Horne block and sanatorium, a new postoffice and about [illegible] residences, costing from $500 to [illegible] each. The Atherton Villa, a [illegible] home building for aged ministers and missionaries and their families, to cost $35,000, is now in course of erection; as is also a new [illegible] block for G. B. Fisher.

Burbank now has a population of [illegible], and the number of new residents is in like ratio to the improvements. The city tax rate is $1. [illegible] miles from Los Angeles, on the main line of the Southern Pacific and Pacific Electric Railways, and situated on the county boulevard from Los Angeles to Newhall, Burbank is well located to benefit by the general development in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

There has been a good movement in Burbank city real estate in recent months, but the most activity has been shown in the immediate valley lands. There has been and is now a steady demand for Burbank villa sites and small ranch homes, coming from Los Angeles and elsewhere. Calls also come for larger ranches, improved and unimproved. During the past year sixteen ranches, large and small, have changed hands in this vicinity. The amount of these real estate transactions will reach $150,-[illegible].

The principal crops of this section, [illegible], deciduous fruits, watermelons, cantaloupes, casabas, berries, [illegible] vegetables are proving more and more profitable to the growers, and crop prospects were never better than at the present time.

BUYS VALLEY LAND.

[illegible] Lane of Burns, Mont., has purchased a small ranch in San Fernando Valley, the Janss Investment Company acting as agents in the transaction. TO TURN RANCH INTO CREAMERY.

LARGE INYO COUNTY ESTATE BOUGHT BY MONROVIA MAN AS SITE FOR DAIRY.

Thomas D. Campbell & Co. report the sale for A. W. Longley, a millionaire Chicago merchant, to V. E. Houlihan of Monrovia of the well-known Abelour ranch, near Bishop, Inyo county. The property was for years occupied by Longley as his country estate, and as such became one of the show places of Central California. It contains 2042 acres of fine land, and in addition to the main residence has three other complete sets of buildings. The principal dwelling is a fine Colonial home containing fourteen rooms.

The deal involved a reported total of about $250,000, part of which is represented in 100 acres of unimproved land at Arcadia. The purchaser's interests were represented in the deal by the Charles A. Turner Company. It is the intention of Houlihan and his associates to turn the property into an up-to-date dairy and creamery, to supply the markets of Los Angeles and San Francisco. A herd of 500 selected Holstein cows is to be imported for the purpose.

Improvements installed at the ranch by Longley include a gravity water system for irrigation and domestic uses. This is supplemented by a concrete storage reservoir, which insures an inexhaustible water supply.

MEETING CALLED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VICTORVILLE, June 6.—A special meeting of the Victor Valley Chamber of Commerce has been called for next Saturday, June 13, to take up matters relating to the reclamation of this district, and also to consider several projects for the extension of good roads. The fact that President Clark of the Salt Lake Railway has announced that his company will build a $3,000,000 line from Barstow to San Bernardino, through the heart of Victor Valley, has created much enthusiasm here.

FROM GRAZING FIELDS TO LUXURIOUS HOMES

Remarkable Success of Suburban Homes Company in Developing 47,000 Acres Exemplified in Magnificent Improvements, Valuable Orchards and Increase in Population.

No suburban farm community on earth was ever developed so successfully with the ideal and material so happily combined as the 47,000 acres of land in San Fernando Valley purchased by the Los Angeles Surburan Homes Company, three years ago last November.

From a great undeveloped ranch has been created two thriving towns, Van Nuys and Owensmouth, and hundreds of highly developed farms ranging from five to 160 acres. Millions of dollars have been added in the increased productivity of the lands. Values have been increased by this greater capacity to produce and by the improvement of the boulevards and adjoining property. Purchasers of lands have aided in developing the district and have become enriched by the values added to their holdings.

The result is one of the most idealistic farm communities in the world. Rich soil, matchless climatic conditions, surroundings of exceptional beauty, combined with faultless man-made improvements have created a condition where luxury, beauty and financial profit accrue to even the men of modest means who have secured land there.

To attain this condition required money, unstintingly spent, courage, imagination on the part of the men who were able to provide the money, extraordinary skill and experience in building on a large scale and untiring effort.

The Suburban Homes Company has had these requisites in full degree. Its policy has been broad and lavish. It has expended more than $4,000,000 in money and has used it to the best possible advantage.

The tract was purchased in the fall of 1909 from the Los Angeles Farming and Milling Company and possession was secured November 1, 1910. The purchase price was $2,500,000. The projectors and original purchasers were: Gen. M. H. Sherman, O. F. Brant, H. J. Whitley, Gen. H. G. Otis and Harry Chandler. Others subsequently included in the syndicate are: R. P. Sherman, J. P. Doherty, Harry E. Andrews, M. S. Hellman, James H. Adams & Co., W. R. Rowland, George Hanna, W. H. Allen, Jr., R. J. Waters, E. P. Clark, R. C. Gillis, F. X. Pfaffinger, O. J. Wigdal, T. A. Fisher, Stoddard Jess, W. D. Longyear, W. B. Scott, W. D. Woolwine, R. W. Kenney.

Surveys were begun early in 1910 and the first subdivision map was prepared in April, 1910. The work of building the boulevard was begun in May, 1910, and final surveys begun at the same time. Actual subdivision and development work was commenced in January, 1911. The lands outside the townsites were subdivided into tracts of from five to 640 acres. Van Nuys townsite was opened February 22, 1911, and has been practically all sold out. Owensmouth townsite was opened March 30, 1912. Marian has not yet been subdivided.

Prices of land varied from $150 to $500 per acre, except a small portion of lands immediately fronting the boulevard and electric railroad which sold at from $450 to $800 per acre. Town lots ranged from $200 to $1000. Both lands and lots were priced and sold in the open market in competition with all other real estate offerings in Southern California, the prices and values being established according to present worth and proximity to the boulevard, electric railroad and townsite centers.

From the beginning of development until now H. J. Whitley has devoted all his time to its creative development, equipped with the experience derived from the successful construction of sixty cities and towns and hundreds of thousands of acres of farm lands in the Middle West and from his successful development of Hollywood.

The Suburban Homes Company's subdivision has been handled on a comprehensive detailed plan from the beginning. The fifty miles of boulevards and thirty-five miles of electroliers were a part of the original programme. The intention of the company to link the towns and tributary lands with the finest and most expensive system of highways in any agricultural community in the West has been carried out undeviatingly. Co-operating with the County Board of Supervisors, the company has secured a direct route to the sea. It has created values and established a foundation for a farm community of remarkable prosperity and dense population.

The total investment of the company to date is over $4,000,000 of which over $1,000,000 has been spent on good roads. The company by the use of liberal bonuses has made it possible for settlers to build a high class of public buildings and dwelling houses.

Of the 47,000 acres in the purchase, 30,000 acres are level. It was the object and intent of the subdividers to make this level land highly productive, intensely settled and of commercial importance to Los Angeles by virtue of its settlement and tributary business, in other words to create a high class farm suburb to Los Angeles city.

There are 2500 settlers in the tract. These have erected 500 dwelling houses with a value of $1,500,000. Fifty business buildings, costing $300,000 have been built. There are about 400 school children. Van Nuys and Owensmouth each have fine grammar school buildings, each of which cost $40,000. Bonds have been voted for a $120,000 high school building at Van Nuys.

Sherman Way was built by the company at a cost of $500,000. It is sixteen miles long with a double roadway, both lined with cement curbs. It is parked throughout and paved with asphalt and rocks. Other roads built by the company aggregate about 100 miles. The cost of these was approximately $300,000.

Approximately 31,000 acres of the 47,000 acres purchased is tillable valley land. The soil ranges from light, sandy loam to dark, heavy loam and is very deep. Many borings show the top soil to be fifty to 100 feet deep. It has the remarkable advantage that when cultivated it retains moisture throughout the summer. Deciduous fruits of all kinds thrive remarkably without any irrigation. There is no hard pan nor alkali. Trees planted three years ago are now bearing and have attained a development equal to that of trees five to six years old in less favored localities. Climatic conditions are unequalled for the production of fine fruit and heavy crops of all kinds.

With its full programme of development work nearing completion and the ownership of the lands largely passed to other hands the company regards the present high stage of improvement as one of the greatest triumphs of development in the history of the West. With incomparable advantages of soil, climate and location, the finest sytsem of paved and lighted boulevards any agricultural community ever had, the growth in the immediate future is sure to be enormous.

The upbuilding of San Fernando Valley and the prospect that it may be annexed to Los Angeles soon offers a significant parallel to the conditions that obtained in Hollywood. There a community of high class, luxurious homes was built up by Mr. Whitley. The territory was annexed to Los Angeles to the mutual benefit and advantage of both Los Angeles and Hollywood.

Mr. Whitley has built on the same plan and by the same methods in San Fernando Valley. The same foundation for permanent and substantial prosperity and continued growth has been laid. If San Fernando Valley becomes a part of Los Angeles it will bring a great area of highly productive land, the very best type of citizens, values and prosperous conditions.—[Advertisement.

Perilous Turmoil.

COLORADO, MECCA FOR AGITATORS, MAY BECOME A TERRITORY AGAIN

Suffrage State, Cursed by Dishonest Journalism, Unable to Control Its Own Affairs or Pay Militia.

Since Days of "Bloody Bridles" Waite, Every Vagary of Legislation Has Been Tried Until Capital Practically Shuns It, and the Union Walking Delegate Is in the Saddle With No Hope of Relief.

BY FREDERIC N. SHOREY.

IS THE State of Colorado on the verge of being turned back into a Territory?

Such a hint was conveyed but a few days ago when the special session of the Colorado Legislature adjourned without taking adequate steps to preserve order within its borders.

President Wilson in a special telegram to the Governor of the State declared he could not believe its people were willing to surrender their sovereignty, yet the Legislature had met and adjourned apparently satisfied that the United States would keep its regular troops on duty indefinitely in the coal fields, doing police duty, which every State in the Union is supposed to be able to do for itself.

What has brought Colorado to the condition where capital shuns it, where a business man knows he must take his chances on receiving the protection due him under the law, and where its bonds are practically worthless?

A Denver man would give various answers to the questions if he answered it at all. Perhaps it would be hard to attribute it to any one cause. But there are several which, taken together, will combine to produce such a result in any State, if carried out to the logical conclusion, which has been arrived at in Colorado.

MECCA FOR AGITATORS.

For twenty years Colorado has been the mecca for agitators of all sorts. Beginning with the long-haired Populists, it has welcomed the suffragist, the Socialist, the labor agitator, and the red-handed murderous type of which Haywood, Moyer and others of that ilk are the best example. Its history in that time has been one in which every vagary of legislation, every theory which its author was anxious to have tried out, every whim of a crank politician has been eagerly grabbed at to bring about a change in existing conditions. On top of it all, dishonest and degraded journalism, of which the city of Denver can furnish the most shining examples in the United States, has aided and abetted in bringing about the conditions under which the State is groaning.

When the aged Davis H. Waite of Aspen was unexpectedly elevated into the Governor's chair at the time when Populism swept Kansas, Oregon and one or two other Western States the people looked for a revolution in politics, and Waite did his best to give it to them. He speedily put the State on the map as the joke of the United States, and some of his sucessors have labored most successfully to keep it there.

When B. Clark Wheeler of Aspen, a prosperous mining man and Republican, as well as the son-in-law of Waite, was asked if he intended to support the old man for Governor he replied:

"Well, I've supported him all my married life, and I don't see why I shouldn't now when he's got a chance to earn a salary for himself."

The incidents of Waite's administration if written as they occurred would fill a volumne. They were mostly humorous, but their consequences were far-reaching and serious.

"BLOOD TO THE BRIDLES."

Beginning with his famous speech in which he declared that "blood should flow to the horses' bridles" rather than that the people's liberties should suffer, Waite proceeded to make Denver and the State House the stamping ground for the down-and-outers of all types and nationalities. If a man could show that he had been unable to earn a dollar for whatsoever reason he was practically certain of place on the State pay roll.

At that time the silver craze was rampant throughout the West, stimulated by our present Secretary of State's famous "Cross of Gold" speech, and the Governor immediately decided that as long as the United States would not adopt free coinage of silver Colorado itself should do it. So he immediately called a special session of the Legislature for the purpose of authorizing the coinage of Mexican dollars, which he believed would circulate at par value in Colorado. Although Populist in sentiment, the legislators, after forty days of oratory, decided Colorado was not yet quite big enough to establish its own coinage and the Governor's notable scheme was shelved.

But meanwhile the agitators saw their chance and proceded to lay the plans which now, after twenty years, have brought about the reign of terror that promises to disrupt the State. Knowing the sympathies of the Governor, they proceeded to organize the Western Federation of Miners, destined to become the most lawless aggregation that the country has ever known, with the possible exception of the Molly Maguires and the present I.W.W.

CRIPPLE CREEK STRIKE.

The big strike in Cripple Creek was the first time the organization showed its strength. The discovery of the Independence and the Portland mines in that district, which have produced millions of dollars, brought a rush of adventurers to the camp and in the heyday of its prosperity a strike was inaugurated with the blowing up of the Strong mine. The mine owners at once took steps to protect their properties by a force of deputies, knowing the Governor would never lift a hand to prevent the destruction of plants worth millions, which the agitators openly boasted they intended to carry out.

And they reckoned aright. Almost in the first week of the strike when the Governor saw that his friends among the unionites might get worsted, he promptly sent his militia to the camp and the guards were dispersed and the union placed in the saddle.

This was the keynote for a reign of terror and blackmail in nearly every mining camp in Colorado. Business men saw that they must submit or get out of business, and a large number submitted.

But meanwhile Waite was going on with his programme. At the time the police force of Denver was under control of the Governor, he appointing the fire and police board. The Coxey army arrived in Denver, its members hungry and willing to grasp at anything. The Governor established a camp for them in the heart of Denver, using the tents of the State militia. It was heaven for the Coxeyites, who were in command of the Kelley now serving a sentence for vagrancy in California after starting a similar movement, which failed.

The situation in Denver was what Kelley and his men were looking for. The Governor speedily found places for a number of the raggedest specimens on the police and fire department and even in the State House itself. But the fire and police board finally balked at appointing any more at the behest of the Governor and were promptly removed from office. Contending that they had been illegally removed they refused to quit and held office. After twenty-four hours' consideration of the best way to get them out the Governor decided to call out his militia again. The people of Denver could scarcely believe their eyes when they saw two regiments marched through the streets and two pieces of artillery planted in the main street, their muzzles trained on the City Hall. The fire and police board were told they were given one hour to get out or the order to fire would be given. But the fire and police board had not been idle. With the assistance of the Sheriff they had sworn in a force of deputies, veteran sharpshooters of the plains, and the tower and every window of the City Hall was filled with armed men. The Adjutant-General in command of the militia, a Civil War veteran, saw the trap the soldiers were in. He knew that although he could send two shots into the City Hall, every one of his men was in a position to be picked off before he could reload.

TARSNEY'S COOL-HEADEDNESS.

It is commonly believed that the cool-headedness and patriotism of Gen. Tarsney prevented a fearful massacre on that day. The infuriated Governor, when the board refused to get out at the end of the hour, had given the order to fire. But Tarsney had secretly sent word to Gen. McCook, in command of the Department of Colorado, and McCook on his own volition ordered into Denver the Seventh Regular Infantry from Ft. Logan, seven miles away, and quiet and order was restored. Frothing at the mouth Waite demanded of McCook why he had taken this action, and was told that the United States government believed the postoffice and mint were endangered and had acted to protect them. But Waite finally ordered in his militia and the fire and police board eventually gave up their offices.

The finish of Waite's administration was accompanied by scandals in nearly every State department, at the penitentiary and in other institutions. But the Governor, in order to assure himself of another term, had taken great pains to secure the passage of an equal suffrage amendment conferring the unrestricted franchise on women. Believing that the grateful suffragists would rally to the support of their champion, who had given them the ballot? They did not. The women, one and all, rallied and what he had done for the women.

KNIFED BY WOMEN.

Did the grateful suffragists rally to the support of the man who had given them the ballot? They did not. The women, one and all, rallied to the support of the opposition candidate and snowed Davis H. Waite under to the tune of about 18,000 majority. But meanwhile a new element had been introduced into Colorado politics, which puzzled the experienced men politicians. How to handle the feminine voter was a question. It had been predicted the women would not go to the polls, that they would regard the franchise as a toy, but it was found they did not.

As industry was practicaly dead in Colorado as the result of the labor-union agitation and the silver craze, men and women all over the State turned their attention to politics. Women who had never heard of the "Crime of '73" studied up to find out what it was and took the stump in behalf of silver and a job. Men organized all kinds of political parties. There were silver Republicans, straight Republicans, Populists, middle of the road Populists, silver Democrats, White-Wing Democrats, Socialists, Silverites, and a few others that the writer does not recall just now.

Politics was the main industry of the afflicted State and the political pink tea for the women was the king of indoor sports. Mr. Bryan came to Colorado and made speeches and convinced the people that their silver was to be coined into money by the nation and the idea was popular. The people of Colorado saw visions of great wealth ahead, the downfall of the "Shylocks of Wall Street" and the "Plutocrats of Lombard Street," and a man who ventured to suggest that the tail might not be able to wag the dog and that the people of the East had their ideas on that question was in a fair way to be mobbed.

M'KINLEY ELECTED.

To their great surprise it turned out to be so, and McKinley was elected. The years that followed were years of prosperity for the United States; and Colorado in spite of itself shared in it. They discovered that their gold made up in value all that had been lost by the closing of the silver mines. A strong hand was adopted with the labor agitator under the new regime and a vigorous policy was used in the strikes that were inaugurated. For six months Gov. McIntire, Waite's successor, kept the militia in Leadville and the Western Federation of Miners for the time being were held in check, regardless of the fact that they had as their champion, T. M. Patterson, later United States Senator, and owner of the Rocky Mountain News.

But throughout the trouble in the State administration the newspapers of Denver kept the people in a turmoil. A lottery man of Kansas City and an ex-bartender had gotten hold of a defunct newspaper and by yellow journalistic and blackmailing methods were keeping the business world in a perpetual state of terror. No man's reputation was safe. If he did not "come across" with his advertising he was likely to wake up in the morning and find a story about himself in red ink that would blast his reputation forever. There seemed to be no redress in the courts or elsewhere. The pace having been set in this kind of journalism it has been maintained to this day in long-suffering Denver. At one time an outraged lawyer shot the two proprietors of this newspaper, but failed to kill them. He was tried for the shooting, but no jury could be found in Denver which would convict and he was discharged. Votes of thanks were passed to the lawyer on all sides and expressions of regret were numerous that his aim had been faulty.

Since then practically no new business has been able to be established in Colorado without first having "seen" the proprietors of this paper. The people have meekly submitted.

PATTERSON'S AMBITION.

Mr. Patterson, burning with a desire to go to the United States Senate, conceived the idea that warfare on the corporations, with the aid of his newspaper, afforded the surest way. The water company of Denver at the expense of millions had established one of the finest supplies of water that any city in the United States possesses. It is brought nearly 100 miles from the mountains, is adequate in every way. But Patterson, by appealing to popular prejudice in the course of twenty years has managed to place the water company in the position of being trespassers in the streets of Denver. Their bonds have been rendered worthless and what its future will be has not yet been figured out. As yet the United States courts have not permitted confiscation of property, and while the plan in Denver is to purchase property worth at least $20,000,000 for about $8,000,000 the agitators have not been able to put it through.

One reason is that the city of Denver cannot raise the $8,000,000.

The constitution of the State has been variously amended until now Colorado has practically the recall of judicial decisions, the initiative and referendum, the eight-hour day, women suffrage and bankruptcy.

The depredations of the Western Federation of Miners in Colorado would fill a volume. In the second or third Cripple Creek strike that organization deeming it about time to strike terror to the hearts of the people decided that a big dynamite explosion would do as well as anything. A large amount of dynamite was placed beneath the platform of the depot of one of the Cripple Creek mining camps and it was timed to explode when about 200 miners were on the platform. Unfortunately for the plans of the Western Federation there were not as many there as expected and only seventeen were killed at the explosion.

PEABODY ELECTED.

The people, tired of the continued outrages, decided it was time to take drastic action, and the next Governor went in on the pledge to clean out the desperadoes that had terrorized Cripple Creek. It is history how Gov. Peabody kept his pledge. At the first outbreak of lawlessness in Cripple Creek the militia was sent down there; every man known to be an agitator and in sympathy with their methods was gathered together, herded on a train, and in command of Gen. Sherman Bell, the fearless head of the National Guard, was deported across the State line. The militia was kept in camp long enough to assure the Moyers, Haywoods and others that a repetition of lawlessness would result in still more drastic action.

The aiders and abettors of lawlessness in Denver raised a long cry at the strong hand of the Governor and recourse was had to the Supreme Court, but in the end the Governor was sustained. The lesson in Cripple Creek proved efficacious, and once law and order was established in the camp it has been maintained. The agitator there has been taught it is absolutely unsafe for him to show his head there and keeps away.

THREE GOVERNORS IN A DAY.

Then follows the episode which has made Colorado unique in the history of Statehood. It is the only State in the Union that has had three Governors in one day.

On the face of the returns at the next election Alva Adams, the Democratic candidate, was elected over Peabody. The Legislature, however, was controlled by friends of Peabody, and a contest was instituted on the ground of illegality and irregularity in Adams's election. A number of representatives and Senators, it was said, had also been illegally elected. After long consideration, a plan was arrived at and it was carried out with remarkable promptness. Adams was suddenly voted out of office and unseated, Peabody was named Governor on the same day and took the oath. An hour or two afterward he resigned, and McDonald, the Lieutenant-Governor elected with Peabody, became Governor and served out the term.

This singular affair in politics created no particular excitement in Denver. The people had become so accustomed to kaleidoscopic changes they were ready for about anything.

But meanwhile vagaries of all kinds were being enacted into law. The Democrats who came into office after the McDonald administration found the State bankrupt and proceeded to make it more so. The labor-union agitators, finding the Democrats ready tools for their schemes, joined hands with the politicians, and strengthened their organization all through the State, with the exception of Cripple Creek.

It was decided to abolish the city government in Denver and establish the commission form. This took time and money, but was accomplished. For some time Denver had two city governments, but they were finally reduced to one. The Commission went in. It didn't take long for the people to realize that the Commission was spending more money than the old regime ever thought of. Now a movement is on foot to re-establish the old form again.

THE COAL STRIKE.

The strike in the coal fields of all the spectacular episodes in the history of the State has been the most serious. It has reached a point where it is virtually civil war. The militia, in almost constant service, has become demoralized from the fact that the State was unable to pay the men. The Auditor, being a typical Colorado politician, a horseshoer by trade, and a professional labor agitator, has steadfastly refused to pay the men on various occasions when there was money in the treasury for the purpose. But the finances depleted by the continuous drain could not stand it, and the Legislature called by the present Governor authorized a million-dollar bond issue. Whether these bonds will ever be sold is a question. It is known that the people under the system of laws could probably repudiate them, even if the Supreme Court should uphold their legality. If the people did not like the decision, doubtless some means would be found to recall it.

The Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, the largest corporation in the State, has been unable to realize any returns from its mines for months. It may be that they never will unless the United States takes hold permanently and reorganizes the entire State, as it may have to do with Mexico.

Meanwhile, the merchants in Denver would like to see a little business, the property owners would like to see values increase instead of diminish, and the people of the State generally would like to see Colorado, which naturally has more varied resources than any State in the Union, with the exception of California, take the position which it is entitled to, a law-abiding community where an honest citizen is at least given an equal chance with the agitator, and the decadent journalist and politician are abolished.

Bisbee.

WOULD PROTECT MINE FROM FIRE.

COPPER QUEEN USES CONCRETE IN LOWELL PROPERTY.

Ample Security Afforded, Is Belief. Absorption of Tombstone Consolidated Expected—Increased Activity in Patagonia District—Merger of Denn and Shattuck Probable.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) June 5.—In the old fire area of the Lowell mine of the Copper Queen, the company has just finished several hundred feet of concrete work in the drifts and raises which the engineers had concluded were possibly in line of danger. Bulkheads of concrete, equipped with heavy steel doors, have been put in. The protection secured is considered ample to check promptly the advances of any outbreak of fire.

Current information gives every reason for the belief that the Copper Queen will take over the properties of the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company, which will be offered at receiver's sale June 26, to satisfy the claims of creditors, provided bidding by other interests which may desire the properties is not carried to too high a figure.

The Muheim-Jones interests of this city have commenced development on properties in Patagonia district which they acquired some time ago. This work and larger activities began by the A. Y. Smith interests, which accumulated a large fortune from the old Commonwealth mine, in the famous old World's Fair property, has given the Patagonia section much recent encouragement.

MERGER LIKELY.

Reports now revived of plans for the merger of Denn-Arizona with Shattuck-Arizona—or at least the financing of Denn to an extent—appear to find encouragement, both in official circles of the companies here and in St Paul and Duluth. The Shattuck will ultimately need the Denn association in keeping up and advancing its output. The Denn admittedly is a great mine, with need, at the present time, only of funds with which to handle the immense volume of water that has come to its lower levels. No Denn stock is to be had here. Holders believe that on any exchange basis for Shattuck they should receive better than a two to one deal.

Safety first organizations in the mines of Bisbee have accomplished good results in a year of operation, both in the reduction of accidents and in bringing about improvements in the mines. First-aid work is now being enthusiastically added to the programme by the miners, who this week organized a class of 120 members to take first-aid instructions. They will later in the year give demonstrations of the work which they have undertaken at the State Fair and elsewhere.

The first two big hoists installed in the district at the Czar and Uncle Sam shafts, are now being torn down. They are to be replaced with electric hoists which have double their capacity. The old hoists, at the time of installation, were the largest in Arizona. Since that time new installations at other shafts have made dwarfs of them, and for the past several years they have been two of the smallest in the district.

The new Czar and Sam hoists will carry double-deck cages with loads of 10,000 pounds.

BUILDING STARTED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BALBOA, June 6.—The erection of another two-story apartment and store building was started in Balboa during the past week, making three structures of this kind built during the past twelve months. The new building is being erected by the Collins Commercial Company at the corner of Palm street and the bay front. It will contain four stores on the ground floor, all of which have been leased, and twenty-one rooms above.

LESS ACTIVE IN MAY.

Business in Oil Stocks Here Comparatively Small—Good Trading in Union Oil Bonds.

The volume of business in oil stocks on the Los Angeles Exchange last month was small. Less than 200,000 shares, valued at something over $150,000, were dealt in. In the amount of shares traded in there was a decline of only about 40,000, as compared with the previous month, but owing to the fact that "cheap" stocks received more attention a falling off of nearly $80,000 in the value of the business is shown.

Union Oil ran highest in the value of trading, with nearly $85,000 worth of stock sold, while Maricopa Northern and National Pacific took the honors in the number of shares traded in—over 80,000 in each case. Amalgamated was a poor second in the value of shares traded in, with the aggregate less than $20,000. Associated took third place.

Union Oil bonds were even more active than the previous month, eighty-six being traded in, with the value of the business exceeding $[illegible]000. Lately the "fives" have been quiet, however.

Windsor Square

Just Facts

On Wilshire Blvd., a few blocks west of Western. Fifteen minutes via automobile; twenty-five minutes via West Sixth Street car line.

¶ Plain, undeniable facts.

¶ Windsor Square is one of the most highly perfected residential parks that has ever been produced here or anywhere else.

¶ But, somehow, the false impression seems to have prevailed that a man couldn't build a house there costing less than $50,000.

¶ As a matter of fact, Windsor Square lots are restricted for 50 years to residences costing $10,000 or more.

¶ And Windsor Square lots are sold as low as $7500

¶ With liberal building and cash discounts, which will be discontinued after a short time.

¶ Also, and this is important, Windsor Square lots are sold On Terms to Suit.

ISH FOR ONE, FOWL FOR OTHER

Wheeler Scores Discrimination in Anti-Trust Bill.

Grant to Unionists of Special Rights.

It Legalizes Boycott for Only Laborites.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.] WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 6.—Everett P. Wheeler of New York, president of the American Bar Association, has written to J. Hampton Moore of a letter strongly commending his course in opposing the of labor associations from the anti-trust bill.

Wheeler, in the course of his letter says:

"It is with great satisfaction that I read the report of your speech in the House yesterday. The very foundation of American liberty lies in our theory of equal rights. To give special privileges to any class of men is contrary not only to the Declaration of Independence, but to the whole theory of our government.

"We condemn the Standard Oil for endeavoring in the early days of their organization to drive competition out of business. What is this but a boycott? It was denounced as criminal by the Senate Some Senators declared that they would rather have their cotton destroyed by the weevil than to use any money to prevent the Yet here we have a proposition which makes it legal for a union to persuade persons to withdraw patronage or to employ any party to a dispute. This is a boycott. We know that in all labor disputes both in Ireland and America, the boycott has been used in the cruel manner, so as to deprive the sick of medicine and the hungry Yet here is a proposition to legalize it when employed by a labor union, although it would be illegal if used by a corporation."

WAKE UP.

Differences Between Capital and Labor Could Easily Be Settled Except by Official Strike Agitators.

[The Square Deal:] The labor unions are very much mistaken if they think that their cause would be advanced by such methods as they are using in Colorado. No matter what the operators may have been, it is now an accepted fact that the strikers are the aggressors, that they resorted to warlike methods before the operators to do as they did. Therefore they are to blame for the condition of warfare in Colorado, and their work of coercion is in the line of sabotage as advocated by the Industrial Workers of the World Socialists.

After all, the only thing they are fighting for now is the closed shop, and the unions the right to compel every man in that particular industry to pay tribute to the United Mine Workers. This is in absolute violation of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States to every man who toils in this country—the freedom to join an organization or not to join as he sees fit. If they had their way, no matter from what source, no miner could work without being a member of that organization. The right to work is an inherent privilege which may not be obstructed. Is it not time for the people of this country to demand of the United Mine Workers that they play the game in accordance with the rules of fairness and the laws of the land. They surely cannot believe that the United Mine Workers Union is above the laws of the land. If so, then there is no room for them in this country. All the good which they may do have done in the past by their organization has been undone by the methods that they are so persistently using. Nearly all differences between capital and labor have been settled amicably but for the destructive official agitator, and we believe this will be borne out by a careful analysis of all of the differences between capital and labor in the past years. The strike and the dynamite bomb have been the weapons of union labor and have been used not to better the conditions of the toilers but to create fear of intimidation. The public demands that the unions play the game in accordance with the laws of the land if we are not to be controlled by a condition of chaotic anarchy—the public has spoken and acted in the past in regard to an-

and Other Labor Leaders Nothing to Say About Improving Workmanship.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] It is a striking fact that throughout the hearings before the Industrial Commission in New York there seemed to be not a thought on the part of any of the witnesses that the interests of employees could be advanced by greater efficiency and fidelity on their part, or that much could be gained by co-operative effort devoted to promote the interests of employers and employed at the same time by enlarging the joint product. All that was said either by the "conservative" Gompers and by the "radical" leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World related to new methods of extracting cash from employers and from those who had saved money and distributing it among those who had not the money, but were not willing to do anything to obtain it by promoting the convenience or the welfare of the community as a whole. If the attention that is given by "labor men" to securing and partial methods of intended to take the place and partiality that now is devoted to pointing out modes of enlarging improving the efficiency and generally strengthening the fabric of society, of the basis for dissatisfaction with existing arrangements Best of all, employers and employed would be working upon a basis of joint effort to ensure the solution of problems whose settlement now seems hopeless.

ONLY THING TO DO.

When Union Men Won't Work Factory Must Shut Down or Be Run as Open Shop.

[Boston Advertiser:] The threatening situation at Wakefield, Mass., in consequence of the plans to import strike-breakers, may fairly be said to be due wholly to the inconsistent attitude of the strikers. They refused to work, pending arbitration, and yet they refuse to allow any other wage-earners, who are satisfied with the pay offered, to work, either. The State Board of Conciliation made a very fair proposal when it suggested that the strike be submitted to arbitration, and that meanwhile the men keep the factory going. The company accepted the proposal at once. The men refused to consider it. They would not work unless every one of their demands was granted; and that was impossible, at prevailing prices of the product, in the open market, today. Unless the factory was to be shut down absolutely, then, the only recourse was to go outside and hire men. It is hard to see how the strikers can reasonably oppose that.

Dead Level.

WORKERS WON'T STAND FOR IT.

DON'T WANT CHILDREN TO REMAIN WORKINGMEN.

The Class Distinction That Would Follow Utopian Results of I.W.W. Movement Would Destroy Equality of Opportunity That Is the American Scheme of Government.

[Memphis Commercial Appeal:] The I.W.W. will fail in this country because the workers will refuse to be organized on a class basis.

The American workman will not let his mind rest at ease on the thought that his children and his children's children shall remain as carpenters, blacksmiths or machinists simply because he happens to follow one of these occupations.

He has no objection to his son becoming a skilled laborer, but he wants his son to have liberty of action in making the choice.

A permanent working class in America is just as foreign to the genius of this country as a permanent capitalistic class.

The rich man's son may die a pauper, the millionaire's grandson may become a skilled mechanic or a good small farmer. His son may recreate another fortune.

For working men to attempt to organize themselves into a separate and distinct class and to keep that class permanent would be to destroy the equality of opportunity which is the summum bonum in our scheme of government.

Of course if the designs of the I.W.W. leaders were carried out there would be no clash between labor and capital, because the laboring forces, being greater in number than the capitalistic forces, the fight would resolve itself into four or five men struggling against one, with the result that the capitalistic class would perish.

Then members of the laboring class, having no one else to fight, would begin to destroy one another. Those having the quality of leadership would assert themselves and then would come a second division in the laboring class, or, looking at it in another way, the laboring class would create a number of overlords.

The dead level of equality between man and man in all things cannot be maintained because some men act quicker, think quicker and are physically and mentally stronger than others.

If all men were six feet tall, weighed 200 pounds, had the same brain force and were exactly alike in temper, in muscle and nerve, then might the I.W.W. Utopian dream be realized.

The idea, though, of destroying life and property in order to gain an end is abhorrent to the American idea and is impossible for this reason.

There are more Americans who own something than there are Americans who own nothing. Chief among these are the farmers and others who live close to the soil. A man who owns a kit of tools, a mule, a plow will not give these things up without a struggle.

If the members of the I.W.W. contemplate a war upon organized property and upon organized government they should be the last people to complain if organized property and organized government begin a war upon them.

If these people, coming out of the mining camps of Colorado and preaching a doctrine of this sort, appeal to the United States government for aid they are by that very act contradicting the theories which some of their members so glibly set forth.

OWNING THEMSELVES.

Members of Labor Unions Lose Their Personal Rights and Have to Do as the Unionite Boss Says.

[The Square Deal:] It is the boast of the unions that in the interest of the freedom of the individual they should join a labor organization. How one can own himself and yet surrender any of his rights to an organization is beyond any sensible man's comprehension. Seldom, however, do we find such a complete case of the rule of unionism as is told in the Detroit Saturday Night. This publication was running a contest for the prettiest girl in a certain factory.

A Miss Quinn was entered for a prize in the contest but because the Saturday Night was an open shop publication Miss Quinn was compelled to withdraw from the contest. Following is the letter of withdrawal to the editor of the Saturday Night:

"As a member of Local 74, United Garment Workers of America, I want to inform you that the secretary of that body has written me requesting that I withdraw from the 'prettiest girl' contest now running in your paper. He states as his reason that your paper is unfair to organized labor."

There can be no better evidence of the surrender of individual rights than this letter. The facts are that the Detroit Saturday Night assumes the right to run its own business and pay a better scale than the union wage and it operates an eight-hour day, but it simply declines to be a closed shop.

We have always contended that union labor organizations attempt and do dominate their members in a manner that they would not submit to under any other circumstances; and if any organization other than a labor organization should attempt to do the things that they do in controlling the people, they would be branded as tyrants of the worst character. Some day the people will see this and will not allow any labor organization to control their personal affairs.

UNIONS ARE A MENACE AS MONEY POWER.

[EDITORIAL.]

NOT so very long ago labor unions used to execrate capital simply because it was capital. Now the labor unions are waxing rich, at the expense of duped members, and they have abandoned the idea that capitalism is necessarily vicious. It is only vicious, in their opinion, when it refuses to yield to the demands of labor.

Often it has been pointed out that labor unions are little better than blood-sucking parasites which feed upon the workingmen. In the days when they were not so rich as they are now labor unions were loud in denunciation of rich men and wealthy corporations which they stigmatized as money powers. The unions would have the public believe that any money power was something diabolical. But that was before the unions had grabbed wealth. Now that they have fattened on the workers they find a good deal to say in favor of the possession of money.

It would be interesting to have reliable figures regarding the wealth of the unions of America. That they are among the richest in the world is well known. That they do not disclose the amount of their riches to the assessors is equally certain. That they use money for illegal and murderous purposes has been proved time and again. We hear bitter denunciations by unionites of Rockefeller, Carnegie and other rich men. If the wealth of the unions was disclosed it undoubtedly would be found to be greater than that of any individual king of finance.

Some indication of the vast amount of money which union labor collects is obtained through disclosures just made in Germany concerning the Social-Democratic labor unions. It is shown that Social Democracy is one of the big money powers in Kaiser William's kingdom. It has at its disposal the enormous sum of $62,000,000 and, in the name of anti-capitalism, aims at becoming the greatest capitalist.

If, as labor unions assert, the possession of vast sums of money by individuals makes those individuals a danger to the state, then how much more of a menace becomes an aggregation of labor unions, enormously wealthy and banded together for the express purpose of making war on those capitalists who refuse to enroll themselves under its bloody banner. Sinister and significant, too, is the brazen statement made by prominent members of the Social-Democratic labor unions of Germany that they are no longer foes of wealth, but only of wealth that is in the hands of non-members.

Conservative people of Germany are naturally alarmed at the facts now made known regarding the extraordinary richness of the Social-Democratic labor unions. The fact that they possessed so many millions became known through a typically arrogant act on the part of one of the subsidiary organizations. This organization demanded the reinstatement in the service of the Deutsche Bank of a unionite who had transgressed rules of the bank and had suffered dismissal. The bank refused to reinstate the man and unionite leaders thereupon held a meeting to determine on a course to bring the bank to terms. The suggestion was made that they withdraw their vast deposits and start a bank of their own. This threat was considered so serious in Berlin that it shook the bank's shares on the Stock Exchange, an effect which provoked much unholy glee on the part of the unionites.

That the German Social-Democratic labor unions have far greater accumulations of wealth than they can use, that they are going into capitalistic enterprises and are concentrating wealth in true money-trust style are declarations made by Richard S. Scope of Berlin, who has examined very closely into this new and big money trust, which is disturbing Europe. This trust is heaping up wealth so rapidly that it is getting a firm capitalistic grip on the community.

If this accumulation of wealth is so great a danger to Germany, a similar piling up of money by unions in America is fraught with grave possibilities. Labor-union leaders in this country have in the past shown themselves to be so unscrupulous and so prone to use their power basely that their possession of unlimited means is a matter of grave moment. The uncalled-for strikes which periodically disturb the industrial peace of this country are made possible because of the wealth in the control of the unions. All Americans, therefore, who have at heart the true welfare of their country cannot but note with alarm the enrichment of the unions, particularly as it is accomplished at the expense of the individual workmen.

COLUMBUS (O.) June 6.—Ohio miners and operators abandoned all efforts yesterday to agree upon a wage scale and adjourned the joint conference.

DATE OF MOYER TRIAL.

Attorney for Western Federation Leaders Assures Prosecutor His Clients Will Be Ready in July.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HOUGHTON (Mich.) June 5.—The trial of Charles H. Moyer and other leaders of the Western Federation of Miners on charges growing out of the recent copper miners' strike, will begin July 6. The date was selected after O. N. Hilton, attorney for the union men, had assured Anthony Luce, prosecuting attorney, that his clients would be ready. The case will be heard at L'Anse, seat of Baraga county.

BRITISH COURT METHODS.

Dispensation of Justice Is More Expeditious Than in United States Because of Judge's Power.

[Kansas City Journal:] Before the faculty of the Kansas City School of Law and invited guests at a luncheon at the Midday Club yesterday Judge John D. Lawson, dean of the School of Law at the University of Missouri, discussed "Reform Procedure." In all about forty were present, Mayor Jost being a guest.

Contrasting the courts of England, France, Germany and America, Judge Lawson said that the reason justice was more expeditious there than here was because of the larger part played there by the trial judge and the smaller part taken in the trial by the barrister, advocate or trial lawyer. He referred particularly to England. In England, he said, there are fewer objections to evidence because there cases are prepared by a solicitor and tried before the court by a barrister, he being a trial lawyer solely and alone.

"If the barrister makes objections to evidence which are not sustained by the court," said Judge Lawson, "his client, the solicitor, probably would not give him another brief; that is, he would not be employed again to try a case for the solicitor. A barrister is selected for his great learning in the law and not necessarily because of his financial or business success, therefore they are the highest type of men in that country."

Judge Lawson said also that judges in England do not have to worry with politics or lose any sleep because of the attitude of party bosses. They are appointed for life, he said, and the average salary of the high-grade judge is $25,000 a year; there being sixty-three Appellate judges in London. This gives them time to study and prepare each case, and, having independent means, they are enabled to work out adequate justice without fear, favor or affection. Judge Lawson also drew attention to the universal sentiment of respect in which the English-speaking people hold their courts.

"In England," he continued, "cases are tried before three judges, one of whom sits as president of the court, corresponding here to a presiding judge or chief justice. The president of the court asks all questions of all witnesses. When he has concluded he inquires of the barristers on each side if they have any questions which they desire asked. If they do these questions are asked of the president of the court and he interrogates the witness. In many important cases you will not find two objections entered during the entire trial. Where a barrister is strong is in his argument before the jury upon the facts in the case and instructions of the court."

Judge Lawson said that in England there is no such thing as an attack upon a court through the public press before the final termination of a case. This would be regarded as contempt of court. He also said that no public report of any case is permitted while the case still is on trial.

The speaker drew attention to the French courts which labor under the presumption of guilt in criminal cases. There, too, he said, the presiding justice of a court plays a much more important part than in America.

Regarding court procedure in America, Judge Lawson said there is evidence of improvement in that trials are becoming more speedy.

Build a House of Porcelain.

[Chicago Record Herald:] A home of porcelain, that can be erected with a screw driver and wrench in a few hours, is the plan of W. Hales Turner of London, who calls himself "the pioneer of porcelain."

"In the construction of the porcelain house," he said, "there is complete absence of all absorbent materials, such as bricks and mortar, plaster, whitewash, concrete, woodwork and paper. The complete porcelain house is constructed as follows: Framework, preferably of light, rust-proof metal. In the framework are fitted the huge porcelain panels, half an inch thick, six feet long and three feet wide, weighing five pounds to the superficial foot, decorated and glazed on both sides to resist wind, storm and weather, with steam-tight points, made of copper-coated asbestos tape.

"Porcelain is nonabsorbant, insect and germ proof, fireproof and washable, and it makes possible for all a perfectly hygienic home. As for warmth—an inch-thick wall of pure porcelain glazed on both sides is better able to keep out cold than an eighteen-inch brick wall. With bricks and mortar it takes months to erect a house of, say, five rooms; a porcelain house of the same size can be put up in a few hours."

Wasted the Violets.

[Indianapolis News:] In one of the suburbs of London somebody stole the snowdrops belonging to a good but excitable old lady. In her agony over the fate of the flowers she straightway summoned two fire brigades. The incident recalls an anecdote of Landor, which had its birth in the time when he was living in Florence. Landor, then, lived up to his reputation as an "eccentric character" when an unsatisfactory meal was served up before him. He impulsively threw the cook out of the window, beneath which was a bed of violets, and immediately repented his action. "Good gracious," Landor explained in an agony; "I forgot the violets."

Putting Words in the Language.

[Indianapolis News:] John Galsworthy's new play, "The Mob," just produced at Manchester, is a reminder of how a word may worry its way into respectability. "Mob," (mobile vulgus,) meaning the rabble, was born in restoration days in England, but even by the time of Addison's Spectator it was only just struggling into recognition. "I dare not answer," wrote the Spectator, "that mob, rab, pos, incog., and the like, will not in time be looked at as part of our tongue." Swift, in the Tatler, confesses: "I have done the utmost for some years past to stop the progress of 'mob' and 'banter,' but have been plainly borne down by numbers."

Labor Exemption.

PALTERING WITH UNIONISM.

CONGRESSMEN LOSE SIGHT OF EQUAL RIGHTS.

Those Demanding Special Legislation from Congress Do Not Include One-tenth of the Workingmen of the Country and Even This Tenth Is Unfairly Represented.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] We greatly doubt whether the mass of intelligent workingmen in this country desire to be treated as a "privileged class," or as a separate class of citizens in any respect as subjects of the law. All they ask or ought to ask is to be treated as having rights equal to those of other citizens and in no way different. If any of them use the power of organization to injure the rights of others or to violate any law which others have to observe, they ought to be held responsible for it like all others, and to be equally willing to submit. We believe that to be the spirit of the real American workingman, immune to the virus of foreign class distinctions.

No self-respecting American citizen, whatever his position or occupation, can desire to have an organization to which he belongs, "instituted for the purpose of mutual help" or for any other purpose, used to violate the law "to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," or to have those guilty of so using it exempt from its penalties. Those who are seeking to have labor and certain other "organizations, orders or associations" exempted from the application of the so-called "anti-trust laws," do not truly represent "American" workingmen. They are leaders in the so-called American Federation of Labor, which does not include one-tenth of the workingmen of the country. We doubt whether its members are fairly represented by these leaders.

There is too much paltering with this question, with no motive but that of narrow party interest or party cowardice. The Clayton bill, as reported, does not grant the exemption asked for. Neither does the compromise amendment, which is said to be agreed to or assented to by those concerned. The section continues to be a subterfuge and a mischievous pretense of concession to a distinctly unworthy and un-American claim to "privilege." This section of the bill as reported declared that the anti-trust laws should not be "construed to forbid the existence" of the associations described or to forbid or restrain their members from carrying out their "legitimate objects." They never have been so construed and are not subject to such a construction. What is added by the amendment is that these organizations or their members shall not be "held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade under the anti-trust law." This is more specific, but means exactly the same thing. Whether any organization is to be so construed depends upon what use is made of it, and if a labor organization or farmers' association is used "unlawfully" to restrain trade or commerce or to create monopoly, it should be treated exactly like a railroad or industrial corporation that is used for the same purpose and should make no claim to be treated otherwise.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES AND STRIKERS OF THIS UNEASY WORLD.

A GENERAL lock-out of all building trade workers in Great Britain is threatened if the London men who are "out" (about 150,000 of them) do not accept terms proposed by the conciliation board. So far they are energetic in refusing the terms. The threatened lock-out will affect over 500,000 workers. The outlook, says the Times of London, is extremely grave, as the London men are unanimous in refusing the terms.

The banana retailers of the West of England and South Wales are on strike against the prices charged to them by the banana importers. By mutual agreement the retailers have stopped selling bananas in several towns.

The Liverpool ship-repairers' strike and keep on striking every time a vessel is getting ready to go to sea. The Cunard liners are the worst and most frequently temporarily tied up.

The new wages-and-hours agreement prepared by the trolleymen of Albany and Troy is now in the hands of the companies for consideration. The men are getting 27 cents an hour, but want 35 cents. Both sides are trying to avert the threatened strike.

In the State of Ohio, where the owners of the soft-coal mines ceased operations on April 1, when the miners would not accept the working agreement for the ensuing year which the owners offered as the best they could afford, a strike order has been issued from district headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America. But what is the purpose of a strike of locked-out miners? Are they striking for the reopening of the mines, or are they striking to "save their face," as the Chinese say? There are so many other sources of soft-coal supply that there will not be a shortage even though the mines of Ohio remain closed indefinitely.

Trolley employees of the company operating in Rochester, Syracuse, Utica and Schenectady, New York State, have agreed to work on the open-shop plan until May 1, 1915. The men ratified this agreement on a referendum vote. Their demand for a raise from 26½ cents to 35 cents an hour goes, by consent, to arbitration. That's the right way.

A general strike is threatened and a small one is begun at the Delaware and Hudson Railway shops at Colonie, N. Y., just because two blacksmith's helpers failed to pay their union dues, and the company refused to discharge them. One hundred and twenty-five blacksmiths immediately walked out on strike. What next?

The painters' strike at Buffalo is still on and is as complete as ever.

The Depew (N. Y.) strike of machinists seems to have fizzled out without any result other than loss of a good many weeks' wages.

In New York City there is a lock-out of 31,000 tailors because of oppressive union rules. This constant harassing of employers by labor unions is naturally breeding lock-outs. Employers have just as much right to "lock-out" as workers have to strike.

Twelve thousand Kanawha (W. Va.) coal miners are on strike in an endeavor to force the mine operators to collect all union dues out of the men's wages. That would be a "nice, soft thing" for the unions. The operators will never agree to make themselves into clubs to whack such of their workers who are not enthusiastic about sharing their wages money with labor and strike agitators.

Some months ago at a secret meeting, the I.W.W. (textile branch) decided that they would make the "fight of their lives" to organize the textile towns of New England, so they sent an organizer to Lawrence, the scene of the big strike in 1912-13, and during the past ten weeks he has been doing all in his power to organize the textile workers of that city. Private advices from Lawrence state that the project of the I.W.W. has been almost a total failure.

The latest outbreak of "Big Bill" Haywood has had an effect in all the New England towns. In Webster, Mass., for example, the 400 members of the I.W.W. have voted to bolt that organization on account of "Big Bill's" wild talk about what the "Big Union" would do in case of war with Mexico. In Haverhill, a leading shoe town, the I.W.W. is practically dead. For years the Socialists and I.W.W. gangs prevented the Italians from organizing a Catholic Church, but right now the Italian citizens are holding a fair for the purpose of building a church and for more than a year they have maintained services without disturbance.

In many places the I.W.W. is dead. Even in Lawrence, the city that once gave them the most encouragement and where they had 15,000 members, they are dying, for the membership lists show a loss of 13,600 members in about two years.

The labor unionists are sending new strike agitators into Colorado to make things worse in that sorely stricken State. It will take Colorado years, after the present civil war is over, to recover from its dire results, its heavy loss of life, its millions of money loss and its loss of prestige and confidence as a State.

Dire and dreadful will be the loss to every one in the West if the 75,000 engineers and firemen on the ninety-eight roads west of Chicago go on strike as is now seriously threatened. Their wage demands are enormous; they would add 50 per cent. to the already heavy pay rolls.

Sicily has a bad strike of its sulphur miners. They have already burned up the half of one town, destroyed the depots, torn up railroad tracks and cut telephone and telegraph wires.

The Iowa coal operators and miners have agreed on a new wage scale to run for two years, thus averting the threatened strike.

The Chicago brickmakers insist on the open shop and will employ non-union men. The 3000 brickworkers on strike are keeping 150,000 building workers idle.

QUINLAN MUST SERVE TERM.

Supreme Court Affirms Conviction of I.W.W. Leader Charged With Advocating Hostilities During Strike.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

TRENTON (N. J.) June 6.—The New Jersey Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the conviction of Patrick Quinlan, the Industrial Workers of the World leader who was charged with advocating hostilities during the silk mill strike at Paterson. Quinlan was sentenced for from two to seven years imprisonment and fined $500.

OIL RUSH ON IN CALGARY FIELD.

WILD EXCITEMENT CAUSED BY PETROLEUM STRIKE.

One Well Serves to Rouse High Pitch of Enthusiasm in Western Canadian District—Stocks on Market Galore—New Operators Enter Daily.

The wildest kind of excitement over oil prevails at and in the vicinity of Calgary, in Western Canada, and when sifted down, the cause for the "rush" which is on resolves itself into the strike made in one well near the Albertan town. Of course, if all accounts may be believed, this is a wonderful strike, perhaps one of the most wonderful, but there are questions of extent and quantity to be answered before the discovery will have passed the regions of the problematical, as far as its ultimate value is concerned.

Nevertheless, enthusiasm in the Calgary region is at a high pitch. New money is coming rapidly into the region, new companies are steadily being organized, oil stocks are actively being dealt in, and the people are generally happy in their seeming new-found reason for prosperity.

The so-called Dingman well, which is the principal source of all the excitement, recently struck oil of very high grade—in fact so high that it is almost pure gasoline. This oil, it is stated, is selling at about $18 a barrel. The well occasionally produces, and the oil at latest reports was standing nearly to the top of the 2600-foot well.

Oil stocks are on the market galore at Calgary.

There were more than forty quoted in a recent special edition of one of the local papers, which, by the way, is devoted to petroleum subjects almost exclusively. As new companies are being incorporated every day, it is likely that the list of oil stocks has been increased considerably since then.

Some of the companies are drilling wells, others merely have a rig up, and again others have little or nothing except a name. They are all issuing stock certificates, however (on their prospects, if nothing else) and to regulate prices and other matters an exchange has been organized with no less than seventy members.

The "oil game" is a new one to Calgary and it probably will be played with a vengeance, while the playing is good. The success of the Dingman well will be only the forerunner of other important developments in this section, which, to say the least, is one of the most promising of the coming districts, although perhaps it will be some time before it can catch up with the wild wave of enthusiasm it has started in the province of Alberta.

SPLENDID RECORD.

Announcement is made that up to last Saturday evening there had been sold in Calipatria lots to the total value of $136,000, together with ninety ten-acre home tracts adjoining or near by the town site. These latter total $82,000 in value. In addition to these sales, up to the time mentioned, larger tracts to the value of $274,000 had been disposed of. The new town is rapidly becoming an important shipping point for the north end of the Imperial Valley.

BIG CROP PROSPECTS.

Nearly Ten Thousand Tons of Peaches and Apricots to Be Marketed from Lankershim This Year.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LANKERSHIM, June 6.—The Lankershim district has been forging ahead in a most satisfactory manner and the bumper deciduous fruit crop now on the trees promises more prosperity. The crop estimate is: apricots, 3500 tons; peaches, 5000 tons. The apricot crop has been sold at $25 per ton. Peach prices have not been made. The Bonner Fruit Company cannery is being remodeled and enlarged for the biggest year in its history.

The Los Angeles County Highway Commission has just had completed a repair and supply station at this point, from which the county and State good roads systems will be kept in repair. This station looks after all territory south to Wilshire boulevard, east to Eagle Rock and west and north to the county line. About twelve men will be employed steadily.

The Lankershim boulevard has been macadamized north to connect with the San Fernando boulevard. Fourth street to Burbank has also recently been macadamized. These above-named streets are now partially electrically-lighted and a movement is on foot to have them lighted their entire length.

The Universal Film Company has recently purchased several hundred acres along the Los Angeles River and is putting in one of the most complete film plants in the United States. From 400 to 600 people will be employed. One of Lankershim's oldest mercantile firms is erecting a new $7000 brick and concrete store building. A dozen new homes are in the course of erection.

SMELTER OUTPUT HIGHER.

Copper Queen Turns Out Larger Production in May Despite Lower Ore Tonnage.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) June 5.—Despite a lower ore tonnage in May, the Copper Queen mines smelter output of metal ran higher than in April, reaching 7,750,000 pounds. This is accounted for by the fact that areas running proportionately higher in copper contents were mined.

The fact that the Queen smelter also handled Miami concentrates during most of the month, these being diverted from Greene Cananea smelter during the shut-down, sent the smelter output to a new high record, above 14,000,000 pounds. Nacozari concentrates and custom ores are also included in the total. Calumet and Arizona smelter handled about 7,000,000 pounds of ores from its mines in the Bisbee district, beside the output of the Shattuck.

LET HIGHWAY CONTRACT.

Orange County Supervisors Authorize Beginning of Work Upon Coast Boulevard.

The road supervisors of Orange county have let the contract for the first section of the Coast boulevard, a highway that is to extend all the way from the Los Angeles county line at Seal Beach, through Sunset Beach, Huntington Beach, Newport and Laguna Beach to a junction with the State highway to San Diego, below San Juan Capistrano.

The contract for the first section takes in the district beyond Seal Beach south and east to Los Patos. This portion is built on the sand dunes between Anaheim Bay on the one side and the open ocean on the other. It will parallel the Pacific Electric Railway on the landward side. The width of the right of way is forty feet, and the width of the improved roadway is to be thirty feet, considered ample for all present traffic and for the future for at least ten or fifteen years.

The character of the work to be done on this stretch of road is out of the ordinary. Sections of the roadbed will have to be filled in and reclaimed from the Anaheim sloughs, while at other points the beach sand will have to be graded down. Provision will also have to be made to prevent the sea sand foundations from shifting. The engineer's specifications for the bridge across Anaheim completed, and this let in not to exceed thirty soon as word is received ington, from which must be secured to br

TIGERS TOSS AWAY GAME IN THE TENTH INNING.

Spider Baum Walks Five Men in First Inning—Cack Henley Also Fails to Qualify as Mound Monarch—San Francisco Wins Out With a Score of Five to Three. Venice and Angels One Point Apart.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

THE question of whether a bricklayer is of greater value to a ball team than a telegrapher, remains wrapped in doubt.

"Cack" Henley, who handles a [illegible] in the off season, and "Spider" Baum, who in early youth mastered the Morse dialect, endeavored to settle the question yesterday afternoon. The experiment was wholly unsatisfactory, as both of them got [illegible].

These two figured in a swap last [illegible]. Baum got his as early as the first [illegible] Hogan talked him into [illegible] five men with hardly an intermission. "Spide" didn't finish the [illegible], leaving the place enveloped [illegible] fathoms of sorrow, after [illegible] runs had been scored, two of [illegible] were forced in by his noble [illegible] arm.

[illegible] Standridge, the sole capable [illegible], of the defunct California [illegible] League, and therefore, representing an investment of $45,000, appears to be worth the money. After taking hold where Baum let go, Pete didn't allow the Tigers an atom of comfort or a run.

Henley was called upon to beat ten regular ballplayers, and Cy Parkin, the Dumb Dakotan—also two regular ball players, who weren't working at their trade—meaning Hosp and Bliss.

These gentlemen threw the game into the discard with a brace of bad heaves in the tenth—yes the tenth—permitting Downs and Fitzgerald to score, and placing San Francisco on the proud prolific end of a 5 to 3 score.

That Hosp and Bliss should cut up in this manner was hardly believable, as they had been pulling off stellar stunts ever since 2:30 o'clock.

Prior to this, San Francisco had tied the score, Tobin stealing the plate in the seventh, after the pernicious Fitzgerald had dumped O'Leary and Downs across the tape

CASITAS PASS IS OPEN FOR AUTO TRAFFIC NOW.

First Car Through Mountains After Bridge Is Completed Finds Roadway Dangerous but Scenic—Over Conejo Grade on the High in a Six—New State Highway Locked by Deputies.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

THE Casitas Pass is open.

Motorists may now drive from Ventura to Santa Barbara over the scenic mountain road.

Last Tuesday afternoon at about 4 o'clock, the bridge which closed the pass was completed and a Studebaker "Six" was the first car over the route after it was declared open.

The road is dangerous. Motorists are warned to drive carefully as there are many sharp turns and the roadway is narrow along the mountain sides. The bridge across the Ventura River at the entrance to the pass from this side, is washed out. There were no warning signs up when the Studebaker returned Thursday night and drivers are warned against driving onto the old road after dark.

PASS ENTRANCE.

About a mile up the river there is a narrow roadway through the trees. This leads across a temporary bridge and onto the Casitas Pass road. A bridge is washed out near Foster Memorial Park and the detour has a sharp turn.

While the road is narrower than formerly, the Ventura county men are working on it and within a few days it will be wide enough for machines to pass, according to Mark Cravens, the road superintendent.

Two gangs are working on this route and after the soft earth is removed and the roadbed widened, the average motorist should be able to drive through with safety.

The Saturday before the pass was opened, a Studebaker "Four," light delivery car was sent to Santa Barbara. The man driving lost the way and hit it over the Casitas Pass which was closed. When he reached the bridge which was under construction at the time, he was unable to turn back, according to Charles Simpson, a road foreman.

He was helped across the wash by the road builders with their teams and went on into Santa Barbara.

THE FIRST OVER.

This run so pleased A. W. Maxwell, manager of the local retail branch of the Studebaker Corporation, that he decided to put the first touring car over the pass.

The Automobile Club of Southern California received notice of the opening and Standish L. Mitchell, secretary of the club, sent a representative of the club's engineering department on the trip to inspect the grades and general road conditions.

A. W. Maxwell sent P. L. Eschardies, Jr., of the Studebaker mechanical department in charge of the car.

The road to Saugus is a boulevard. From the turn to the left, over the Castaic Wash and through Piru to Fillmore, the road is poor. The dust is deep in some places. There are several sandy washes and long stretches of the road are cut up and full of ruts. This road is not dangerous, but would hardly be recommended for a pleasant family tour.

FAIR ENOUGH.

From Fillmore to Santa Paula the highway is well graded and the dust is kept down by the county sprinkler wagons. From Santa Paula to Ventura, the road is good with the exception of a few stretches where chuck holes are located. This is not a boulevard, but a good road compared to other stretches along the route.

Out of Ventura, to the entrance of the Casitas, the macadamized road is good. Through the pass the road is dangerous owing to the sharp turns and the narrow cuts, but for a mountain road, it is not the worst in California. Within a few days it should be much better than before the floods which washed out miles of the old roadbed.

From the other side of the Casitas into Santa Barbara the going is good. Most of the road is paved boulevard.

DANGEROUS NOW.

The Rincon road is open and is shorter than the Casitas; but it is more dangerous than the mountain trail now and may be closed this week for repairs. The Casitas is now recommended by the Automobile Club of Southern California as the safest route.

The State highway between Los Angeles and Ventura is closed. This is known as the Ventura road.

On the return, the Studebaker was driven over the State highway at the request of the Automobile Club officials. From Ventura through El Rio and Camerilla, the road is excellent compared to the Castaic route.

The Canejo grade is in good condition. It must be mentioned that the driver of the car surprised all

WOLVERTON'S NEW CATCHER IS DEAD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OAKLAND, June 6.—Marcel Pourroy, a young baseball catcher, died here yesterday just after receipt of news that the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast League had won a dispute for his services with the Ogden club of the Union Association. His death was due to appendicitis, and the fact did not become public until today.

Pourroy has been playing semi-professional baseball, and was con-

ILLINOIS WINS BIG WESTERN TRACK MEET.

Stanford Takes Second Place While California Only Scores Six Points—Half-Mile Record Broken—Wilson Wins Mile—Rain Makes Fast Time Impossible—Relay Record Tied.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 6.—With the top-heavy score of 45 7-12 points, athletes wearing the orange and blue of Illinois won, for the second time in succession, the conference track championship today. From start to finish the Illini were leaders, and it remained for a non-conference team, the squad from Leland Stanford, to give Gill's men their only fight. Stanford finished second and if the westerners had had a larger team they might have crowded the Illini more closely. As it was, they scored 23 1-8 points, beating out by small margins Chicago and Wisconsin.

Only one record fell, and that went to Henderson of Illinois, who with Bingham of Denver tied for individual point honors with ten. In the half-mile, perhaps the most exciting event of the day, Henderson sped over the cinders in 1m., 55 3-5s., breaking the record set by Ira Davenport of Chicago in 1910—1m., 56 3-5s. The Illini's national champions took the relay in 3m., 23 1-5s., tying the conference record made by Stanford in 1910.

Henderson took the quarter-mile in addition to the half, beating his team-mate, Capt. Sanders, by a hair at the tape, despite the general prediction that Sanders would have an easy time. Bingham did the expected in the discus, his heave of 129ft., 7 in. giving him the victory, and won another five points in the hammer throw with a mark of 142ft., 3in. Alone, he put Denver in fifth place.

NEW FIELDS AFTER SHOW.

Landmark Contest Goes Into Coachella Valley.

Auto Club Officials Giving All Representation.

Many Correct Answers Reach Club Headquarters.

Viva la landmark contest!

Its fame has spread.

Latest among the territories opened is the growing Coachella Valley.

Nearly every separate and distinct part of Southern California has written or communicated with the Automobile Club headquarters to ask for representation in the picture contest, and the latest of these is the valley known as Coachella.

Just to show that automobile owners in that place are as active as elsewhere, they want a picture taken in a well-known spot there so that motorists will have a chance to guess it. Officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California are gratified with the success of the contest, arousing as it has the interest in touring.

No longer is Mr. Motorist contented just to start his engine on Sunday morning and ride where the car takes him. He has a purpose in touring. He is going to find a place shown in The Times automobile section. If he finds it, and sometimes he does, he marks down his answer on the card and plans to gain a free membership in the Automobile Club.

AFTER MEMBERSHIPS.

The coveted memberships, together with the prizes on display at the Auto Club headquarters, have attracted many motorists who would not have entered the contest just for the fun of it. Sometimes the task is not easy, as was pointed out two weeks ago, when "Doc" Green was shown at a popular but dangerous curve in the Hudson "Six."

Many contestants will guess two out of the three pictures correctly, and then miss the third, thus making an average which is hard to beat. Others will only guess one right out of five. There have been none so far who have answered all correctly, but as a rule the average is running high, according to the Landmark Contest Committee.

This goes to show that Southern California motorists as a rule are observing. That is one thing which seems to have grown up here with the increasing popularity of motoring. The people who travel about in their cars do not try to break speed limits, but to enjoy the country through which they pass.

The result is that they are very successful in guessing the pictures.

A motorist can start out on Sunday and be reasonably sure that he will get home without being rained on, or snowed under or washed out. He knows that certain roads are good and that he can reach a certain place by a certain time. Hence—he goes.

It is stated by the Contest Committee that Coachella Valley will be given representation in the landmark contest of Southern California.

TEXAN ROAD RACES.

The Texas division of the Southern National Highway Association is planning to hold road races in Reeves county, the third week in August, in connection with the meeting of the association at Ft. Stockton at that time. Only cars coming from Texas counties that have voted on a bond issue for road improvement, whether the issue was approved or not, will be eligible. A section of the Southern National highway will form the course.

MOTORIST PLUGS TIRE WITH BEER.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TAFT, June 6.—Lacking material with which to fix a puncture, Richard Whittemore, an Overland automobile driver of Taft, mixed ten pounds of flour, the remains of rations from a camping trip, with several bottles of beer and pumped the fluid into the tire of his automobile, which had gone flat. Revolving the wheel until the liquid was directly over the puncture, he pumped up the tire. The beer paste acted as a "neverleak," commonly used in tires, and Whittemore saved himself a walk of fifty miles over the desert.

Whittemore had used the repair materials he had taken with him on the trip a week ago, and was too distant from any garage to replenish his supply before starting on the return trip. The beer "neverleak" held up all the way after the tire was pumped up.

CHEAP CEMENTS FROM CLIPPINGS.

First-rate vulcanizing cement can be obtained from scraps of fabric clippings from the tire repair shop. The clippings should be kept carefully free from dirt, and when enough are on hand they should be just covered with benzine or 72 test gasoline.

This will dissolve the rubber forming the "friction." If it does not, a small quantity of wood alcohol, say a tablespoonful, will do the trick if added to the mixture. After the friction has been dissolved, the fabric should be wrung as dry as possible, in order to extract the last drop. A wringer is good for this.

SIOUX CITY RACE HAS RICH PRIZES.

Sioux City, Iowa, having decided to double its purse of $25,000 offered for the races, June 30 to July 4 on its speedway, the business men of the city have guaranteed a fund of $50,000 to back up the Sioux City Automobile Club and the Speedway Association.

Of this amount, $25,000 will be offered for the main event of the meet, a 300-mile race on July 4. Representatives of the speedway are negotiating with the entrants for the Indianapolis 500-mile race to secure entries for the Sioux City events.

BEARDSLEY TOUR GREAT VICTORY FOR ELECTRICS.

TO SEE ten Beardsley Electrics, carrying twenty-eight merry people, quietly going through the country, over boulevards, across the sandy desert, detouring through fields, then, after a sixty-three-mile run, to climb the Rubidoux Hill and land in Riverside, was a sight never before witnessed.

This is claimed to be the longest electric pleasure-car tour ever pulled off in the United States.

Volney S. Beardsley, the president and manager of the Beardsley Electric Company, is the man who did the stunt, and in doing this he has placed his car on the map as a long mileage electric. There have been many talks about an electric tour to Riverside, but this was never accomplished by any number of cars until an electric was built right here in Los Angeles. The builders of this car have just reason for feeling proud of their product.

The Beardsley party made the run to Riverside over the Valley Boulevard. The distance traveled was sixty-three miles, and it was estimated by Engineer Shannon that from 15 to 25 per cent of the power in the car remained unused.

Frank A. Miller made everything pleasant for the party while at the Mission Inn. About 11 o'clock the second day the party left Riverside, touring home over the Foothill boulevard. The distance over this route registered seventy-two miles.

SOME ENTERTAINMENT.

Well-filled lunch boxes were prepared by the Mission Inn. At the large school building in the country near Lordsburg the doors were opened and the Beardsley tourers were welcomed to enjoy luncheon.

After luncheon the piano was found and a very interesting programme was rendered. The Beardsley quartette sang, Mr. Miller entertained the crowd with cornet solos, Mrs. Beardsley sang in her usual pleasing manner, after which several members of the party spoke in eloquent terms of the delightful trip they had experienced on this tour. After a two-hours' entertainment here the homeward trip was made.

ELECTRIC ROADSTER.

John T. Shannon drove one of the new Beardsley Electric roadsters on the tour, and this attracted great attention. It is claimed that this roadster will make better than thirty miles an hour and will run better than 100 miles on a single charge; and those who saw the car on this trip pronounce it to be a wonder.

Mr. Shannon, in speaking of the performance of the cars on this tour, said: "There are several reasons why we have a long mileage and satisfactory car. We have kept the weight down. The Gould batteries (guaranteed for 10,000) are proving to be among the best lead-plate batteries ever built. The Westinghouse motor, embodying two or three of our own features, works in absolute harmony with the batteries. It is claimed by the tire companies that the tires will last longer on wire wheels than on wood, and these are proving to be just the wheels for use on electric vehicles."

BEARDSLEY DELIGHTED.

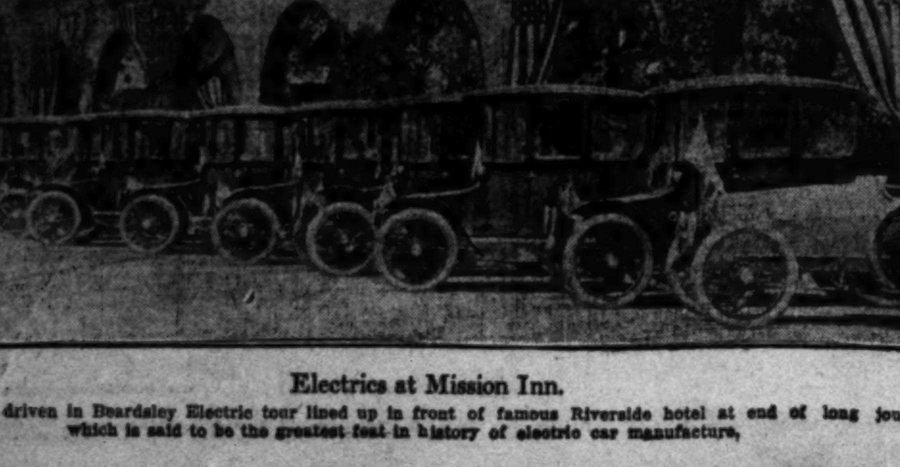
"To see the keen interest taken in this tour made me realize that these tours will result in a great good," said Beardsley. "It helps to make better drivers of the owners; it proves that our electric cars are not confined to city street riding; it helps us to inspect our cars while in use, and it will also be a boost to the electric vehicle business in general.

"Since we have returned from this first tour, our owners are commencing to ask where they shall go next, and we are fully satisfied now that it will pay us to conduct a tour to some point of interest at least every month."

SAXON CARS MAKE HIGH GAS AVERAGE.

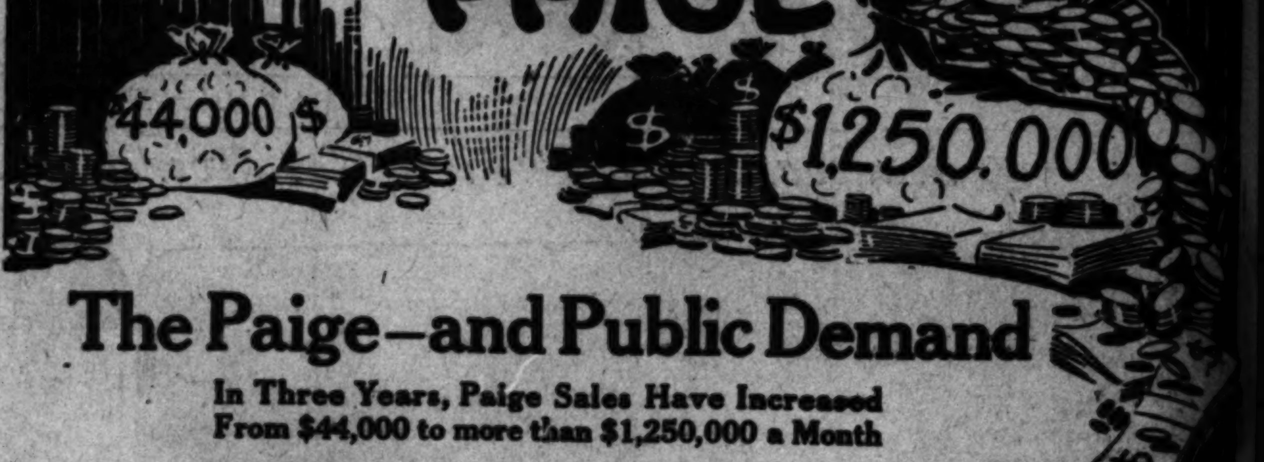
A remarkable fuel record of 34.53 miles per gallon of gasoline was made by Saxon cars on the recent non-stop 200-mile run carried out in nearly every State of the Union simultaneously. The highest average was 47.05 miles, made in New York, and the lowest, 25.8. Several States sent in averages of more than forty miles per gallon.

All sorts of weather and road conditions were encountered, few cars making their 200 miles under uniformly good conditions. All motors ran continuously until the run was finished.



Electrics at Mission Inn.

Machines driven in Beardsley Electric tour lined up in front of famous Riverside hotel at end of long journey which is said to be the greatest feat in history of electric car manufacture.



The Paige—and Public Demand

In Three Years, Paige Sales Have Increased From $44,000 to more than $1,250,000 a Month

These astounding figures are indisputable evidence of Paige supremacy in the medium price field.

They indicate an increasing demand for Paige cars that is without parallel in the middle division of the Automobile Industry. They affirm plainly and clearly that the Paige is a "preferred" investment with the motor buying public—the "first choice" of men who weigh motor car values.

As you turn these figures over in your mind, remember that increased sales can only come as a result of increased demand. The public does the buying—the public alone determines whether automobile sales shall increase or decrease.

So—above all—these figures mean that the motor public has rendered an overwhelming verdict in favor of the Paige. In the most substantially convincing way—by an investment of over $1,250,000 a month—Motor Car buyers have selected the Paige as the best value of the medium priced field.

With the facts before you—in the faceof such sweeping evidence—can you afford to purchase any car until you have carefully investigated the Paige? Isn't it logical to assume that there is a tangible, practical reason back of this marked preference for one car.

See the Paige today. The answer is in the car itself.

This Coming Week for Goodyear Tire Displays Like This. They'll Show You Where to Get These Tires

Goodyear Week

Here and everywhere, this coming week, all the leading Goodyear dealers will make window displays like this.

It is done to show you where No-Rim-Cut tires are sold, and sold at Goodyear prices. Mark these exhibits. These are the dealers who, despite higher profits on other tires, supply you the world's best.

They Undersell 16 Other Makes

These dealers will sell you No-Rim-Cut tires for 28 per cent less than they cost in March, 1913. They will sell them below the prices asked for 16 other makes. They will sell you four tires for the price of three of some of Goodyear's rivals.

They will supply you, at Goodyear prices, the utmost in a tire. The tire that outsells any other tire in the world. The tire that won top place in Tiredom through millions of mileage tests.

They will sell you the tire to which motorists are coming faster than ever before. This year's sales have broken every record, by 55 per cent.

Four Other Savings

In addition they give you these four features, found in no other tire:

Our No-Rim-Cut feature—the only feasible way to end rim-cutting.

Our "On-Air" cure—an extra process which costs us $450,000 yearly. But it saves our users the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric.

Our rubber rivets—hundreds of which are formed in each tire, during vulcanization, to combat tread separation.

Our All-Weather tread—the tough, double-thick anti-skid. It is flat and smooth, so it runs like a plain tread, but it grasps wet roads with a bulldog grip.

Not one of these features—mark you—is found in the costlier tires.

Note These Dealers

Note these displays—remember who sells Goodyears. You want these savings—mark where you can get them.

Goodyear place and prestige prove these the best tires built. And Goodyear prices show how mammoth output lowers factory cost.

Don't go to dealers who push lesser tires or tires at higher prices. Go to the dealers who sell at our prices the premier tire of the world. In first cost and last cost these dealers will save you a good many dollars per year.

TRAINLOAD OF TIRES COMING.

A cargo of Fisk tires that would fill ten freight cars, or a solid trainload, will make up the shipload that will be on one of the first vessels that passes through the Panama Canal, consigned to Los Angeles.

This word was received from the factory last week by Local Manager C. O. Du Mars. The ship has been chartered and the stock is being sent to the eastern seaport for loading on the big vessel. Just as soon as permitted the boat will proceed to Panama.

California is the biggest user of tires in the United States. With a registration of automobiles that places it in the second place, the natural demand for tires is enormous. The Fisk tire people have seen these possibilities and have established at Los Angeles a distributing depot to care for their Coast interests.

Beardsley Electric
Record-Breaking Tour
135 Miles—Not an Adjustment—Power to Spare!
TEN "long-mileage" Beardsley Electrics toured to Riverside, May 30th, returning May 31st, a distance of 135 miles—every car scoring 100 per cent. each way.
This is the most remarkable test to which an electric vehicle has ever been subjected. These were regular stock cars, driven by owners. In spite of numerous steep grades and much heavy going, no car required a single adjustment, and both ways there was power to spare.
Every car was equipped with Gould Batteries, Westinghouse Motors, Houk Wire Wheels and special Electric Axles, A. O. Smith & Co. Frames—all standard materials in Beardsley construction.

LOS ANGELES TEAM WINS SALE SERIES.

The baseball sales contest between the San Francisco and Los Angeles Chalmers agencies is now in full swing. Los Angeles won last week and now leads the north in the total runs scored, each sale meaning a run.

Each week constitutes a game and for the nine weeks of the contest San Francisco has won four, Los Angeles three, and the others were ties. The south is one game behind, but on general results leads.

BLACK NICKEL PLATE.

Prof. Oliver P. Watts of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis., has invented a process for the deposition of black nickel, not the ordinary white nickel, on aluminum. With this process a polished dark nickel surface can be given. The solution of Prof. Watts consists of sixty grams of the double sulphate of nickel and ammonia, fifteen grams of ammonium sulphocyanide, and six grams of zinc sulphate per liter of water. The plating is done as usual for black nickel with a low current. There are still some difficulties to be overcome and improvements to be made before the process can be considered thoroughly satisfactory.

CYCLE TIRES NOW FIRESTONE MADE.

Two styles of cycle tires are now turned out by the Firestone Company, non-skid and corrugated treads.

Five years have required annual extensions to the factory, those of the present including two wings of 125 feet each, with 95,000 additional floor space.

A Marmon car won the Atlanta hill-climbing contest from a field of twelve machines, doing the Stewart-avenue grade at a speed of 68.7 miles per hour.

HIGHWAY LINK IS PROPOSED.

CANYON ROUTE SCENIC SUNDAY MOTOR DRIVE.

Survey Made by Auto Club of Site Back of Beverly Hills for Roadway Which Will Connect Hollywood With San Fernando Valley and Shorten Distance to Ocean.

The proposed new pass into the San Fernando Valley, through Benedict Canyon, has aroused great interest among Southern California motorists.

Many inquiries concerning the scenic highway have been received at the Automobile Club of Southern California during the past week. Local motor car dealers have also become interested in the project and representatives of a number of agencies have made runs out to the canyon back of Beverly Hills to inspect the site of the proposed latest link in the Southern California good roads chain.

Among the automobile men to invade the canyon last week was Doc Green, assistant manager of the local Hudson agency. The Hudson man drove a party of friends over the three miles of roadway now leading into the canyon from Beverly, and pronounced the route excellent.

When this road is completed, motorists will have a new Sunday afternoon tour. The trip through Hollywood and Benedict Canyon, then back into Los Angeles over Sherman way, through Lankershim and the Cahuenga Pass, will be one of the most popular short runs for local autoists.

Doc Green also suggests that the route will draw a large percentage of the motor traffic between Los Angeles and San Francisco during the exposition season.

The Automobile Club of Southern California had a survey made of Benedict Canyon two years ago, and made a favorable report upon the project of a highway connecting the two valleys. The club officials, according to Standish L. Mitchell, secretary of the organization, have indorsed the plans now under way and the highway is practically assured within a short time.

Demonstrating the Cartercar.

[illegible] Davis of the local Cartercar agency showing the simplicity of operation, which is a feature of this car, to a group of prospective purchasers, on a road to San Bernardino.

Fair Play.

AMERICAN CARS TAKE FOREIGN MOTOR EVENTS.

F. S. HOWARD, manager of the local Buick agency, is elated over the results of the Indianapolis speedway classic. The first four cars to finish, the two De Lages and the two Peugeots, all have valve-in-the-head motors, and the valve-in-the-head motor is a Buick feature.

While Howard deplores the fact that an American car did not cross the line a winner, still he calls attention to the fact that two of the American-made machines that did get in the money used valve-in-the-head motors.

For a number of years the majority of high-powered foreign racing cars have been equipped with valve-in-the-head motors, and a goodly portion of the special built American cars have adopted this type of motor in their struggle for supremacy over their foreign rivals.

"While we have to hand the Frenchmen the palm for running away with the money at Indianapolis, turn about is fair play," said Howard. "It was a Buick team that was the only one to finish with a perfect score in the recent French reliability run, which covered a distance of 3000 miles around France. In this run the Buick duplicated its performance of the year before, when it was the only car to finish the run with a perfect score.

"For a Buick to enter an event composed of the pick of the foreign market and gather the prize for two years running, must surely have rankled the French motorists, who have demonstrated that they are among the best in the world.

"All credit to them, remembering that an American car occasionally slips over the big pond and carries off the bacon from under their very noses."

Owensmouth to Chatsworth Park closed for construction, open about June 10.

Lankershim to Burbank, excellent. Lookout Mountain road in good shape.

Paving of Figueroa street completed to Slauson avenue. Motorists are cautioned to be careful in going over grade crossing at junction of Figueroa street and Slauson avenue. Anaheim road between Long Beach and Santa Ana open and in fair condition.

Motorists touring to San Diego via the Coast route should follow the [illegible] boulevard to the San [illegible] boulevard about ten miles out from Third and Broadway; turn right at that point into Downey, thence through Norwalk and [illegible], left on First street, Artesia, [illegible] road, just south of Fullerton; thence south through Santa Ana.

Roads through Griffith Park not in good condition, but first picnic grounds can be made from Hollywood with little difficulty.

The Los Feliz road is now open and in good condition.

Vermont avenue, between Sixth and [illegible], is rough. Turn left one block on Linden, then right, following temporary signs.

Placerita Canyon road, from Newhall through Placerita Canyon and Sand Canyon, north through Sand Canyon to Soledad Canyon, and south through Soledad Canyon to Saugus, in fair shape. One or two heavy pulls in Sand Canyon, and two poor fords in Soledad Canyon.

Santa Ana Canyon, between Orange and Corona, is closed indefinitely for road construction.

The Mt. Wilson road is open and in better shape than for some time. Plenty of water is to be had on the road. Toll charges 25 cents for machine and 25 cents for each passenger.

San Antonio Canyon, in the foothills north of Upland, is reported in good shape, and the Camp Baldy resort is now open for guests.

Topango Canyon will be closed for some time for road construction, and motorists are cautioned not to attempt this run for the present. The beach road from Santa Monica to the Malibu ranch gates is in fair shape, but is not recommended at present, as some repair work is being done, making the road loose and narrow in spots. There is also a short strip of extremely heavy sand just beyond 101 Ranch, where many cars have trouble.

The Pasadena office of the Auto Club of Southern California reports two small bridges on the San Gabriel boulevard still out. One of the detours is rather bad, but many cars make the run with little trouble.

The Vernon-Downey bridge will probably be open some time next week, providing there is no further delay in the procuring of satisfactory material for bridge construction.

FRANKLIN AT TOP, SAYS JANE.

Miss O'Roark Races Autos and Aeroplanes.

"Hip" Headliner Gained Fame in Phoenix.

Los Angeles Actress Has Owned Many Makes.

Jane O'Roark, probably the first Los Angeles girl to own and drive her own car, who was undoubtedly the first Los Angeles girl to run an aeroplane, having been taught to fly by the late Howard Gill, and who, during the past few years has been "cleaning up" in vaudeville, came back to town this week, to play an engagement at the Hippodrome at the head of her own company, and brought her Franklin with her.

Fresh from winning a five-mile road race in Phoenix, while she was playing at the New Columbia Theater there, Miss O'Roark has voted in favor of the new Franklin, and already, during the short time she has been in the city, her roadster, with the dashing girl at the wheel, has attracted more than the ordinary amount of attention.

Nowadays many a girl drives her machine—after a fashion—but Jane is really an expert, and she frankly admits that she would rather be fined than shut off the gas.

Miss O'Roark, when asked why she liked the Franklin so well, after having had so much experience with other cars, replied, "I think it is the easiest-running car made. I noticed this particularly while in Arizona, for there the roads are anything but smooth."

En Route.

NEW MODELS COMING SOON.

SHIPMENT OF CARS FOR LOCAL AGENCY THIS WEEK.

Newly Organized Concern Waiting for Machines Which Will Be First of New Fiat Models to Reach Los Angeles This Season—Second Shipment Is Bringing Roadster Model.

The newly organized Carleton-Faulkner-Bowles Company, representing the Fiat and the McFarlan Six will receive their first Fiats this week, two four-cylinder touring cars and one six-cylinder touring car.

A second carload is also en route from the factory, which consists of a roadster and two touring cars.

The Fiat is the "fanless" car, as there is no fan between the motor and radiator, the fly wheel serving this purpose. The radiation, as on former models, is controlled by centrifugal pump.

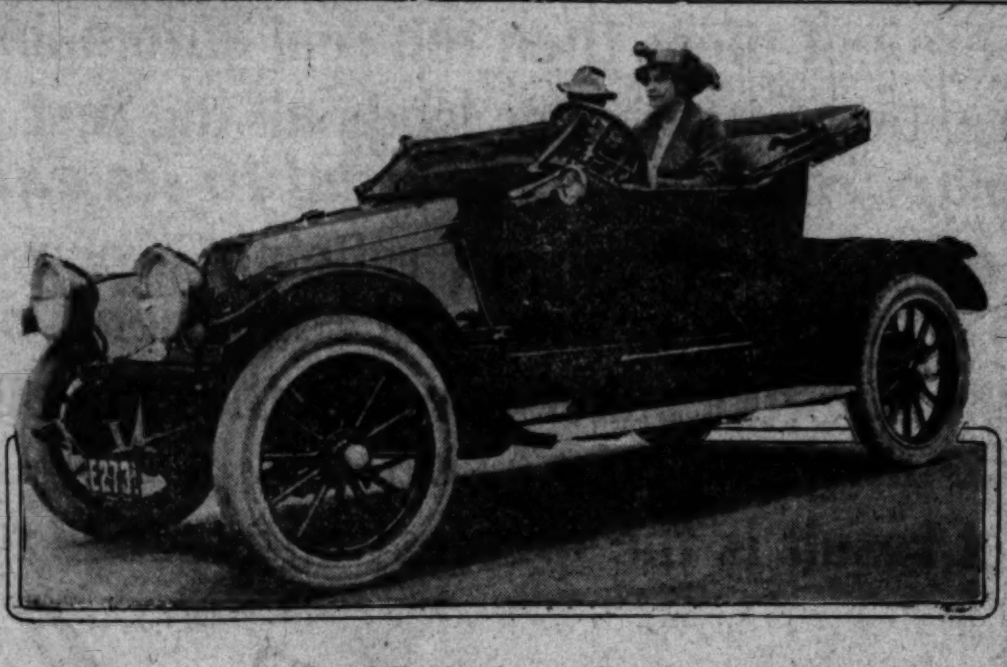
All valves are interchangeable and are placed on one side of the motor only, and enclosed in aluminum casing.

High tension dual system furnishes the ignition, and the positive lubrication of motor bearings and piston pins ensures proper distribution of oil, and prevents burnt-out bearings.

Four speeds forward and reverse give the maximum of flexibility under all road conditions. The exceptionally long wheel base of 128 inches ensures easy riding, and the three-quarter springs are suspended from a special model spring suspension.

Standard equipment of all Fiat models includes a large Klaxon, trunk rack, top, wind shield, electric head, side and tail lights, robe and foot rail, tire irons and carriers, quick detachable demountable rims with two extra rims, clock, gradometer and 100-mile speedometer.

Robert Dibble of the Don Rowing Club, Toronto, single sculling champion of the United States and Canada, is in London preparing for the Royal English Henley regatta, where he will try to lift the diamond sculls. The race is scheduled for July 1 to 4. In his final trial race in Toronto he rowed a mile in 5:55⅕.



Jane O'Roark in her new Franklin.

Miss O'Roark, who is a Los Angeles girl, made some remarkable records with a Franklin in Phoenix recently. She will be at the Hippodrome this week in "The Law," but outside the show shop likes to present "The Franklin on the Road."

Think It Over.

NAME IS WANTED ON SAVAGE TIRE.

NON-SKID NOVELTY NEEDS NEW NOMENCLATURE.

San Diego Manufacturers Want Suggestions Upon Latest Output, Offer Prize Casing to Ingenious Person Winning Approval of Office Heads by Appropriate Cognomen.

Though a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, the Savage Tire Company, of San Diego, desires suggestions of an appropriate name for the new Savage non-skid product of their factory.

Competitors may send their replies to the company at San Diego, or to the local branch at No. 1223 South Olive street, Los Angeles.

A Savage casing awaits the successful author as a prize. The size will be that suited to the car of the winner.

The new tire, of distinctive appearance, may be seen at the company and branch salesrooms.

The Telegraph road bridge will probably be open by June 20.

There are not more than ten real automobile manufacturers in America.

Of these ten, Studebaker leads all the rest in manufacturing the largest proportion of parts used in its cars.

In laboratory research, in refining processes, in intensive manufacturing, in costly but economical equipment, Studebaker is first.

In addition, Studebaker spreads these quality producing factors over the largest "six" volume.

The net result is the greatest automobile value in the world today---the Demonstration Will Sell This SIX Agains Any Car of Any Size or Any Price

The Studebaker SIX will prove to you in half an hour its superiority over heavier, costlier cars.

It has a greater proportion of manufactured parts than the best of these heavier cars.

Each essential part is of special formula steel, heat-treated from two to four times to permit the use of light parts— increased strength.

It will prove that this Studebaker combination of light weight and perfect balance holds the road far better than mere

Once set in a straight line the Studebaker SIX continues in a straight line.

It does not creep or slide toward the ditch from the crown of a country road.

This roadability begins in the motor itself—one of the smoothest-running, most perfectly balanced "Six" motors i world.

When the motor is developing its greatest power vibration is practically imperceptible.

At a speed of thirty or forty miles an hour you will probably guess that you are going twenty or twenty-five.

Your tire cost, gasoline cost, and oil cost are of course very much lower than they would be in a heavier car—even a "F of equal power.

Studebaker Demonstration Shows Even More Striking Superiority Against the Assembled "Six"

No assembled or semi-manufactured "Six" can stand up in demonstration against the Studebaker SIX.

Studebaker gives you special formula steels tested to 150,000 pounds per square inch.

The best steel the assembler can give you is the best he can get; tested by the mill—perhaps—to 100,000 pounds.

Studebaker doubles and trebles the strength of its own special formula steels by two to four heat treatments.

The assembler must pass the steel on to you exactly as he gets it.

Studebaker by this process produces parts two to three times as strong, and still holds down the weight.

To equal this strength the assembler would have to add weight which would be prohibitive.

So the factor of safety in the Studebaker SIX is bound to be immeasurably greater than in the best assembled "Six"

And the same elements work out in the Studebaker SIX to produce perfect balance.

As a result of this balance it rides better, makes better use of its power, is a better hill-climber, is easier on tires.

In short, the value, long life and roadability of a "Six" are in proportion to the number of manufactured and closely ured parts.

In that respect, as we said above, the Studebaker SIX leads the world.

That is why it is competing with the costliest "Sixes" and outselling them.

That is why assembled "Sixes" MUST COME DOWN in price; and CANNOT COME UP to the Studebaker in factured quality.

The Studebaker FOUR is of the same grade and quality of material and workmanship, and is manufactured with the same scrupulous care and closeness, as the Studebaker SIX.

Studebaker branches and dealers have in stock $1,000,000 worth of service-parts.

This means service to owners of a sort that assemblers do not and cannot give.

In this respect we believe the Studebaker organization to be unequaled.

In addition to its $3,000,000 machinery equipment for car manufacture Studebaker maintains a special plant for the manufacture of service-parts, to keep all branch and dealer stocks complete at all times.

The Studebaker Proof Book describes and pictures the scientific manufacturing operations of Studebaker. Send for it.

feeling the strain of injured soon after Cincinnati, and he was Los Angeles. He pitched for the Angels These served to convince him that his arm was not there and he asked for his release. This was given him, and he signed up with Hogan, who was then piloting the Tigers under the name of the Vernon club.

Hap was up against it for a third baseman, Burrell having been injured, and it was in that position that Hosp broke in as a Tiger. Since then he has played every position in the infield and outfield, and played them well.

He ranks as a star in any position in which he is placed. In addition to this he is what is known as a "smart" ball player.

Every club has its utility man, and frequently several. These as a rule are all right when shoved into a position which is natural for them, but how many are there, past or present, who appear to be equally at home at every point in the infield and outfield, and who have worked at both battery points?

No, in this respect, the game has never produced Hosp's equal, either in the minors or the majors.

Having tried out all of them, Hosp regards second base as the most desirable place in the infield, while short is loaded down with complications and woes.

"Most of the throws which the second baseman has to make are short, and he does not have to hurry them," said Hosp. "Of course, the second baseman has his troubles, especially if he has a first baseman who plays close to the bag. However, everything considered, I regard it as the choice position in the infield.

"Probably, to the average fan, first base looks comparatively easy, but it isn't. Nowadays, the first sacker is required to cover a lot of ground, and always is in danger of serious injury in a close play at first. In order to keep clear of collision, get the wide ones and keep his foot on the base, and avoid getting cut with the spikes of the runner, he must have the footwork of a Kilbane or a Welsh. A good first baseman must be as light in the pedals as a dancing master.

"Third is a tough position to play, but I would hardly call it the 'difficult corner.' At third, you either get 'em or you don't. The ball is either hit with terrific speed, or comes down as a bunt. Some are too hot to handle, and some too slow. The fans realize this, and a third sacker is seldom censured for failing on either the hot ones or the crawlers.

"On the other hand, the shortstop is compelled to combat every variety of drive known to the game, with a lot of crank hops mixed in. He gets a lot of chances which look easy, but which in fact are extremely treacherous. There is nothing more deceiving than a slow grounder which looks harmless until it takes a sudden shoot or jump just before reaching the fielder. He may have played the drive perfectly, only to be made to look like a boob when something changes the course of the ball by an inch or two just as he is ready to scoop it.

"Not only does the shortstop play his own position, but he has a lot of business to occupy him around second, and he is also captain of most of the 'Texas leaguers' in left field.

"The shortstop covers more territory than a Marathon runner. He backs up third, takes short flies in left, covers second and frequently goes over beyond that base or over past the pitcher's box to cut down base hits. Believe me, he is baseball's busy little boy.

"Also, with a man on first, he always is figuring with the catcher and pitcher. With a right-hand hitter up, and the catcher signalling for a fast ball, it is up to the shortstop to cover, it being figured that the ball will be hit right. In the case of a curve ball, the second baseman covers. The shortstop, when covering, starts for the base with the delivery of the ball, and is generally forced to take the throw on the run. As the ball strikes his glove, there is the crash of a sliding runner, and the gleam of spikes, but the shortstop must get his man, regardless of consequences.

"In the case of a runner on first, and the count three and two on the batter, the shortstop does not start to cover second until the ball is either hit or not hit. If the next ball is a good one, the batter is likely to land on it, and heaven only knows what the direction of the smash will be, for the pitcher has been compelled to put it over the plate or walk his man, unless he has the nerve to try and fool him with a hook."

Kindly excuse me from shortstopping.

Great Stuff.

MOTOR SCHEDULE GIVES BREAKFAST CANTALOUPES.

IMPERIAL VALLEY cantaloupes for breakfast in San Diego the day after they are picked, is the result of motor truck transportation.

G. Charles Bullen, president and manager of the Imperial Valley Trading Company, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday and ordered two additional Moreland trucks, equipped with United States tires, for service on the routes between San Diego and Imperial Valley points. Bullen's company now operates thirteen Moreland trucks, all of which are equipped with United States tires.

The run from San Diego to Calexico is made in eleven hours by truck. This is just about one-fifth the time required for horse and wagon. The transportation company makes a specialty of freighting perishable goods to and from the valley towns.

RIPE MELONS.

Cantaloupes picked in the valley in the afternoon arrive in San Diego in time for breakfast the next morning. The old way was to pick cantaloupes green and allow them to ripen in the box cars. The melons are now allowed to ripen on the vines.

Tomatoes and sweet potatoes are also brought into San Diego in great quantities. One ton of fresh butter is hauled in from the Imperial Valley creameries every day.

New potatoes are now being taken into the valley and throughout the entire year the trucks make fast trips with groceries and supplies for the Imperial merchants. The Morelands run on a regular schedule, leaving both terminals in the evening and arriving at an early hour in the morning.

With the extensive service station in San Diego, operated by the Moreland concern, in charge of C. A. McNulty, they are kept in perfect condition and no time is lost. Bullen said last night that he expected to have twenty-five trucks on the route within a few months.

What Every Owner Knows

What engenders the exceptional loyalty and intense enthusiasm Hup owners display for their cars?
Why do Hup owners go out of their way—as they actually are doing—to convince their friends and neighbors that a Hup investment is best?
Because every one of them knows his car renders more continuous service at lesser cost.
Because he knows his Hup, at any time or season, holds a cash value far above the average for second-hand cars.

All In His Favor

Because he knows he is justified in rating depreciation extremely low—some put it as low as a cent a mile.
Because he is getting long mileage on tires, gasoline and oil.
Because he knows his Hup is as serviceable today, as full of "pep", as worthy and ready for rough roads and tough loads, as when he bought it six months, a year or two years ago.
Because he knows its durability; its sturdy, costly build, that makes repairs few and far between, of minor character and small cost.
Is it strange, then, that men should be enthusiastic about the Hup?
We think not; and any Hup owner or dealer you talk to will bear us out.

REDLANDS GOLF.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, June 6.—Raymond Hornby won the championship of the Redlands Country Club today, defeating the low handicap man, Morris Phillips, in one of the most absorbing contests ever played on the club links. The match began this morning with an eighteen-hole round. At the ninth the players were square; at the eighteenth Phillips was two up. The real struggle began this afternoon when Hornby, after the first hole which Phillips won, began to wipe out his opponent's advantage and by the twenty-seventh hole had all square again.

All square at the thirty-second hole, but Hornby won the thirty-third. The thirty-fourth was halved and Hornby won the thirty-fifth, making him two up and one to go and giving him the championship. The medal play scores were good. Phillips made the morning round in 76, Hornby taking 79. In the afternoon these figures were reversed, both players having 155 for the thirty-six holes.

Today's ball sweepstakes were won by L. L. Moore, 89-25—64. Hornby had best gross, 76, and tied with Silas Williams for second best net with 72. Dr. W. B. Power wins the Hicks trophy, defeating Morris Phillips after a close and exciting match in which the winner carried his opponent to the thirty-ninth hole, where he won by two up.

PETE SCHNEIDER BELONGS TO REDS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) June 6.—President D. E. Dugdale of the Seattle Northwestern League club today received the following telegram from August Herrmann of the Cincinnati Nationals, concerning the sale of Pete Schneider, the star Seattle pitcher, who signed with Cincinnati Thursday night:

"Chicago Federals wire us Schneider contracted with them and accepted advance money and requests that we keep hands off."

It was learned today that $500 which Schneider attempted to return to Chicago was refused by the telegraph company and is now in Dugdale's possession.

Newton Gresser, sales manager of the local Don Lee Cadillac agency, announces the arrival of a new shipment of Cadillac convertibles. All convertibles in stock were sold last month, which left the local agency without one of these popular models to show. LONG BEACH HIGH WINS BALL GAME FROM POLY.

THE Long Beach High School baseball team, playing like the champions they are, swept the Poly nine down to a 6-to-2 defeat at Occidental yesterday afternoon, earning the right to play for the southern title next Saturday. The umpire had hardly adjusted his mask when the beach boys started circling the bases, while the bewildered Poly infield heaved the ball far and wide for three errors that lost the game in the first few minutes of play. One little hit was all Long Beach could get off Abel in the first two innings, but they scored four runs more than enough to win the game. Four errors and a bit of wildness on the part of Abel did the work.

Capt. Bones was retired by the way of Haney and Martin in the first. Harvey walked and stole second, advancing to third on Reagan's single. Wilcox hit to Tipton, who fumbled, and all hands were safe with Harvey scoring. Curry hit a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Reagan, Wilcox going to second. Abel booted Stein's grounder and both runners were safe. Maurer hit to Tipton, who again kicked the ball around, letting Wilcox score. Maurer was derailed at second. That was enough to win, but the Long Beach boys made a few more now and then to make things comfortable.

Poly never had a chance against the brilliant ball the winners played behind the steady heaving of Stein. The entire infield was impregnable with Capt. Bones and First Sacker Curry starring on the defense. Both outfields played remarkable ball with Miller of Long Beach and Smith and Gillette of Poly making several wonderful running catches of line drives.

Abel pitched a fine game and with better support on the inner works he would have given the winners a tough battle for a game that was won easily by the beach nine.

Toss Away Game.

with a three-base bump to the boards in the sixth.

Hogan earned a draw with Parkin. Hap didn't make any more noise than Cy, that being a physical impossibility, but his coaching was more effective.

Hogan began picking on Baum right from the start, and inside of three minutes had "Spider's" Angora corralled.

"Watch out for that balk, Jack," yelled Hap. "He makes one every time he throws a ball." Hap didn't use to talk that way when "Spider" was working for him.

This line of conversation seemed to hit Baum in a sensitive spot, as he blushed profusely and passed Carlisle. Leard sacrificed and Meloan went out to Howard, unassisted. Carlisle, who had reached third by this time, was singled home by Bayless.

It was here that Baum began to exude bad pitching in groups of four. He walked Litschi and Borton, filling the bases. Then, without pausing, he passed Hosp, forcing Bayless home. "Spider" smiled, but it was 'way around by his left ear, and didn't look like the real thing. Then he walked Bliss and Litschi oozed over the plate.

Howard walked over and emptied a few words of consolation into his ear. These had no magic effect. "Spider" threw up a couple of wide ones to Henley, and then sneaked out of the place. "Cack" hit a Standridge slant into a force-out at second.

Standridge allowed but four scattered hits, and had top-notch support. This Schaller feller played much ball in left, making six sensational putouts.

Standridge tripled in the fifth with two out. The ball soared far over Bayless and hit the fence. It would have been a home run for anybody but a pitcher. Tobin was unable to shove Pete across.

San Francisco made life right miserable for "Cack" in the sixth. O'Leary and Schaller singled, Downs then forced "Biff." Fitzgerald smote the ball to left for three bases, scoring O'Leary and Downs. Henley hit Howardd, which seemed to be the safest thing to do. Hosp went into the air and hauled down a wicked line drive. Clarke popped to the same party.

Tobin singled in the seventh, reaching third on O'Leary's sacrifice and Schaller's infield single. Tobin and Schaller worked a double steal, Tobin scoring while the ball was traveling from Bliss to Leard and back again.

This, you will observe, tied the score, it remaining in that condition until the tenth. After Schaller had been retired, Hosp grabbed Downs's grounder and threw the ball to the bleachers, Jeremiah going to second. Fitzgerald singled, placing him on third. Howard was walked, much wisdom being concealed in the deed.

With Downs coming down the line, Charles bunted, dumping the ball a few feet in front of the plate. Downs was across before Bliss could reach it. Jack then fired the ball over first and into right field, Fitzgerald scoring and Howard going to third. Clarke and Standridge were mild and merciful at the bat. Leard singled and stole second in the tenth. Nothing more doing.

The Tigers are now leading the Angels by something like one point.

Dramatic Note—Cy Parkin is believed to be slumping. He spoke only 7000 words yesterday.

JIMMY CLABBY LOSES TO SMITH.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

SYDNEY (N.S.W.) June 6.—Jimmy Clabby, the Indiana middleweight, was given the worst of an unpopular decision here tonight in a twenty-round boxing match with Jeff Smith, a Philadelphia fighter who has been in Australia for several years. So little did the crowd like the referee's judgment that the decision brought on a riot. The police had difficulty in controlling the audience, and the referee was hissed and booed.

This was Clabby's first fight since coming here from San Francisco, and he made a favorable impression. The opinion generally was expressed by sport writers and experts at boxing who attended the fight that Clabby had been treated unfairly.

MAID'S PARADISE, SO MANY SPARKS.

Bosch engineers figure that the Bosch magneto furnished 1,816,000 perfect sparks in winning the Indianapolis 500-mile road race with the De Lage car. Eleven of the twelve cars crossing the finish line used the Bosch ignition system, and nine of the twelve were equipped with Bosch plugs.

Ignition difficulty was unknown throughout the race, though the terrific speed sustained would put an ordinary electric generator out of commission in a few minutes.

FAST RUN.

Tire Man Drives Up Mountain Road in Record Time from Los Angeles. Roads in Good Shape.

C. O. Du Mars, the local tire man, made a fast run from Los Angeles to Thousand Pines last week. Just three hours and thirty-five minutes after leaving Los Angeles he was at the mountain resort.

The roads are in good shape with the exception of a stretch of about twelve miles this side of San Bernardino. The road up the mountain is in good shape and any average car or driver can make the run.

Du Mars drove his Hudson.

Illinois Wins Meet.

spoiled any chance they had for new records. During the two-mile run, and while most of the field events were in progress, a heavy rainstorm swept the field and handicapped the competitors.

Murray won the low hurdles for Stanford, nosing out Ward of Chicago in the last few strides, in the fair time, against the wind, of 25s.

A great race by Wilson of Stanford won him the mile run. Campbell of Chicago took the lead in this event, but Wilson was close on his heels when the Midway ended the first lap. Then Carroll of Ohio went to the front, but though Wilson did not cut loose, he stayed right behind the leader and finally, on the third lap, shot to the front. Then Campbell started to sprint, passing Carroll and Wilson both, rounding the turn into the stretch just two strides ahead of the Coast men. With victory almost in his grasp the Maroon was forced into third place when Wilson spurted like a shot into the lead and Harvey of Wisconsin won the place, just as the three crossed the tape.

Stegeman of Chicago, an outsider, according to critics, caused a sensation in the 440-yard event by jumping out in front. The Maroon figured that his only chance was to dash away from the speedier men, such as Sanders and Henderson, but Carl Cline of Colorado University overtook him on the back stretch of the quarter mile track and ran abreast with him to the last turn. Then both were passed by the Illinois stars and in a gallant race Henderson nosed out Sanders, winning in 50s.

Perhaps the prettiest race of the day was the half. Henderson was forced to the limit to win the event and the hot competition caused the broken record. If Bonnett, the Stanford entry, had not fallen, it is likely he and Henderson would have been neck and neck at the finish, but his stumble gave second place to Osborne of Northwestern, who himself nearly overtook the Illini in the stretch.

Colorado came near upsetting the forecasts on the relay. The Westerners were step by step behind Illinois' quartette until Henderson shot away in the third relay. With an advantage of nearly fifteen yards, Sanders started the last quarter and then Cline of Colorado began to close up the gap. On the back stretch every step counted a small gain for the western man and on the last turn he was just at Sanders's heels. Then Sanders cut loose his best speed and won the race for the Illini—a tied record being the result. Goelitz was in the Illini team and as his eligibility has been questioned, it is possible the result of the relay will not stand.

Wanted A Selling Force To Market the Famous

the most effective "safety first" signal that human ingenuity has yet evolved. By night as well as by day it unfailingly safeguards the traveling public, the driver and the passenger. Public demand created the device, and now official recognition has brought it to the point of being marketed.

The new traffic ordinance recognizes it, and requires effective signaling. The Board of Police Commissioners has put its stamp of approval upon the DIRECTO signal. The device is already known to the trade and to a very large extent to the user, an expensive publicity campaign having preceded this final recognition by the authorities.

The DIRECTO signal is a touch-the-button affair, compact, simple and sure of operation. It is sightly, and sells as a human necessity as well as an ornamental accessory. The DIRECTO is known from one end of the country to the other.

We are equipped with expensive dies, stock on hand, literature and other necessary adjuncts for big business.

Call now for a highly responsible firm or individual, to undertake the exclusive sales work. THE SIGNAL TOPS THEM ALL, AND WILL COMMAND THE MARKET. THE TERMS WILL CONVINCE YOU OF THE FUTURE EARNINGS IF YOU WILL CALL TO GET THE INFORMATION.

Play Fair
With Yourself

It pays to take enough time from your work, business or pleasure to give your physical condition a thorough overhauling. How near you come to the 100 per cent. mark demanded from those in every calling nowadays, means success or failure. Do you ever stop to think why your work tires you out so easily, and why you must force yourself into action? Why is your body not strong enough to stand up under the daily grind? Why can't you enjoy refreshing sleep and wake up in good trim for the day? Why are your muscles soft and flabby instead of the reverse?

Insist Upon 100% Efficiency Methods.

The 100 per cent. rating applies with especial force to the methods of treatment employed. It is impossible to get the best and quickest results from a "50 per cent." doctor, and to protect themselves, patients should MAKE IT AN OBJECT to find out WHICH physician really has measured up to the mark. Is his treatment effective? Does he make it easy, even for those of limited means, to get the benefit of his services? How long has he been in practice? Does he personally stand behind his patients and his promises?

I have been located in Los Angeles ten years. My specialty includes Varicose Veins, Rheumatism, Constipation, Deformities, Rupture, Eczema, Piles, Fistula and Fissure, Ulceration and other Diseases of the Rectum. Recent and Chronic Disorders of the Blood, Skin, Nerves and Vital Organs.

You are not particularly interested in elaborate spreads of printer's ink, but want to know WHO has PROVED HIMSELF a real specialist. Who makes terms that MAKE IT EASY to get the benefit of badly needed EXPERT attention. How I PROVE UP to what patients have a right to expect from a thoroughly reliable physician, should interest the sick and afflicted to at least call. Welcome to free examination and a friendly chat, whether you treat or not. Hours 9 to 4. Evenings 7 to 8. Sundays 9 to 12 noon only.

DETROIT BRANCH FOR MASTER CARBURETOR COMPANY.

Demand for Los Angeles Product in Racing Game Brought About Largely by Ralph De Palma's Success, and Mercedes Driver Refuses to Race With Any Other Make.

W. E. Burk and W. M. Jenkins, president and manager of the Master Carburetor Company, leave Los Angeles next week for Detroit to open up the headquarters of the newly-formed Master Carburetor Corporation which will, in future, look after all Master interests east of the Rockies.

Both men have been instrumental in building up the successful business of the Los Angeles company, and securing its products recognition abroad.

Arrangements have been made for the manufacture of Masters at Detroit, and the combined facilities of the two factories will produce an output of 50,000 carburetors a year.

These eastern arrangements have been made necessary largely by the demand for Masters in the East, as a factor in the racing game. The Master has best been made known by the success of Ralph de Palma, who had his Mercedes Master equipped when he won the Vanderbilt.

In fact, De Palma refused at the last minute to drive in the Indianapolis race because the Mercedes factory insisted on using their stock carburetor, but De Palma rather than risk defeat with any other carburetor than the Master, withdrew from the race.

AUTO CAMP GROUND PROPOSED FOR RIVERSIDE.

Business Men's Association Approaches City Council and Committee Suggests Plans for Section of Fairmount Park to Be Devoted to Motorists Who Visit the City.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, June 6.—When the Business Men's Association of this city approached the City Council with a proposal to allow the use of certain land for an automobile camp ground they builded better than they knew.

The matter was referred to the Committee on Streets, and this committee has gone so far as to suggest that the Board of Park Commissioners be approached in the matter of having a portion of Fairmount Park devoted to the purposes of a camping ground.

This delightful resort provides all that could possibly be desired in the way of shade, artesian water and toilet facilities, and is further ideal for camping purposes in that arrangements are complete for cooking.

The park board will probably render its decision in the matter the first of the week.

MOTOR TOURISTS.

The number of automobilists who have planned to take their cars abroad this year for touring in England and on the Continent, or to engage automobiles on the other side for similar purpose is extraordinarily large. More motor cars will go across the Atlantic in the holds of ocean liners beginning this week than in several years past. Already the automobile clubs' foreign touring department and express companies have arranged for the oversea transportation of nearly a thousand cars. Conservative estimate places the season's record at 2000. This exceeds the number of motor cars taken abroad last year by a large margin, while, at the same time, there appears no way to account for the increase. A curious thing is that a large percentage of automobilists are arranging to do their touring in England. This season it runs France a close second in point of popularity, and this is unprecedented; for as a general proposition the tight little island has to share liberally in summer with other attractive places in Central Europe, such as the South of Germany, Switzerland, Northern Italy, and the Austrian Tyrol.

STATE HIGHWAY.

Twelve miles of the new State highway are completed. The end of concrete base road ends within a mile of the green store at Calabasas. From the summit of the Canejo to the paved stretch, the road is very good; but it is now closed at both ends.

The Saugus route is the only way to Ventura at present. The State highway is closed. There are about four miles of the State highway to be built below Calabasas and the contractors have been delayed by machines which have been driven over the closed roads.

Within a month or so, according to Contractor Gillette, the road will be open from Calabasas if the motorists stay out and let the contractors get through.

CLOSED TIGHT.

Last Sunday hundreds of machines went over the road and to stop traffic, deputies have been placed at both entrances with orders to allow no one in on the road which is under construction, except those who live along the highway.

When this route is opened, the drive to Ventura will be a delightful afternoon tour.

VIM DELIVERY CAR REQUIRES NEW HOME.

Merchants Declare Light Vehicle Solves Question of Quick and Economical Deliveries to Customers—Parcels Distributed Over Sparse Territory at Light Cost.

Small delivery cars are meeting with such favor that Y. R. Del Valle has been compelled to procure larger quarters for distribution of the Vim truck, and he is accordingly showing the light vehicle at No. 1026 South Olive street.

Small merchants find especial advantages in the use of this fifteen-horse-power carrier, which, though requiring little fuel, is as stanchly built as most trucks of twice its power.

Nearly all merchants declare that the small car is the solution of the delivery question, being economical, quick, and adapted to cheap service in districts where few parcels are demanded simultaneously.

GREAT RECORD FOR OLD CAR.

Fifteen Miles and Over Country Roads and Motor Runs for Sixteen Minutes Afterward on One Gallon of Gasoline, Put in Tank at Start for Wager Demonstration.

An authenticated report to Don Lee, California Cadillac distributor, tells of a four-year-old Cadillac with a remarkable record in Southwest Missouri. This 1910 model has been plying between Dexter and Bloomfield for more than four years, making a round trip each day.

In this time the car has run more than 215,000 miles. It is still in service and in good running condition. Lately the car was used on a picnickers' outing in the country, and as many as nine grown persons were hauled on some of the trips. On one trip there was a whole Sunday-school class of sixteen children crowded into this one car.

One of the greatest runs the car has made was on a wager. It left Dexter with one gallon of gasoline in the tank and ran seven and a half miles to Bloomfield and thence back to Dexter, a total of fifteen miles. After running to Dexter the motor was permitted to run until the original gallon of gasoline was exhausted. It ran 16 minutes.

TO TOUR EXTENSIVELY IN NEW ENGLAND STATES.

Driving Over Lincoln Highway on First Stages of Trip Has Been Enjoyed by All According to Letters Received by Friends of Members of the Transcontinental Party.

One of the first parties to leave Los Angeles for the trip across the continent is now well on its way. W. S. Duncan and wife and Mr. Duncan's brother, Harry, who left Los Angeles May 20 in their Pierce-Arrow touring car for a transcontinental tour, write that they have keenly enjoyed the trip so far. They are traveling over the Lincoln highway. Their route to the Nevada State line was by way of Mojave and Big Pine, and from there across Nevada and Utah to Salt Lake City. The route they intend to follow takes them to Omaha and thence by the Tri-City road to Chicago. From Chicago they will journey to Buffalo by the Lake Shore route and thence to Boston, returning to New York, which they expect to reach by July 1.

They expect to tour extensively in the New England States, visiting the White Mountains and many of the summer resorts of the Atlantic Coast and the New England at New York lakes.

So Easy.

SHRINERS PUT CAR IN LINE.

LOS ANGELES HAS ONLY AUTO IN ATLANTA PARADE.

California Noble Pulls Stunt on Police Officers and Ban on Motor Cars Fails to Keep Eddie Maier's Big Machine from Taking Position in Front of California Band.

California slipped one over in the big Shrine parade at Atlanta during the conclave. The only automobile in the line was a Los Angeles car, the big Peerless owned by Eddie Maier.

The rule was that no automobiles were to be in the parade. The Nobles from Los Angeles decided to ride in a machine, nevertheless. Maier's car was loaded with Los Angeles men and parked on a side street, just ahead of the famous California band.

Just as the parade started Jack Tehan, wearing the uniform of the local patrol, stepped out in the center of the street and stopped the parade. Police officers roared orders, but the local man stood still, looking for something. When the cops had yelled themselves hoarse, Tehan dramatically motioned for the car and yelled, "Bring on that automobile! What you holding up the parade for? Get in here ahead of this band and hurry it up."

The police stared in silence. Then the crowd parted and the Peerless rolled out into line. Once in the parade the rest was easy.

FATAL ACCIDENTS ARE PREVENTABLE.

At least 50 per cent. of the deaths due to accident in this country are preventable, according to Prof. Fisher of Yale. An analysis made of accidents occurring in Greater New York, involving 173 deaths and 250 injuries, showed that upward of 90 per cent. of these were due to utter carelessness, which may in turn be attributed to the failure of the general public to understand or practice "safety-first" principles.

With this showing in statistical form at its back, the Safety First Society of Greater New York is now fully embarked on a campaign for greater safety, and the elimination as much as possible of the economic waste represented in inefficient methods of handling traffic.

MOTORCYCLE SHOW.

The Motorcycle Manufacturers' Association has decided to stage an independent motorcycle show next January in New York City. A committee has been appointed to go ahead with the plans for such a show, as the motorcycle men feel that they have outgrown being mere "accessories" to the automobile shows. A similar separate show has been run at Chicago during the past two years, but conditions at New York, therefore, seemed to work against such a plan.

Some Climb.

SANTA ANA CANYON ROAD NOW OPEN TO BIG BEAR.

THE heaviest April snowstorm in history and subsequent high streams in Santa Ana Canyon made a blockade against entrance into Big Bear Valley from the south side of the San Bernardino range until late last month. Three big White trucks of the Bear Valley Transportation Company buffeted the swollen crossings of the Santa Ana and climbed the gullied grade last week.

Pine Knot Lodge, the Mecca of sportsmen, was reached after a struggle. One car was forced to drop out. The high waters at the first ford penetrated the cylinders and two heads were blown out, rendering the car useless and blocking the crossing.

The blowout occurred in midstream, and more than two hours were consumed in "snaking" the heavy car out, so that the rest could pass.

In the party which made the trip were Manager Bettinger of Pine Knot Lodge, George W. Wilder, Dr. A. C. Cameron, H. H. Garstin, J. H. Fisher, George Clyde and others.

During the winter months access to the valley was only by the desert route through Victorville and up the grade on the north side of the range.

Supplies in Bear Valley got low and caretakers and others in the lake camps saw near-starvation ahead if provisions were not sent through in some manner in a short time. For weeks men worked at the crossings filling up holes and removing heavy boulders that had washed down. Then on May 13 the resort owners and the Bear Valley Transportation Company essayed the climb.

At the present time the roads both from the desert side and up the Santa Ana Canyon grade are passable to the average automobile, the water in the streams having receded so rapidly in the past week that every one can be negotiated with little difficulty where the driver has the nerve to take the ford on a run.

Beginning this week a daily stage is to operate the regular summer schedule with a running time of four and a half hours, leaving San Bernardino at 9:30 o'clock, Redlands at 11:05 and arriving at Bear Valley at 5 p.m. At Clark's ranch, the half-way house, luncheon is provided. The ranch is 5000 feet in elevation and is noted for its scenic environs.

Bear Valley is about forty miles direct northeast of San Bernardino and is surrounded by towering mountains, the highest and most accessible being San Gorgonio, better known as Grey Back, which is 11,400 feet in elevation. Mt. San Bernardino and the Sugar Loaf are more than 10,000 feet high. The country about the lake is heavily wooded, mostly of big pines, and the fishing is excellent. The lake is seven miles long.

In addition to Pine Knot Lodge, Knight's, owned and operated by Gus Knight, and the Swastika, managed by Mrs. J. M. Stocker of Redlands, are the principal resorts.

FROM THE FACTORIES.

The escape of Gen. Blanco, Mexican rebel, with four Firestone non-skid tires on his automobile punctured by bullets from Federal rifles, induced Capt. Alfred Aloe, depot quartermaster of the United States army, at Galveston, Tex., to substitute Firestone solid tire and rim equipment to all army trucks within his jurisdiction; he believing that changes can be made as quickly in case of injury, with less chance of tires being put out of commission by flying bullets.

Moline-40 cars are now sold for $1550, a reduction of $400 in price having been announced in order to clear factory space for building the Moline-Knight models. The model so reduced is a five-passenger, fully-equipped vehicle.

Motor trucks, motor fire equipment and taxicabs are being sold heavily by the White Company of Cleveland. Municipalities, contractors and department stores are among the larger buyers. Oil companies, brewers and meat packers also are prominent customers. Current sales for the quarter to such customers aggregate 539 commercial vehicles. Lord & Taylor, owners of a New York department store, are using taxicabs for the exclusive use of their customers.

San Francisco, New York and Stockholm, three cities by no means to be considered as neighbors, are all supplied with United States "nobby tread" tires through the medium of their prominent taxicab companies.

CHICAGO-BOSTON RUN.

Entry blanks for the Chicago to Boston non-stop run are to be issued on approval by the American Automobile Association. It has now been definitely decided to put up the Glidden trophy as the main prize, and this will be offered to the winner in the first class, consisting of registered stock cars listing at over $1200. For the second class, cars listing at $1200 or under, the National trophy is offered, and for the third-class, consisting of non-stock cars entered by private owners, any price, the Anderson trophy is offered. In addition, those contestants who desire them can secure certificates of economy attesting the fuel consumption in miles per gallon, as officially determined by the technical committee. Certificates of merit will be awarded to every car finishing the run without stoppage of the motor. The run will require approximately sixty-five hours, starting from Chicago at 2 o'clock Monday, June 29, and reaching Boston 12 o'clock July 2. All competing cars must maintain a running schedule of twenty miles an hour between sunrise and sunset, fifteen miles an hour between sunset and sunrise the first night and eighteen miles an hour the other nights. To accommodate relief drivers and observers, a special train will accompany the run, with sleepers, baggage car and dining car. This will stop at all controls, to allow change of crews.

HONOR TO JOY.

Henry B. Joy, who has just been elected a director of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, is president of the Packard Motor Company, and also president of the Lincoln Highway Association, to which his active business methods have given much of its success. Previous business as an official of the Grand Trunk Railway, Peninsular Sugar Refining Company, Fort Street Union Depot Company, Peninsular Company and other enterprises has given him experience and breadth of view destined to be of much value in his new capacity.

CAPACITY DOUBLED.

By an ingenious rearrangement of the block-testroom, Studebaker efficiency engineers have doubled its capacity to turn out motors for the Studebaker "Six." This room now has stands for seventy-five motors, each of which receives a run of six hours.

AUTOMOBILE MAN HAS IDEAS ON TRAFFIC LA

SANE automobile laws that will curb the speedster and make touring safer is the aim of Earle Y. Boothe, agent for the National, Lewis "Six" and Marion. After studying the city ordinances, Boothe agrees that they will cover the present needs, but says we need to safeguard the public as well as the motorist.

There is no desire on the part of the National agent to change the existing laws, but he would make their scope greater. He has no sympathy with the scorcher. He would not extend clemency to the man who has been before the police a number of times on complaint of citizens and property owners whose lives have been endangered.

Only recently Boothe had occasion to take an autoist to task because of his negligence. He warned the motorist against breaking the ordinances and found the FOREIGN trade in American motor cars continues to increase, as shown by reports of the United States Department of Commerce. TORY OF THE LITTLE FORD TOLD IN DETAIL.

Automobile Editor of "The Times" Spends Two Days at Local Assembling Plant and Learns Many Interesting Facts About the Small Car With More Than Half Million Owners.

BY AD G. WADDELL.

[illegible] acres of floor space are devoted to the manufacture of Ford automobiles in Los Angeles.

The local branch is located at Seventh and Santa Fe avenue.

There are 282 men employed at the plant and 185 of these are in the mechanical departments.

The pay roll amounts to within a few dollars of $20,000 monthly.

Between 800 and 900 cars are built each month.

There are enough parts on hand at the Los Angeles plant to build [illegible] cars.

There are seventeen other Ford assembling plants in the United States and [illegible] American branches.

The factories are in Detroit, Ford, Ont., Can., and Manchester, Eng.

There are fourteen foreign assembling plants.

There are 500,000 model T Fords in use throughout the world, and it is estimated that 16,406 of these are in California and Arizona.

THE REASON.

By shipping the parts here and assembling the cars, just about $7 is saved in freight per car. This barely pays for the assembling. The four-story building was not built here to save freight for the Ford Motor Company but to insure the Ford output. With one central factory putting out 1400 or 1500 cars a day, a tie-up of the railroads would disrupt the entire machine. A shortage of freight cars would block the factory as there would be no place to store the machines as they came out of the [illegible]room.

To shut down and lay the men off would wreck the system of the works. Henry Ford is prepared for such an emergency.

The Ford Motor Company has branches throughout the country where parts for thousands of machines are stored and the parts assembled to meet the demand of the territory. If all the railroads into Detroit were tied up tomorrow, the local Ford plant could run on without a hitch for three or four months.

THE START.

The first move in the building of a Ford is to rivet the running-board hangers to the frame. Two men perform the operation in just fifteen seconds. The axles are then placed. While the motor is being set, the wheels are put on.

This is termed "rough" assembling and is done in the basement of the building on East Seventh street. The car is then put on the elevator and carried to the third floor, where it is rolled onto a channel-iron track. Here it gets the gas tank, muffler and muffler pipe. The spark plugs are placed. Oil is put in the motor and the running parts are greased. Each part is put on by separate workmen as the car passes their stations on the channel-iron track.

The dash is assembled on the side. It is sent down a runway beside the track and takes on the coils, lamp brackets, horn, wiring, steering column and then the wheel.

The assembled dash is then placed on the car which has taken on the [illegible] since leaving the greaser's station. Water and gasoline are then put in. The machine then passes a checker who makes an inspection to see that all is on the car that the specifications call for. A heavy chain is dropped and the car goes on to the elevator.

On the fourth floor the machine is run off the elevator and onto an electric tread mill. The wheels are clamped. The tester throws the clutch and the motor turns over for the first time.

SHE BREATHES.

After a few seconds the car is backed off the tread mill with an automatic jack and the tester runs it from the room on its own power. If there is nothing that needs adjustment it is then sent into the finishing room.

Here the running-boards are placed. The fenders go on and the hood covers the engine.

The bodies are upholstered, assembled and finished on the fifth floor. They are sent down to meet the car on the floor below as it comes up. The body, with top attached, is put on after the hood. Next comes the wind shield and the Ford is complete.

With all the room at the plant, the quarters are crowded. An awning has been constructed on the roof under which several hundred bodies in the rough are stored.

ALWAYS FORWARD.

From the first move in the process of assembling, the car moved forward. Lines are painted on the basement floor, which the car follows to the elevator at the north end of the building. The car is backed onto the elevator and comes off head on at the third floor.

The track followed on this floor leads the car onto the south elevator [illegible]. On the next floor it comes [illegible] and the rear wheels go on the testing-room tread mill. Not an inch of space is wasted and not an unnecessary move is made.

A great feature of the plant is the service department. The first and second floors of the building are devoted to this branch of the business. From seventy-five to 100 cars are turned out of the service department [illegible].

When an owner drives in, he orders what he wants done to the car and turns it over to an attendant, who gives him a slip like a hat check. If he does not know what the car needs, the trouble is diagnosed by an expert, who is constantly on duty on the ground floor.

The small adjustments are made at one end of the ground floor room. This is called "dinging." If the car needs a general overhauling or has some trouble that will require more than a few minutes, the machine is taken up to the second floor.

The parts are stored in unit piles along the route followed by the car from the basement, up through the building and back down to the shipping platform. When one pile of parts is broken, it is used up and replaced, while the next stack of material is being thrown into cars.

Throughout the building there are iron columns at regular intervals. Four of these mark the bounds of a bay and each bay is numbered. The superintendent has a map of the building in his office and knows at all times just how many parts are stored in each bay.

PAINTING MACHINE.

The wheels are stored in one section of the fourth floor. These are painted by machinery and it takes just eleven seconds to paint a Ford wheel.

The tires are stored at one end of the wheel department and to save space, thousands of wheels are stored inside the tires.

Fenders, running boards and hoods are painted in wholesale lots. These are dipped in a large vat of enamel paint and swung out on hangers to drain. The drippings are run back into the paint tanks. The fenders are then placed in a large kiln where they are baked at 500 degrees.

The bodies are finished on the fifth floor.

Each service job is given a number which is carried on every part handled. When the car reaches the second floor, the defective parts are taken out and sent to separate departments.

If the motor needs attention, it first goes to the dissembler. The transmission, bearings, cylinders, crank case and spark plugs all go to different departments. The mechanics in the service department as in the assembling-rooms, are specialists. One man does just one thing and does it well.

Often men are changed to different jobs for the purpose of giving them a wider range of experience, but when a man is on a job, that is the job he has to do.

When the parts are repaired, they are all sent to the assemblers. The rear axles come in, then the magneto, the transmission, cylinders, radiator and the rest of the parts work to the side of the house, where they are collected and replaced in the car.

WASH GAME.

All service jobs that total more than $10 call for the car to be washed and polished without cost to the owner. As soon as the car is finished, one of the time keepers figures the charge, the bill is rendered immediately and the owner is notified that his car is ready.

When he arrives his order is presented and the car delivered. No car may leave the shop without a passport in the form of the order, signed by the shop foreman.

On the ground floor, where the cars are parked, a system is used whereby fifty-five machines are stored in a small space, and any one may be driven out without moving but one other car. There is not enough room in this main garage for all the cars that come in the factory, and the yard is used for the overflow.

The service department is interesting from many angles. The equipment is of the latest and the organization is just about as near perfect as can be found. The company has installed instruments for the handling of the parts which gives the men a great advantage.

TAB ON MEN.

Automatic wrenches, air valve grinders, Ford coil testers, cylinder reborers and patent rebabbiting machines are all found in the equipment of the service department on the second floor.

The men who build the Ford here are all local men with the exception of B. L. Graves the manager. He is a graduate of the Detroit factory.

Every man employed by the company is looked up by a set of experts. The manager knows just how much each man has in the bank, how old his wife is, where he lives and if his kids rock Chinese peddlers. Not only does the company look into the private life of the employee at the start of his Ford career, but his habits are known at all times and he is encouraged to save and provide for his family. Only married men are employed at the plant now.

As showing the extremes to which some people will go in choosing car equipment, a New York woman of fashion recently purchased a limousine with four specially-made sets of upholstery covers to match her motoring gowns.

Over 1000 students from Washington and Jefferson College, Washington county, Pennsylvania, spent a day the past week working on the roads, under the supervision of County Commissioners and the department of road supervision.

Automobile licenses issued by Pennsylvania during the first four months of the year numbered 123,000, which is within 6000 of the total number issued in 1913. The fees collected so far total $905,827, and it is expected that this year the amount collected will be well over $1,000,000.

The process of cleaning motor cylinders of carbon deposits by a flame fed with oxygen and nourished from the carbon deposit itself has been so popularly adopted in France that nearly every garage and a number of private owners of more than one vehicle have installed the equipment for employing it.

The Fire Chief of Joliet, Ind., has requested the City Council to buy a triple-combination motor-driven pumping engine at a cost of $8000, and a motor-driven combination chemical and hose wagon at $5000. He asserts these would displace eight horses now too old for service and would save $150 a month to the city, besides doubling the efficiency of the fire department.

Brakes for the front wheels of automobiles are viewed as among the construction features which sooner or later may perhaps become generally adopted, taking the place of the brake on the transmission, where this is still used, and of one of the sets of brakes on the rear wheels, especially of the exterior set, where only wheel brakes are employed.

Garages and repair shops will be discussed at the next meeting of the Motor Truck Club of America, June 17, at the Automobile Club of America, in New York. Matters pertaining to the efficient and profitable administration of such establishments will be discussed, while the current abuses of the trade will be analyzed with a view to improving conditions.

It is now probable that the so-called "Little Glidden" tour, the annual event run around Iowa, will cover a route from Des Moines to Sioux City, Council Bluffs and return, a distance of about 600 miles. The start is scheduled for late in June, so that the tourists will reach Sioux City in time for the 300-mile race there July 4. About a week will be consumed in the tour.

Some definite action that will result in the passing of a practical good roads bill is expected from Congress at this session by the American Automobile Association. Congress is overwhelmingly in favor of good roads legislation, and the fact that this is election year is an additional reason why the passage of a bill is to be expected, if for nothing else than pleasing the rural constituency.

Cleveland's automobile club is planning to extend its quarters. With the increase in membership to 2100, and the moving of the office of the secretary of the Ohio State Automobile Association to Cleveland, the club has found itself crowded for room.

COUNT YOUR ROLL BEFORE BUYING CAR, SAYS LORD.

HARRY LORD, distributor of the Maxwell cars, tells how to please yourself in buying motor vehicles.

Suit your pocketbook, keeping within its limits. Buy a car—not a makeshift.

Consider the upkeep, recollecting that the weight increases this item.

Look for simplicity and reliability, if you are to operate the car yourself. Remember that the amateur motorist subjects the car to much wear and tear.

Think, also, of the responsibility of the organization back of the car, assuring yourself that you will be able to procure parts surely and quickly, on liberal terms. Use your best judgment, with these considerations in mind, and you should not be disappointed.

LOCAL MEN TO RIDE JUNK TIRES TO SAN FRANCISCO.

BRUNO SEIBEL and Vic Fechheimer are to leave this city tomorrow for San Francisco in a Studebaker equipped with "junk" tires. They have contracted for the Northern California agency for the Fisher Manufacturing Company of this city, and are going north to establish the branches.

Seibel and Fechheimer bought a set of discarded tires from a junk dealer at 6 cents a pound to use on their car during the trip to demonstrate the rim-grip sub-casings made by their company.

The route to be followed by the Studebaker is to take in Bakersfield, Fresno, Stockton, Sacramento and San Francisco. The trip is to be made in easy stages, for the purpose of demonstrating the sub-casings along the way.

BUNDY LOSES TO E. BARKER.

Smashing Drives Carry the Victory.

McCormick Too Much for Al Barber.

Miss McCall Captures Ladies' Title.

BY WILLIAM M. HENRY.

There is a long flaming streak reaching all the way from the first round to the finals of the Southern California handicap tennis tourney.

This gorgeous mark is painted by the titian locks of Mr. Erie Barker, who walloped the veteran, Tom Bundy, and the sensational youngster, Rufus Brent, in the same day and now has only Ed McCormick standing between him and the cup.

Some say that he played over his head, but be that as it may, he sent crashing drives from the back line or ambled genially up to the net and ended matters with a terrific 200-pound smash with equal grace and ease.

YOUTH SERVED.

It was a very bad day for the veterans, not a single one of them getting as far as the semi-final round, in which division Erie Barker, Ed McCormick, Allyn Barber and Rufus Brent found themselves about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Bundy-Barker match was a great affair in which the veteran's lack of practice stood out glaringly as soon as the youngster got over his stage fright; Bundy found himself absolutely unable to combat the smashing drives of his husky young opponent, who, time after time, sent cannon shots crashing through the veteran's defense like cobble-stones through a paper sack.

The veteran took the first set without a struggle, his opponent gathering in one lone game.

In the second set, with the score in games 3-2 in his favor, the youngster broke through Bundy's service by means of some first-class driving and a couple of doubles.

Bundy replied by taking Barker's service on outs by the somewhat agitated Mr. Barker, but the youngster soon settled down and ran the set out at 6-3 by means of some nicely-placed drives.

BARKER IMPROVES.

The last set showed a big improvement by Barker, who had gained confidence and began to take a few more chances. With the games at two all his foot slipped momentarily and he dropped his service, letting Bundy get a 4-2 lead on him.

A new racquet proved his salvation and he ran out on four straight games.

Barker's handicap was 15 every other game and should not have been too much for Bundy, but the veteran was sadly off form and as the game progressed his eye apparently got worse and worse while Barker improved with age.

The wind was a little too strong for the best kind of tennis and insufficient umpiring, which caused half a dozen points to be played over, detracted from the class of the match.

GREAT MATCH.

The best tennis of the day came in the other semi-final when those two ancient rivals and compatriots, Ed McCormick and Allyn Barber, got together with the usual result—McCormick won after a hard three-set match which provided enough real tennis for a whole day.

McCormick made the semi-final round with an easy win over Ed Dietrich, the well-known marathon runner, while Barber only got there after a smashing battle with Simpson Sinsabaugh in which the veteran and the boy stood on opposite sides of the net and catapulted slam after slam at each other, with honors in favor of the youth.

Barber started out the match with McCormick like a whirlwind, driving and placing his shots beautifully, while Mac seemed afraid of himself and unwilling to take a chance. Barber ran the set out at 6-3 and looked like a sure winner.

Barber captured the first game of the second set when Mac continued to smash into the net, but suddenly the taller youth took a brace and ran off five games so fast that the crowd, including Barber, were swept off their feet by the sheer force of his attack.

Instead of laying back and driving, McCormick took the net and in spite of some really wonderful "gets" by Barber, seemed to be complete master of the situation.

BARBER RALLIES.

With McCormick needing only one more game to take the set, Barber made a valiant attempt to pull up, and by some great tennis got away with three games in a row, but the superiod steadiness of the older boy told, and he ran the set out at 6-4.

After a few minutes' rest they came out for the third and deciding set, but everything was McCormick. The square-shouldered racqueter was playing like a fiend, dropping his shots just out of reach of Barber's frantic efforts, and rty as he would, Barber was forced to be content with a single game, McCormick winning the set and match, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Miss Beatrice Burnham struggled through two matches in the morning, only to fall before the clockwork steadiness, aided and abetted by a substantial handicap, of Miss Joan McCall in the final round.

REAL CLASS.

Miss McCall displayed ability that did not warrant a handicap of ½ 30 and her nice placement shots were too much for Miss Burnham.

Miss McCall kept Miss Burnham on the back line, where she could do the least damage, and by playing the side lines with good judgment, was able to pull out a victory, 6-4, 7-5.

Both young ladies showed a better backhand than a forehand drive and each pulled off some sensational "gets."

SUMMARY.

Ladies' singles — Miss Burnham (½ 15) defeated Miss Johnson (½ 15) 1-6, 6-4, 6-3; Miss Burnham (½ 15) defeated Miss McNaughton (15,) 6-4, 7-5; Miss McCall (½ 30) defeated Miss Burnham (½ 15,) 6-4, 7-5.

Fourth round — McCormick (scr.) defeated Dietrich (½ 30,) 6-2, 6-1; Brent (½ 30) defeated Variel (scr.,) 6-4, 6-0; E. Barker (½ 15) defeated Bundy (scr.,) 1-6, 6-3, 6-4; Barber (½ 15 defeated Sinsabaugh (scr.,) 4-6, 8-6, 6-4.

Semi-finals—E. Barker (½ 15) defeated Brent (½ 30,) 6-3, 6-3; McCormick (scr.) defeated Barber (½ 15,) 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Finals between Barker and McCormick will be played at the Y.M.C.A. court next Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

SCHEDULE MADE FOR NEXT YEAR.

AMERICAN GAME SCHOOLS IN TWO SECTIONS.

Major and Minor Divisions of High Schools' Schedule Drawn Up for 1914 Season—All Teams Look Forward to a Big Year—Many Schools in League.

The muddled American football situation was cleared up yesterday, when delegates from all the Southern California High Schools met at the Y.M.C.A., and divided the schools into two sections. The major section will consist of Long Beach, Santa Ana, San Diego, Shaffey Union, Whittier and Pasadena High Schools. The minor section will contain all High Schools playing the American game and not included in the major section.

This new order of things will do away with many of the long jumps and save the smaller schools financial trouble when the books are balanced at the end of the season. The winner of the major section will play the winner of the minor section for the State American championship, as practically no other schools are playing the American game.

The championship in each section will be decided on a percentage basis. A forfeited game will count as a defeat in the official percentage column.

The entrance of the U.S.C. freshmen team into the High School field put a bunch of good games on the schedule that would, otherwise, have been missing. The freshman team will play at least one game with all the High Schools of the major section, although they are not in the league.

All the delegates reported splendid prospects for good teams next year and they look forward to one of the greatest seasons American football has ever had in the High School ranks. Long Beach loses only one man and they will have a powerful eleven. San Diego loses Hyde and Carson, both back-field men, but they have a bunch of good men to replace the passing stars. Coach "Dutch" Shutt came to the meeting with a long face and a pessimistic view of Chaffey's chances for next season, as he lost six men by graduation. "Dutch" always was a cheerless sort of fellow, but he generally sends a rattling good winning team on the field when the season rolls around. Whittier, Santa Ana and Pasadena look strong from pre-season dope.

The list below gives an idea of the big games scheduled among the High Schools for next fall.

October 3—San Diego vs. Army and Navy, at San Diego; Pasadena vs. U.S.C. freshmen, at Pasadena; Long Beach vs. Whittier at Long Beach.

October 10—Long Beach vs. Alhambra (practice game,) at Long Beach; Santa Ana vs. Army and Navy (practice game,) at Santa Ana; Pasadena vs. Whittier, at Whittier; Chaffey vs. San Diego, at San Diego.

October 17—Santa Ana vs. San Diego, at San Diego; Whittier vs. U.S.C. preps (practice game,) at U.S.C.; Pasadena and Long Beach have open dates.

October 24—Long Beach vs. San Diego, at San Diego; Santa Ana vs. Whittier, at Whittier; Pasadena vs. Chaffey, at Chaffey.

October 31—Long Beach open date; Santa Ana vs. Venice (practice game,) at Santa Ana; Chaffey vs. Whittier, at Whittier; San Diego, open date.

November 7—Pasadena vs. San Diego, at San Diego; Santa Ana and Whittier, open dates.

November 14—Long Beach vs. Chaffey, at Chaffey; Santa Ana vs. Pasadena, at Santa Ana; San Diego vs. U.S.C. freshmen, at San Diego; Whittier, open date.

November 21—San Diego vs. Venice (practice game,) at Venice; all others open dates.

November 26—Long Beach vs. Pasadena, at Pasadena; Chaffey vs. Santa Ana, at Santa Ana; Whittier vs. San Diego, at San Diego.

COUNTRY CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE first thirty-six-hole medal play in the Los Angeles Country Club championship was played on the Beverly course yesterday. Jack Jevne, the title holder, and Norman Macbeth, the ex-champion, tied for first place with 151. Jevne made a 74 in the morning round against Macbeth's 76. Macbeth reduced his afternoon score by a stroke, while Jevne increased his by three.

There is little doubt that the laurels lie between these two players, although there are a number of serious contestants. E. S. Armstrong, for instance, who usually plays within a stroke or two of par, but who, on this occasion made consistent but depressing scores—82 and 81, total, 163. And R. D. Lapham, the hero of a hundred triumphs, 179. Began with a 91 in the morning round, looked humorously rueful, and made the dazzling improvement of three strokes in the afternoon.

And this while E. H. Bagby achieved 158—a 78 in the morning and 80 in the afternoon.

There were twenty-three entries altogether and the severe discipline of medal play is proving all that was required of it by the committee. Another thirty-six holes today will decide who is the 1914 champion of the Los Angeles Country Club.

The scores also qualified for a sweepstake, which was won by Dr. W. H. Spinks with a net 73 on 12 handicap, Macbeth's 75 being the best gross.

COMING BANTAM BOUT RECALLS OLD-TIMERS.

Coulon-Williams Go Tuesday Night Promises to Be Most Interesting Battle Since George Dixon Beat Willis—Dixon, Barry and Coulon Cleverest in Peanut Class.

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

THE coming contest for the bantamweight championship of the world, that takes place at the Vernon arena next Tuesday night, has created more interest than any contest in that class since George Dixon met and defeated Abe Willis, the Australian champion, in the old California Athletic Club in San Francisco years ago.

Dixon had beaten Nunce Wallace, the champion of England, in London and boxed a seventy-round draw with the famous Boston boxer, Cal McCarty, and later beat McCarty in twenty-two rounds. When he won from Willis in five rounds he became the world's bantamweight champion. Dixon then outgrew his class, and also won the championship in the featherweight class.

The little colored boy had about everything in the game, and never since that time, with the single exception of Jimmie Barry, has there been as clever a bantam as Johnny Coulon.

The next bunch of good bantams were Caspar Leon, Steve Flanagan, Jack Madden, Sammy Kelly and Barry.

Barry worked his way through the bantams and they were some tough bunch. When Barry started he only weighed 100 pounds and placed himself under the instructions of Harry Gillmore, father of Harry, Jr., who is well known in Los Angeles and former manager of Packy McFarland.

Under Gillmore's tutelage, he made rapid strides and up to 1894 he had forty-six battles to his credit, with a single decision against him. By that time he was boxing easily at 105 pounds and thought nothing of giving away weight to get a match.

Barry and Coulon are to be compared in many ways. Each is a good hitter and a clever boxer as well.

Billy Plimmer was at that time the English champion of the bantam class. A very clever and fast boxer, who once got a four-round decision over George Dixon. Plimmer was of the Jem Mace school.

Pedlar Palmer, the fourth champion, was easily defeated by Terry McGovern in one round after Palmer had made a great record for himself.

Terry McGovern easily tore his way through the bantams and soon developed into a featherweight and beat all in that class until he agreed to meet Young Corbett at 124 pounds and met his Waterloo.

Terry's record is well known to most of the followers of the boxing game.

After McGovern came Harry Forbes, another clever boxer, who made a wonderful record for himself and finally lost to Frank Niel, the San Francisco boxer, but at that time Forbes was about out of the game as a real champion.

After Forbes came Sammy Harris, Frankie Niel and Digger Stanley, the English champion, all of whom made good records in the bantamweight class.

Since these great boxers lost their titles, France has come out with a champion of that country in Charlie LeDoux, who was beaten here by Kid Williams.

Johnny Coulon, the latest champion of the bantam class, has been, up to the time of his recent sickness, in a class by himself. He is of the old school style of boxing, a combination of all the cleverness, the science, fast as lightning with his hands and feet and a great hitter as well. He might be considered in Joe Gans's class as a boxer and fighter; in fact, it is hard to look back and find any boxer who had it on Johnny in his class.

Like Jimmie Barry, the weight is easy for him; in fact, a catchweight.

Johnny Kid Williams has been coming to the front like a house afire of late, but he is more of the Kid Lavigne style in his milling, and lacks much of the science of that once great lightweight.

The coming contest between Coulon and Williams will be one of the greatest exhibitions ever seen between a fighter pure and simple and a fighter-boxer combined.

They Did It.

SAN FRANCISCO GIRLS MAKE RUN IN CHALMERS.

FOUR pretty maidens in a Chalmers "Six" drove in from San Francisco last week, having covered the entire trip without the aid of mere man.

The quartette consisted of Florence Plumley, Ethel Swinney, Lillian de Barr and Frances King. All are San Francisco girls. Miss Plumley drove every mile of the way, and when a horseshoe in the dust brought grief to one of the casings the girls made the necessary change and were soon on their way.

They drove to Monterey for the first night. The next day's drive was to San Luis Obispo. The third day brought them over the San Marcos Pass as far as Santa Barbara, and from there they made the run to Los Angeles.

After two days here they left for San Diego over the coast road.

Miss Plumley seemed to think she had done nothing unusual.

"Any girl could make the same trip," said the San Francisco maiden. "We were treated just fine all the way down and there wasn't a disagreeable incident.

"Of course, I suppose one must be sure of the car and know how to drive, as there is considerable hilly country.

"We did intend shipping the car back, but we have all had such a fine time that we have decided to drive back over the valley road by way of Bakersfield and Fresno."

Speedway Talk.

COLE DEALER RETURNS FROM EAST AFTER RACE.

ED F. HARRIS, manager of the local Cole agency, returned to Los Angeles from Indianapolis Thursday. He had intended remaining in the East for several weeks for the purpose of touring; but when he found that the new Cole models would reach Los Angeles sooner than at first expected, his plans were changed.

The Los Angeles man spent enough time in Indianapolis to see the 500-mile race, and he says Americans need not be ashamed of the showing made against the foreigners.

While Harris says the French drivers are all sports of the first water, he says our drivers had it on them in the matter of generalship. Barney Oldfield drove a conservative race with enough speed to make him the one great driver on the course.

According to the Cole dealer, the foreign cars should have it on the American racers. The Frenchmen spend from twelve to eighteen months building a car for a race. The American puts a car together and in a few weeks is ready to meet all comers.

When Barney, with a medium-priced car like the Stutz, was able to give the wonderful foreign racing creations a brush, the Americans are not the worst car builders and drivers in the world.

The little Maxwells come in for a lot of praise from Harris, and Walter M. Brown, the local Stutz agent, who managed Barney's pit, is said by the Cole man to be the dean of pit managers.

CUES AND CAROMS.

Professional billiardists of the Pacific Coast are to have an opportunity of playing among themselves for the three-cushion championship in July, according to the announcement of T. J. Nelms, made yesterday after arranging with Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company for the donation of an appropriate trophy.

The date set gives time for proper advertising throughout the Coast, and for the travel of non-resident experts who may wish to compete.

Eight well-known players are named as entries from this city, their strength alone being sufficient to ensure a contest worthy of the title and emblem. They are:

Jack Bayne, Arthur Selmour, Frank Kennison, E. B. Morse, Byron S. Gillette, George Kirkland, James Morley and George Banks.

Among the most interesting features of the tourney will be the entry of Morse, local amateur champion, into professional ranks, and the first appearance of the veteran Gillette in a set contest here.

Staged in a public hall, as contemplated, the schedule would require three weeks, with afternoon and evening games.

Statistics of various games show that there are more billiard players than participants in any other sport or pastime. In ethics and courtesy the game is also on a higher plane than any other form of active competition. Tables used in the United States number 240,000 with an annual consumption of 300,000 cues from one factory.

A prominent billiard enthusiast of Los Angeles offers to wager $1000 that Tom Hueston can beat any man in the world at the three important games of three-cushion, 18.1 balkline and pocket billiards, best two out of three to win.

Eastern Grand Circuit light harness races will begin at Detroit July 28.

MUSANTE BOOSTS BY TRIP IN HUP.

Frank Musante last week made a round trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco in a Hupmobile, making 1100 miles through fruits and produce sections, with never a miss of engine.

Gaviota Pass was negotiated with ease, though several disabled cars were passed on the grade, which Musante says his gauge registered as 32 per cent.

GIBBONS AND MURRAY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, June 6.—It was announced today that Mike Gibbons of St. Paul had been matched against Billy Murray of San Francisco, who claims championship honors as a middleweight pugilist. The contest is to be before the Stadium Athletic Club in New York June 18.

Three Indians Carrying Special Equipment Arrive at Local Ford Plant for Duty in Service Department Answering First-Aid Calls Sent in by Owners of Stalled Cars.

The motorcycle has invaded the automobile industry.

Last week three Indian motorcycles arrived at the local branch of the Ford Motor Company which were attached to the service department of the great plant.

The Ford Company has placed Indian motorcycles in service throughout the country and the three received here are but a small portion of the order placed with the Indian company.

These motorcycles are equipped especially for work in the service department of the automobile company. They are to be used for hurry calls where one mechanic will be able to adjust a machine.

Often a call comes in for service and a car is sent out with two men to start a car when the gas is off or some minor adjustment is necessary.

A saving of time and expense to the company and more efficient service for the owner is what the motorcycles are expected to produce.

Many inquiries have been made lately regarding the round-trip record to San Diego. The Chanslor and Lyon trophy for this record is still held by the Buick. Louis and Fred Nikrent drove the car and their time was 8hrs. 29m.

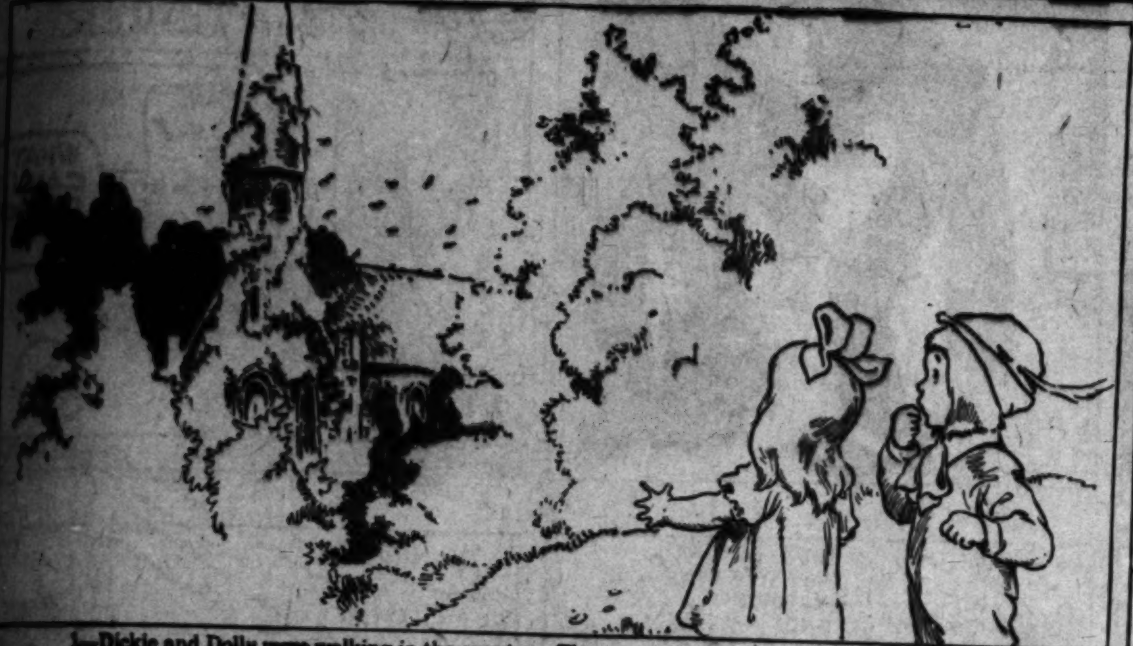
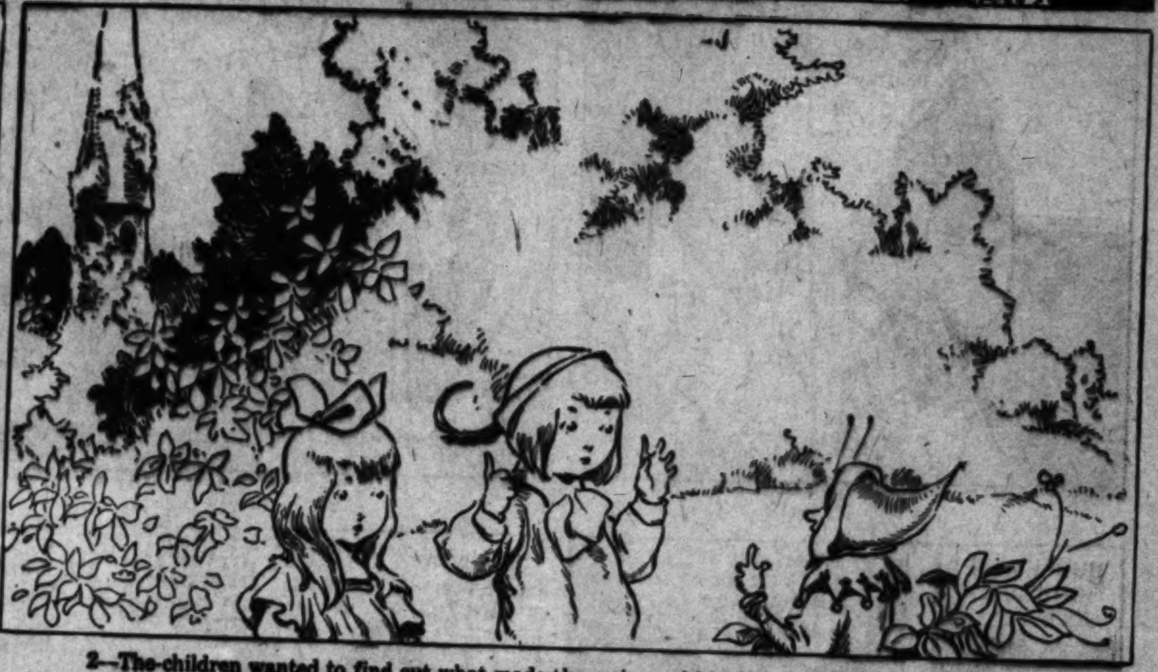
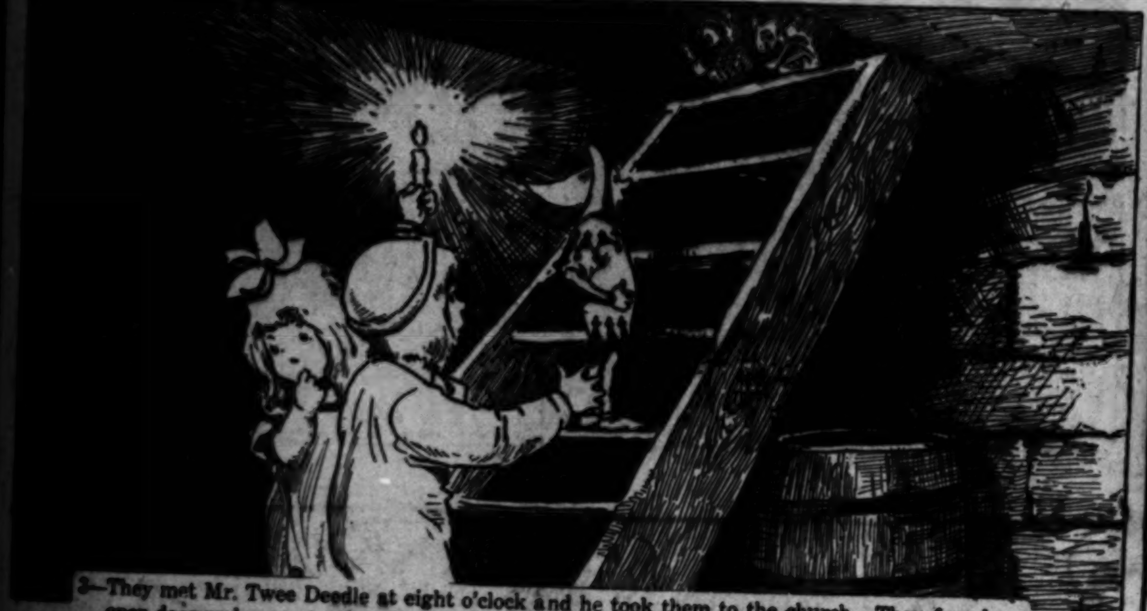
MR. TWEE DEEDLE.



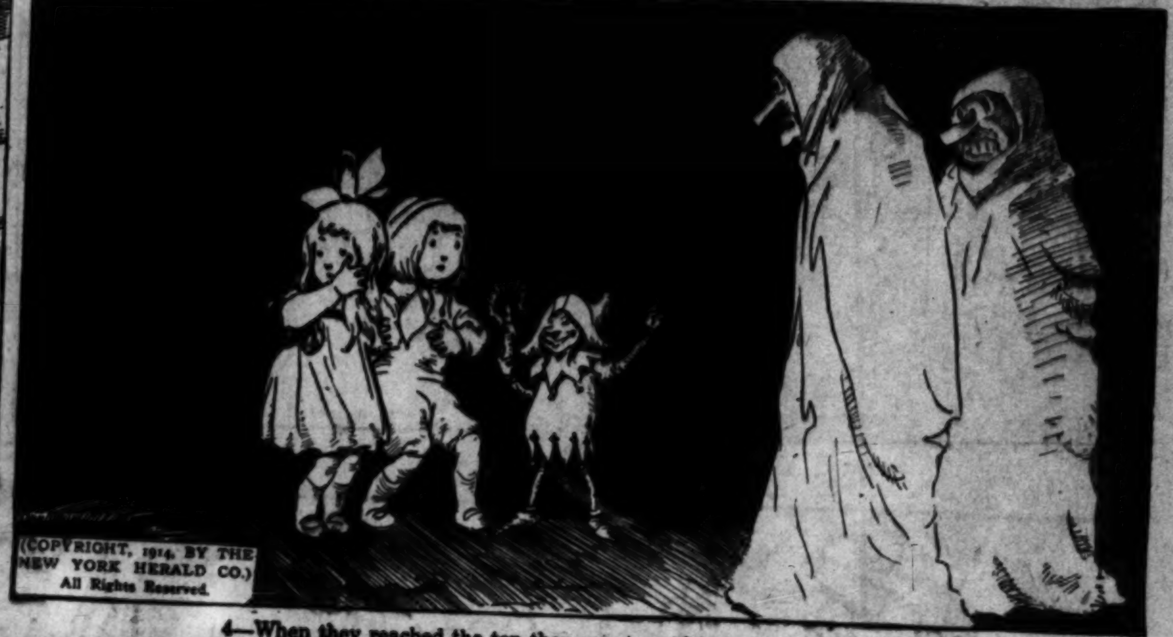
1—Dickie and Dolly were walking in the country. They came to an old church, which had been given up because strange noises were heard there at night and the people who heard them thought the church was haunted.



2—The children wanted to find out what made the noises which frightened the people, so Mr. Twee Deedle promised that he would take them through the church at night.

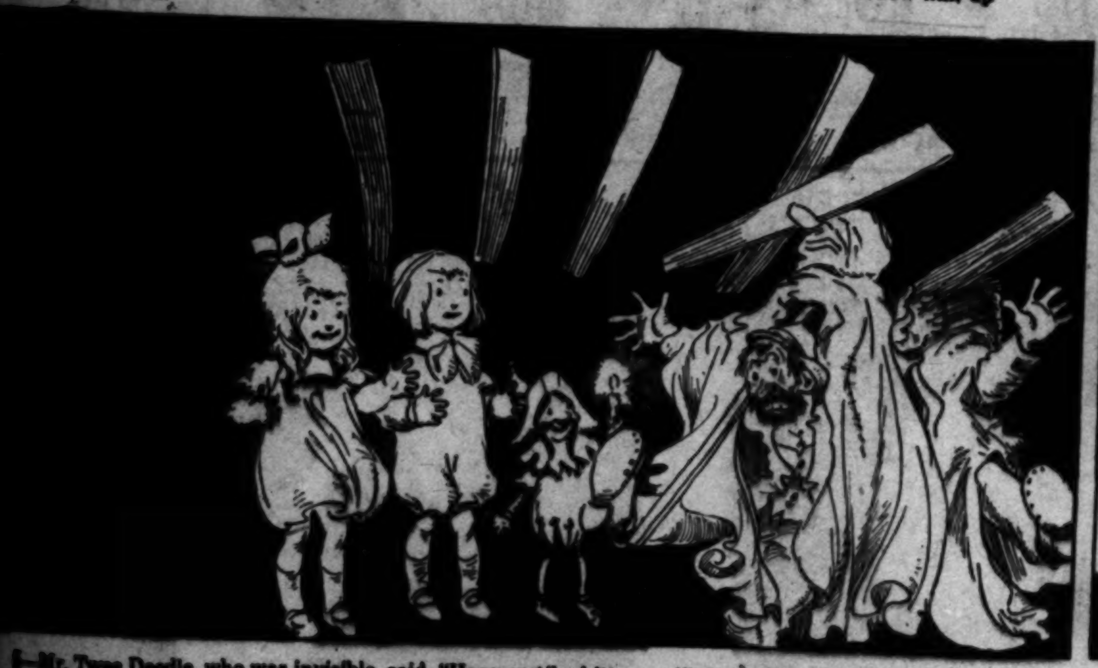


3—They met Mr. Twee Deedle at eight o'clock and he took them to the church. They found an open door and were starting upstairs when they heard the clanking of chains and deep groans. Above them they saw two comical faces. Mr. Twee Deedle motioned them to follow him up the stairs.

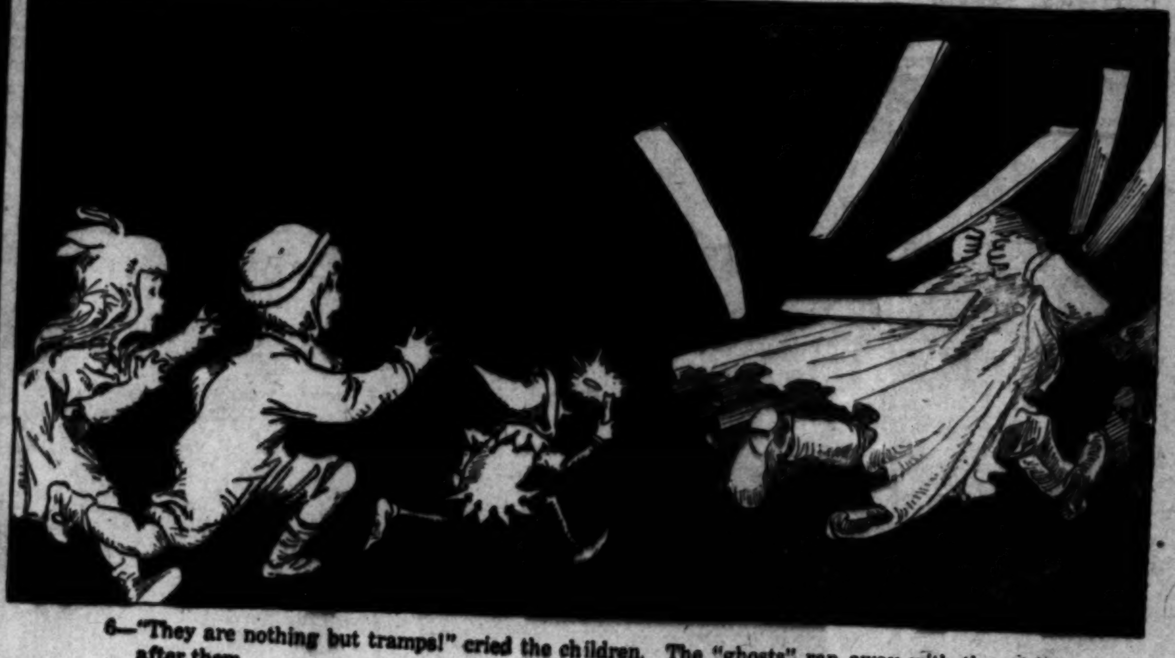


(COPYRIGHT, 1914, BY THE NEW YORK HERALD CO.) All Rights Reserved.

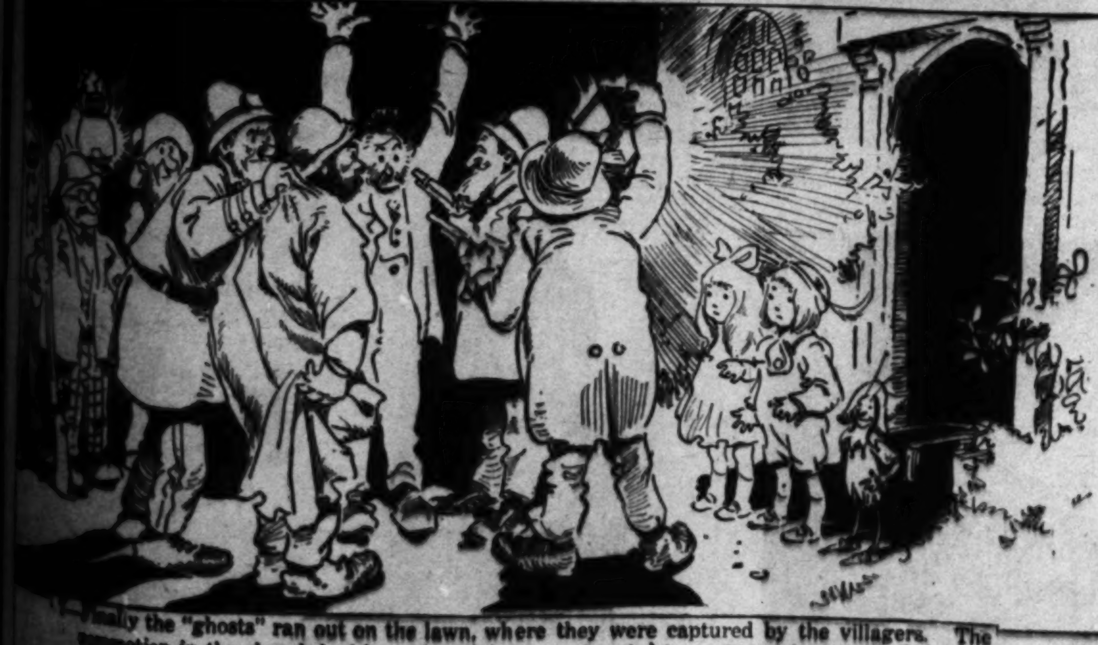
4—When they reached the top they saw two white robed figures. "Brrrrr, we're ghosts!" said the strange creatures.



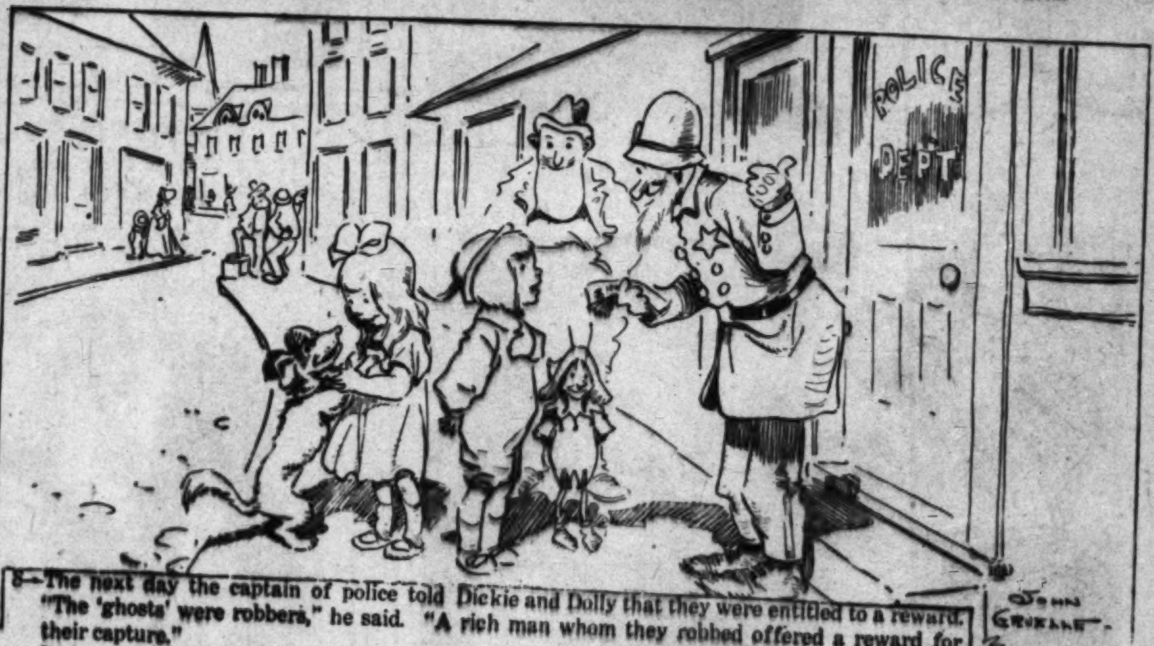
5—Mr. Twee Deedle, who was invisible, said, "Hoppupstik, hittemmalik," six times. Six boards flew up and began beating the ghosts. The false heads fell off the ghosts, who cried for mercy.



6—"They are nothing but tramps!" cried the children. The "ghosts" ran away with the sticks after them.



7—Finally the "ghosts" ran out on the lawn, where they were captured by the villagers. The commotion in the church had brought a large crowd to the door. The "ghosts" were taken to the jail and the children went home to bed.



8—The next day the captain of police told Dickie and Dolly that they were entitled to a reward. "The 'ghosts' were robbers," he said. "A rich man whom they robbed offered a reward for their capture."

Dickie and Dolly said that they did not want the reward, but that it could be used for fixing up the church so that the people could attend service again.

ZOTWOTS

The WOT RIDES

STORY AND PICTURES By Bob DEAN

"THE other day," said my little friend, bending industriously over her needlework, "a crew of Zotwots, having nothing to do, decided to take a nice long walk. Their little Jay-fowl, bursting with happiness, led the way singing in a mournful squawk:—

" 'Twas awful when the morning broke,
And found the Chink-a-doodle band
Grouped around about the spot—
The lonely spot upon the sand.'

"The Zotwots, keeping step to the tune, marched along talking of one thing and another, till crossing a field not far from the Spakrum they saw the Wot and two Slinks in the roadway saddling one of his Mukes. So they stopped and leaned on the fence to watch them, but the Wot and his Slinks were so intent on what they were doing they did not hear or see the Zotwots.

"When the Muke was saddled the Wot seemed in no hurry to mount. He scratched and scratched his head and eyed the Muke anxiously for a moment or two; then, looking suddenly at the Slinks, said:—'I am going to let one of you have the first ride—now, who wants to be first?' Each Slink instantly pointed to the other and squeaked, 'Let him have the first ride!'

"The Wot was plainly disappointed. He told the Slinks that unless they made up their minds at once he'd ride the Muke himself.

"The Slinks said they didn't care to ride, and the Wot wagged his finger at them and called them 'Fraidy-cats!' Then, as they sullenly hung their heads, he patted them on their backs and tried to coax them. Still they refused. So he stormed and blustered, shouting that he was ashamed of them—'Afraid to ride a nice Muke like that!'

"The Zotwots kept as still as possible. They knew the Wot was wild to ride the Muke, but was afraid to try till he knew it could be done with safety.

"The Jay-fowl, feeling sure he could not get into trouble while the Zotwots were near, became more and more excited. He edged nearer and nearer to the Wot until he finally stood staring up in his face with glistening eyes.

"The Slinks saw him first, and, pointing to him, exultingly squeaked, 'Here's the Jay-fowl! Let him have the first ride!'

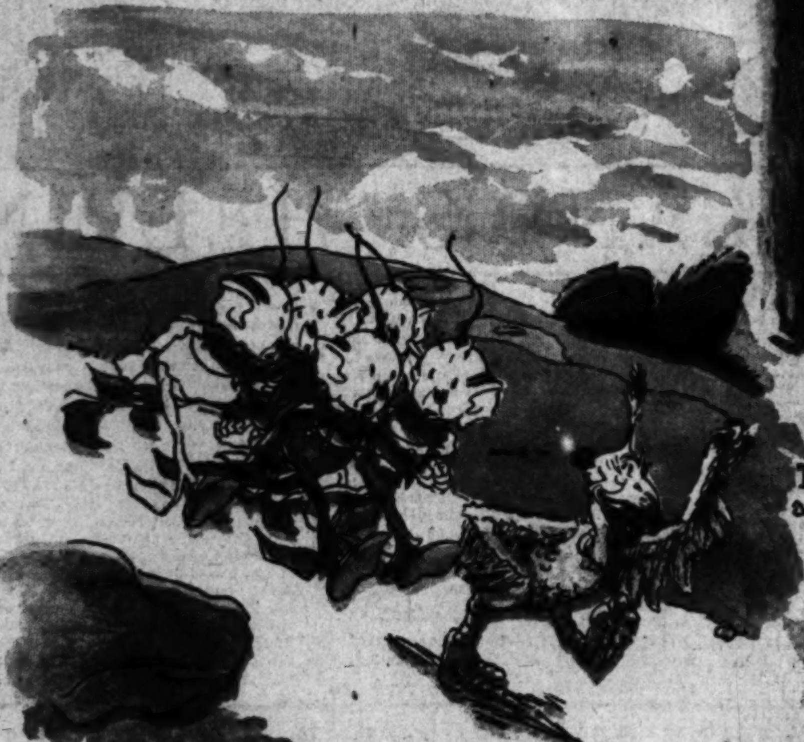
"The Wot looked down with a delighted grin and said, as he made a quick grab for him, 'Good idea! I'll make him ride the Muke! Catch him!' he shouted, as the Jay-fowl, startled by his sudden lunge, dodged. But the Slinks caught him in their arms and held him as he struggled and squawked.

"The Zotwots, at his cry, leaped forward, and the Slinks dropped him like a hot potato and scurried away.

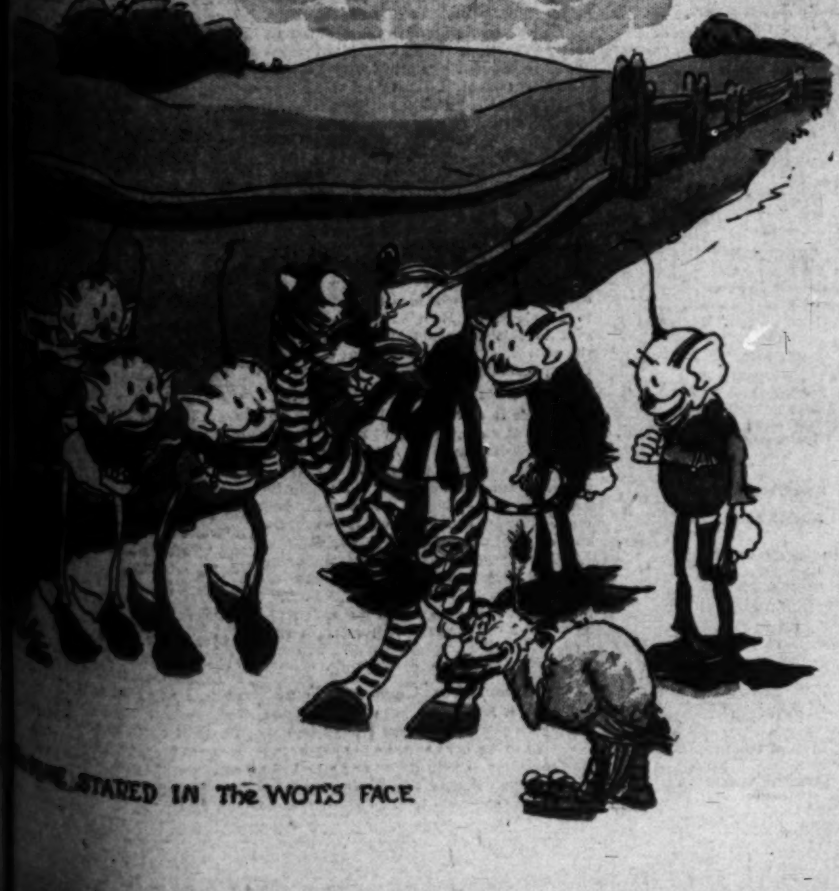
"Turning to the Wot, one Zotwot said, looking him straight in the eye:—'Your Wotness is going to take a ride?' 'Ye-y-yeyes!' he stuttered. 'What did you think I was going to do?'

" 'We thought you were afraid!' said another, and they all giggled.

" 'I'll show you if I'm afraid!' cried the Wot, eyeing the Muke, who stood very quiet, his head high and his tail proudly curled over his back. Then he patted his neck and the Muke purred so friendly he felt quite reassured. 'If one of you will give me a leg up,' he said, in his most Wottish manner, 'I'll show you how to ride a Muke!'



The ZOTWOTS WENT FOR A WALK and The JAY-FOWL LED The WAY, SINGING



[illegible] STARED IN The WOT'S FACE

"The Zotwots eagerly boosted him up, and jumped away, but the Muke never stirred. He stood with a dreamy look in his eyes, purring with contentment.

"The Wot glanced at the Zotwots with a proud smile, then shouted in a harsh voice:—'Git-up, Muke!'

The Muke snapped his head around and stared in the Wot's face, his eyes wide with surprise. Suddenly he began to tremble and yowled at the top of his voice.

"The Wot, instead of trying to calm the poor thing, reached up and tweaked his nose. With a skeek of pain and fear, he leaped straight up in the air. The Wot clutched his neck and hung on, while he whirled and leaped and kicked.

"The Wot tried frantically to get off, but the Muke twisted and turned and bucked so fast that he kept the Wot bouncing on and off his back like a rubber ball.

"Finally, when it began to look as if the Wot would be surely shaken to pieces, the Zotwots shoved a stick between the Muke's legs and tripped him up. As he fell on his head, the Wot slid to the ground in safety. He scrambled to his feet, and, without a glance at the Zotwots, ran toward the Spakrum as fast as he could go—and that's all there is to this story."

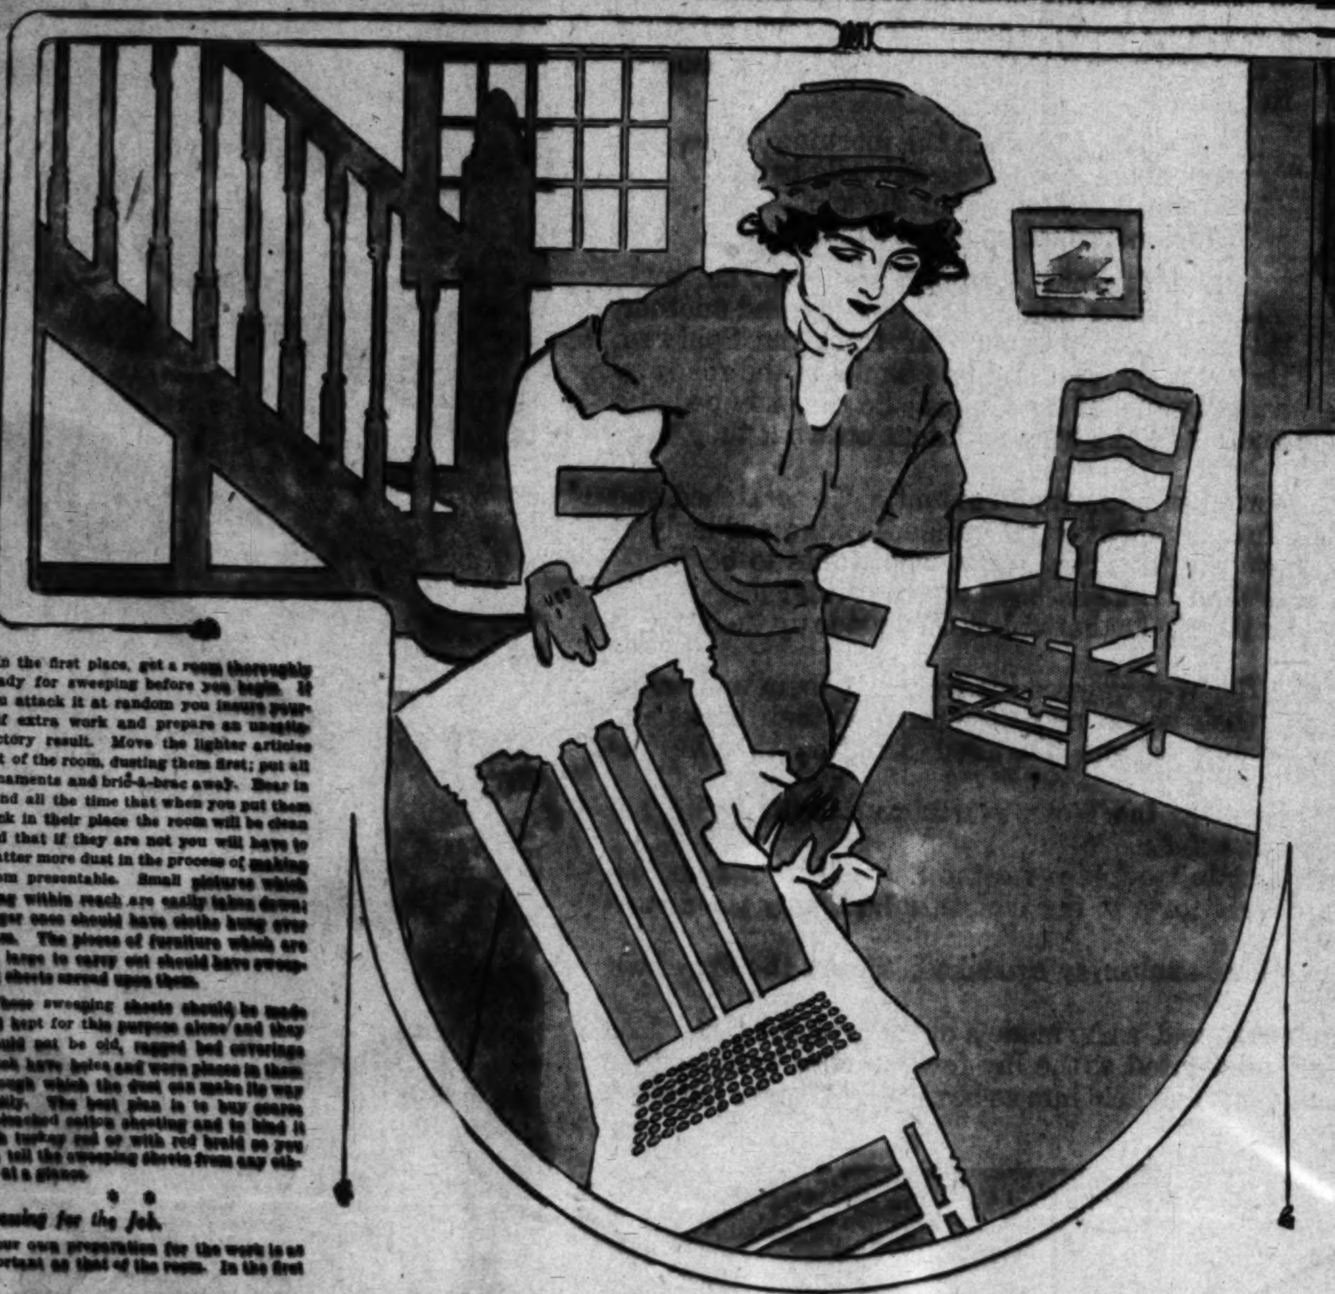
COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

HOW TO DUST A ROOM.



Do any real housekeepers nowadays use feather dusters? Of course, they are still seen on the stage, flourished around by ornamental parlor maids, the one of about as much service as the other. And a few days ago when I was waiting for a friend in a hotel drawing room I saw a man using a feather duster in the same old way, flirting it over the surface of the furniture and the frames of the pictures, apparently entirely satisfied he was doing his work perfectly and completely unaware of the fact he was simply scattering the dust from one place that it might settle in another.

But I repeat my question. Do any real housekeeper nowadays use feather dusters?

I see them on sale in the shops and somebody must buy them or they would not be there. I hope with all my heart they are purchased for the stage and for the man who dusts off the outside of a carriage or a motor car. They are assuredly of no value in the well kept home.

If the agitation over lurking and omnipresent germs had done no other good except to awaken the public to the perils of old fashioned methods of sweeping and dusting it would have served a good purpose. That agitation as much as anything else is responsible for the banishment of the feather duster. When housekeepers once grasped the idea that the dust they carelessly scattered about in their haphazard dusting was really floating matter alive with dangerous microbes they proceeded at once to reform methods. Now the cry everywhere is for the dustless duster, the one which will really take up the dust and allow the worker to remove it from her home instead of merely dispersing it.

Drafts Blow Dust About.

Even today the untrained sweeper and duster does not appreciate the importance of the work she does or of her way of doing it. We have all seen the careless sweeper who leaves both door and window open in the room where she is busy, scattering the dust all over the house by the draft which has swept across the piles she had gathered together. Everywhere the task is performed in the same manner by those who have never been taught better and to whom it has not occurred that they have found the wrong way of doing it. I know that the Cornerites as a class are trained housekeepers, but for the sake of the beginners who lack instruction in this line I would like to give a few directions I have found valuable.

In the first place, get a room thoroughly ready for sweeping before you begin. If you attack it at random you insure yourself extra work and prepare an unsatisfactory result. Move the lighter articles out of the room, dusting them first; put all ornaments and bric-à-brac away. Bear in mind all the time that when you put them back in their place the room will be clean and that if they are not you will have to scatter more dust in the process of making them presentable. Small pictures which hang within reach are easily taken down; larger ones should have cloths hung over them. The pieces of furniture which are too large to carry out should have sweeping sheets spread upon them.

These sweeping sheets should be made and kept for this purpose alone and they should not be old, ragged bed coverings which have holes and worn places in them through which the dust can make its way readily. The best plan is to buy coarse unbleached cotton sheeting and to bind it with turkey red or with red braid so you can tell the sweeping sheets from any others at a glance.

Dressing for the Job.

Your own preparation for the work is as important as that of the room. In the first place, have on easy shoes which will not tire your feet. This does not of necessity mean old, worn out shoes. I have known those which were so badly run down at the side and heel that the wearer went through more strain supporting herself on this out of plumb footing than she would have undergone in a new, stiff pair of boots. Be sure the shoes you wear fit comfortably, that your ankles are adequately sustained, and that you are not wearying yourself unnecessarily by tight or ill chosen footgear.

I think I am safe in taking it for granted that you are too sensible a woman to wear oversnug corsets about your housework or to bind yourself in tight sleeves and narrow belt. Your frock should be short enough to clear the floor well and made of some wash material that it may go into the tub when it needs it. It should also be loose enough to be easy, which does not imply that it should be an ugly, shapeless garment, but one cut with judgment and common sense. Your head should be covered with a comprehensive sweeping cap—not one of the boudoir variety, decked out with ribbons and the like, but one which will protect the hair entirely and can be washed when it requires it.

Between Sweeping and Dusting.

Thus equipped, you can start your task. The large pieces of furniture can, perhaps, be moved together, unless they are fixtures against the wall. In that case, sweep under them with a small brush or run a vacuum cleaner under them. Of that I shall have more to say in a moment. Strew tea leaves on the floor and then sweep it from the sides towards the middle of the room, taking pains to gather up all the dust as you go, leaving no streaks of it behind you. "Thorough" should be your motto all the way.

When you have brought [illegible] the corners and the [illegible] a heap in the centre of the [illegible] carefully with a dustpan and a [illegible] dump it into an opened [illegible] this up tight with the dust [illegible] and put it where it can be [illegible] the furnace or the ash can.

Your window should have been [illegible] the while you are sweeping, [illegible] must be kept shut, not only [illegible] ing is done, but also until the [illegible] had a little chance to settle. [illegible] any chances of the floating [illegible] air being carried on a current [illegible] of the house.

There will be little things to do [illegible] room while you are waiting for [illegible] settle. The furniture in the [illegible] moved back into place, there [illegible] small readjustments to be made. [illegible] do you no harm to sit down for a [illegible] or two and rest before you begin [illegible]

For this you should, if possible, [illegible] "dustless duster." These are made by divers concerns, but it is quite [illegible] to prepare one at home which [illegible] isfactory. A square yard of [illegible] as you would use for dusting [illegible] chamoisette, or chamoisine, or [illegible] name is given to the yellow [illegible] looking fabrics of which dust [illegible] made—should be washed [illegible] water, so as to remove all the [illegible] make the material soft and [illegible] duster is then dipped into kerosene [illegible] lightly in the open air, so as to [illegible] any surplus oil, hung up square [illegible] by two clothes pins, put in a [illegible] and left thus to dry.

Unseen Spots Neglected.

When this duster is dry it [illegible] the dust without scattering it. [illegible] used for a week, shaking it in [illegible] air after each dusting, and then [illegible] clean, again dipped in the oil [illegible] and is ready for further service. [illegible] far better than an ordinary duster. Next in value to this is a dampened [illegible] It should not be actually wet, [illegible] enough to take up the dust [illegible] not scatter it. This, too, can be [illegible] when it is dirty. When the dust [illegible] to remain in a cloth it is impossible [illegible] it without disturbing some of the [illegible] ing in the fabric.

After the room has been well [illegible] baseboard and the moldings [illegible] casings wiped off, the furniture [illegible] side may be brought in and [illegible] place, the ornaments released from [illegible] hiding places and put where they [illegible] Especial care must be taken to [illegible] only the glass and frames of the [illegible] but also the curtain rods, the tops [illegible] window casings and of the doors [illegible] the attention is called to it it is [illegible] believe how often these are neglected by careful workers.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"YOU asked awhile ago for opinions on the stepmother question. Am I too late to give mine? I had a stepmother. I was an 'only,' and my father married again when I was nearly grown. We had a number of years together which were trying for all of us. Tastes, ideals, manners of living and training were so different. The worst feature of the case was the desire of my stepmother and myself each to be 'the one' with my father. I think that is often where the trouble lies. Women now are beginning to learn that to be first with the man of the house is not the only thing worth while in life. It is so unutterably selfish to wish to be an 'only' with any one, relative or friend.

"To change the subject, a number of weeks ago some one who wished to write asked what to read in order to improve her style; also whether she should 'peg away' at it. By all means 'peg away.' The effort of creating anything worth while keeps one young and prevents melancholia and various other ailments, mental and physical. I am sure that reading good English is the surest way to improve one's construction, but 'style' is a gift. Some say that terseness is demanded in writing, but one finds all styles in the magazines of today. The unsigned response to the request of 'A Countrywoman' I shall paste in my scrap book for encouragement in my hour of need. The writer has superlative qualities amounting to positive genius to have accomplished so much.

"To make still another change, you ask about cornstarch being used in custard. I much prefer the vanilla custard with egg only for thickening. I know it to be more wholesome. When lemon is used, flour, cornstarch, or powdered cracker crumbs seem to prevent curdling of the milk. I have a 'never fail' pie crust recipe which can be rolled up and used as desired if kept in a cool place. Here it is: Three cups flour, sifted with three teaspoons sugar, one-half teaspoon baking powder, one and a half teaspoons salt. Cut in with a knife one cup shortening (one part butter to two parts lard): cut until well mixed; add sufficient cold water, iced preferred, to make the dough stick together and roll out on floured board. I am glad domestic science is having an inning. Being quite hopelessly domestic myself, I wish to see women enjoying homemaking, making of it both a science and art. The reaction from all this publicity will surely come to many.

I do not apologize for having printed so much of this letter. I feel a good deal more like apologizing to the Corner because the exigencies of space obliged me to cut out even part of it. What is left is sane, commonsensible, and helpful all the way through. I agree with the suggestion that selfishness is at the bottom of much of the unhappiness in stepmothered homes. As one of our correspondents said when writing of the same subject not long ago, "one word sums it all up, jealousy!" And what after all is jealousy but a form of selfishness? I know that our beginners in writing will welcome the good advice about "pegging away," and we are all interested to hear E. R. P.'s opinion on the custard-cornstarch matter and on domestic science as well as to get her "never fail" pastry recipe. With all my heart I hope she will write again early and often, and I venture to believe I voice the wishes of others when I urge her to let us hear from her soon.

Recipe for Two Layer Cake.

"I have been a reader of the Corner for some time. I notice Mrs. L. M. P.'s trouble about making a layer cake. I myself have been unsuccessful with them until lately and I send a recipe for a two layer cake which goes well for me, and will explain how it is put together: Half a cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, yolks of three eggs, one cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, two rounding teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a small pinch of salt. Cream the butter and the sugar together thoroughly until the two are blended and the heat of the butter and the sugar together dissolves the sugar. Put in next the yolks of the eggs, mix thoroughly and gradually stir in the milk. Mix the baking powder and salt with the flour and stir it in about half a cup at a time. After all the flour is in add flavoring and beat hard for one minute, then pour it in the tins and bake in a quick oven. If you will use waxed paper to line your tins after greasing them with butter you will not be troubled with the cake sticking. Let the cake cool well before taking it from the pan. The paper is easily removed. Here is also an easily made icing: Put the whites of three eggs into a deep dish and stir in powdered sugar until it is so stiff you can hardly stir it any more; add flavoring. Do this without beating the eggs. This also makes a delicious filling to put between the layers.

"Mrs. E. H. G."

Thank you very much for the recipe, for which I am sure Mrs. L. M. P. will be grateful. It is always encouraging to get directions with which one has herself had success.

Would Borrow Invalid's Chair.

"This is my first appeal to the Corner although I am a constant reader. For seven long months I have been in bed and almost helpless. Now I am beginning to improve, though slowly. I am able to sit up a little, but I have to stay right in my room. If any one has an invalid wheel chair which is not in use I would be so thankful to have the use of one until I get well, when I would return it. I will gladly pay all transportation charges. When I am able to go to housekeeping again I shall have some things to offer to any who may want them.

Mrs. R. F. F."

I do not think I can be mistaken in supposing that there is a wheel chair which can be lent for a while until the invalid no longer needs it. She does not ask for it as a gift but as a loan, and I shall expect to get an application for her address with the offer of the chair as soon as this letter has met the notice of some warm hearted reader who is eager to give some one the chance of a breath of air outside of a sickroom.

Wants to Make Quilts.

"I never like to ask for anything for myself without giving in return, but I have decided that if I can secure some things such as I know have been given through your columns it will enable me to do something which can be passed on to others. Such are pieces for making quilts, which I could put together and give for mission work, if nothing else. I am not entirely an invalid, but not far from it. I can get about the house and yard a little, but am not able to do any work except to sew a little by hand and crochet when I can get the material. I live in an isolated district, away from the railroad, and am therefore rather secluded.

Mrs. W. L. M."

Here is a chance to do a double service by enabling some one to help others. I am sure we can all understand the desire of Mrs. W. L. M. to have some work to occupy her hands which will put it in her power to be of assistance to some one beyond the circle of her home. We all long to do that—all of us who are worth anything—and I trust this Cornerite may soon have pieces enough to make it possible for her to patch her mission quilts whenever she has strength to work at them or at her crocheting. Left over odds and ends are as useful here as fresh materials.

Recipe for Hamburger Loaf.

"I am glad to answer the request of some one for a recipe for Hamburger loaf: One pound fine ground hamburger meat (this means beef from the round), one medium sized onion, cut fine, one egg, one cup sweet milk, one cup bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste. Mix well together and form into a loaf, put in a pan, fill it half full of water, and bake one hour. Add hot water as needed, but have the water all baked out when done. It is just fine and I have some other good recipes I would like to pass along. Now if you know of any other shut-ins or cripples or sick here whom we could go to see or any one outside to whom we could send a box of flowers or good things to eat, please hold my address and let me know of them. If it is not too much to ask I would like to request a favor. If any one has a book on nursing or health hints or on the care of infants or anything of the sort and would pass it along I would appreciate it very much.

"A Friend."

It strikes me that any one who has, so to speak, paid her way by answering an appeal for a recipe in the first place and by offering aid and comfort to invalids in her neighborhood and outside of it should surely have her request granted for such a book as she desires. Has no one such a one to send to her? If so, please write to me for the address. Don't send the volume to the office of the paper, but let me put you directly in touch with the correspondent. I trust some one may be as eager to give to her as she is to offer to others.

To Make Into Rugs.

"Inasmuch as your column seems to be an almost bottomless well to supply the wants of all comers, it has occurred to me that we might be able to obtain through the same channel some castoff blue or blue and white garments, such as aprons, petticoats, shirts, and nurses' dresses, or white cotton materials which could be dyed the desired color. I am a member of a small church which meets two evenings each month, at which time we cut and sew the rags to be made into colonial rugs, the proceeds from the sale of which are used for whatever appears the most urgent need at the time. If you consider this request of sufficient merit to let it appear in your department, I trust the effort may bring the desired results, as we are badly in need of material to enable us to fill our orders.

C. R. H."

I am not sure that the Corner is really a "bottomless well" for the wants of all, but I have little doubt that some of our readers will be able to help supply the need of this band of workers. There are always wants for which charitable and church guilds lack funds, such as the labors of these particular toilers aim to meet. The old white goods which can be dyed ought to be plentiful. None of these should be sent to this office, but request made for the address of the correspondent who sends the appeal.

Flower Slips and Reading Matter.

"I wish to ask if there is some one who would send me some slips of flowers for my garden. I live in a desolate place. There are only two American families in the place. I am the mother of three dear little girls and two boys. As we are in poor circumstances I would certainly be grateful for a nice collection of flower slips. I hardly ever get away from home, and my life is lonely at times. I would also enjoy reading matter.

D. L."

Will not some one send her a few and give her a chance to have her dream come true?

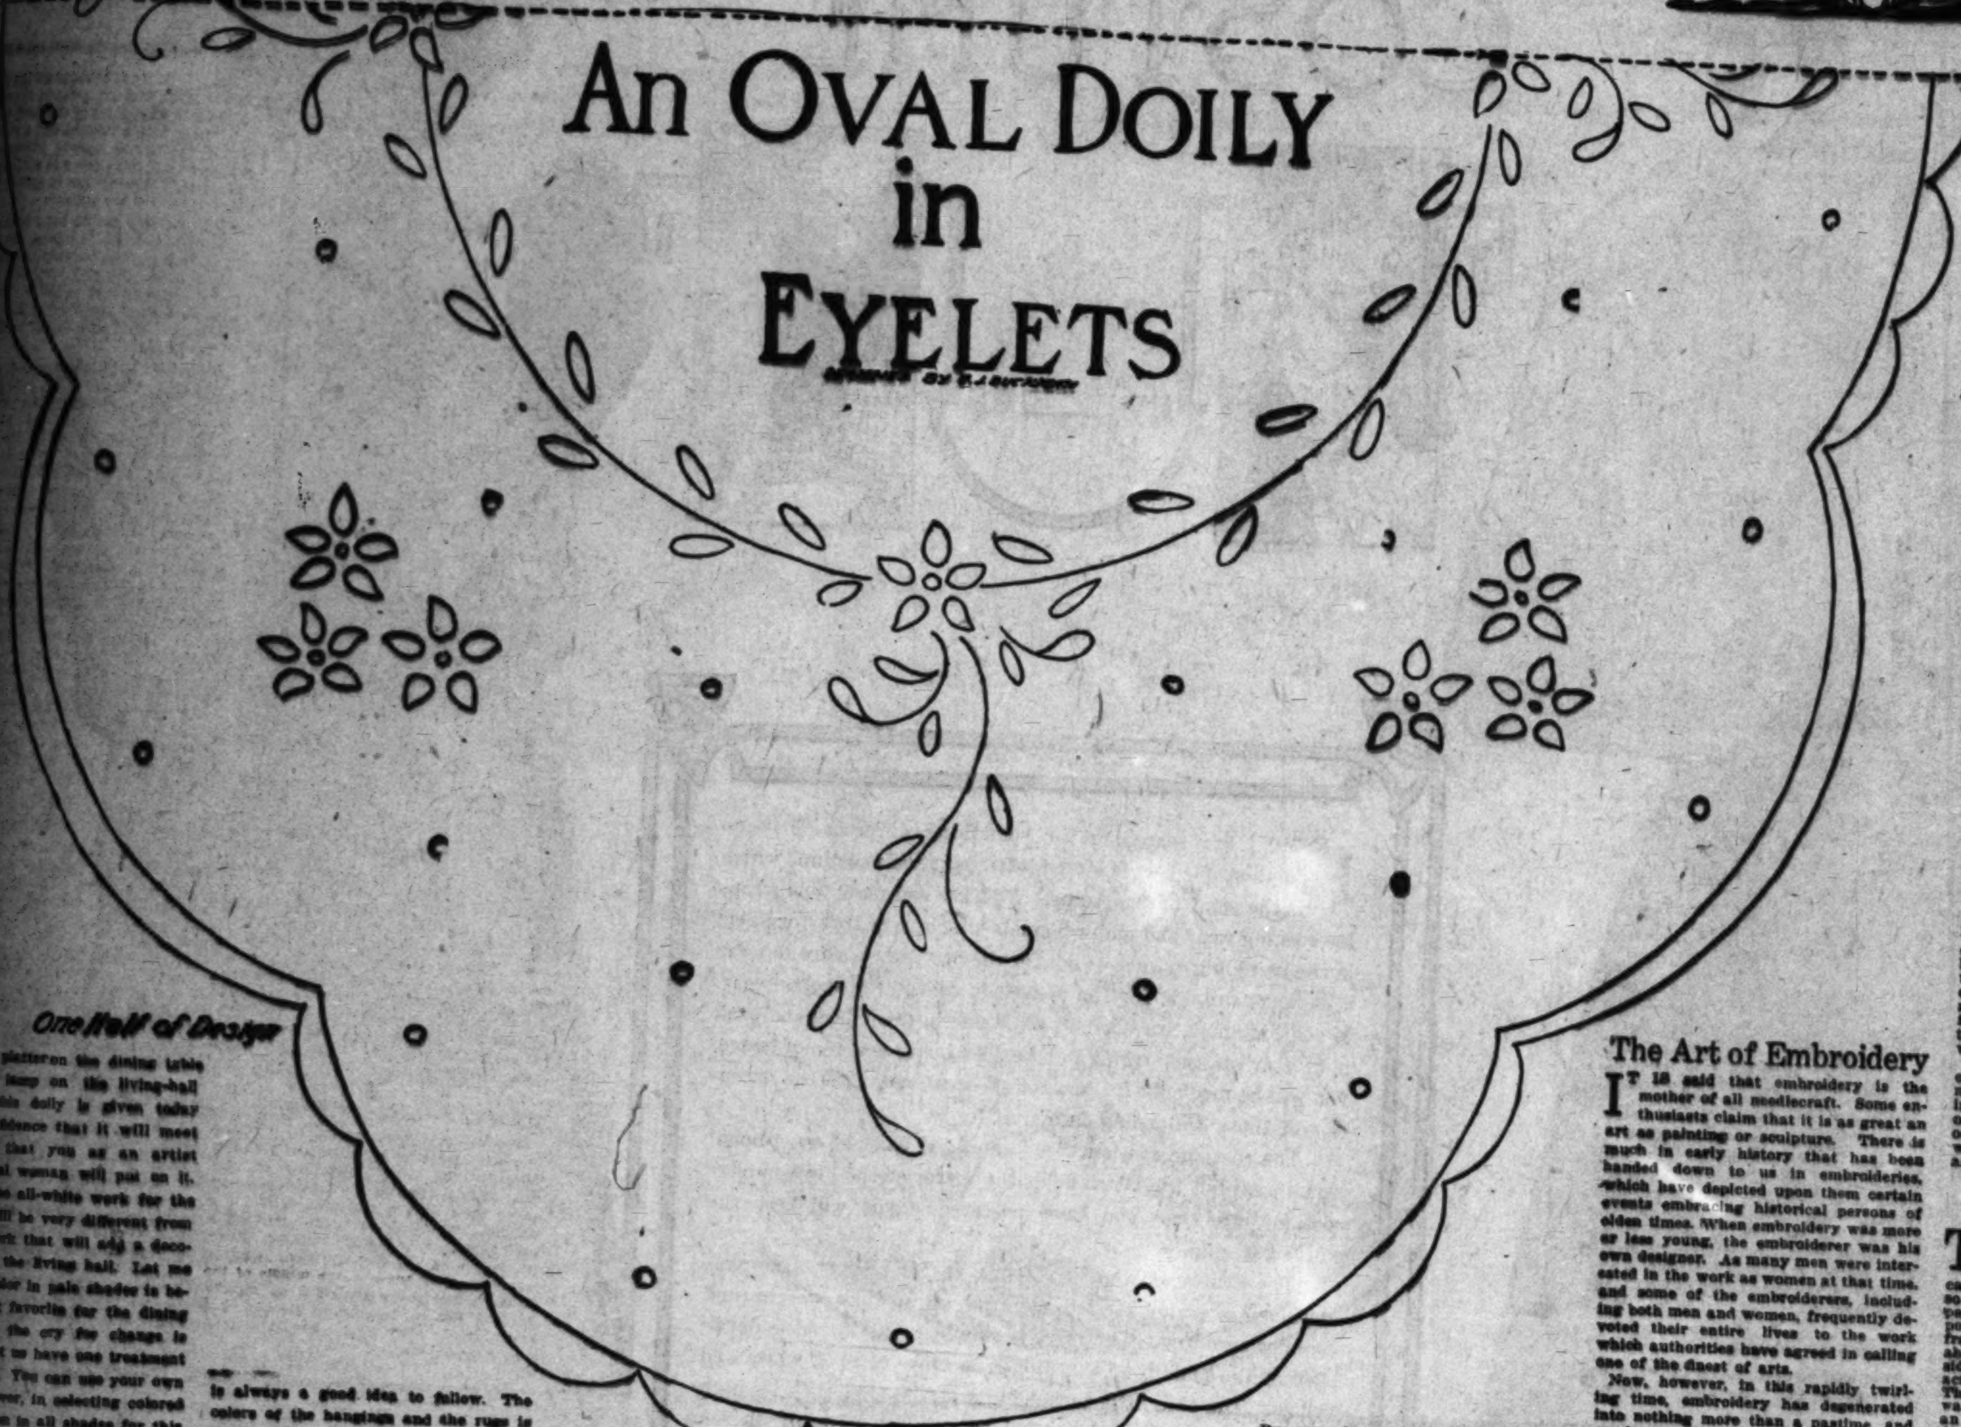
An OVAL DOILY in EYELETS



One Half of Design

You can use your own nt, however, in selecting colored ded cotton in all shades for this If you have a blue set and need doilies in this shape, match the and work it in the practical blue. scheme of yellow to match china the decoration is also good, and green for summer is lovely. The favorite is white, for it lasts in- tely.

e doily is to be a centerpiece on hall table, the colors that predom- will be decided by your general of furnishing. The repetition of shades that are in the lampshade is always a good idea to follow. The colors of the hangings and the rugs is another good scheme. I would suggest that you reserve your work for the hall until I give you a conventional design more suited to a living hall.

You are anxious to begin work on this attractive design, I am sure. There are two methods that you can choose, or you can use the two in combination, if you wish. The solid work on the entire design is very effective. The eyelet work is also a great favorite. The use of both solid and eyelet work makes a contrast that many embroiderers like.

In the use of the solid work it will be necessary to pad the ovals first before working across the forms. This simple method is to be followed throughout the design. If you wish you can work the dots that are scattered all over the doily in eyelet. Pad the scallops and work in buttonhole stitch, giving a second buttonholing as a guard against fraying.

Eyelets are made by cutting straight lines through the center of the ovals and working in slanting stitches with soft untwilled cotton along the frayed edges. Do not pull the goods over the finger, as the hole that results will be stretched out of shape. The subsequent laundering will be enough to give the open effect.

In the combination of plain solid work and eyelets you can use your own judgment. The little dots can be eyelets; the ovals around the center can be eyelets and the flowers solid, with the sprays of leaves in eyelets. The groups of flowers on the rest of the dolly should be solid.

By reversing the idea and making the flowers in eyelets and the remaining design in solid an entirely different effect will result.

If you are clever at tracing a design, you can transfer this to any other shape of dolly. The round center will suit any square or circular piece and the other flowers in groups of three can be scattered over the remaining space. Dots can fill in the rest of any design. A simple working will give pleasing results. On the many accessories that make a room distinctly feminine this design will prove a decorative friend, indeed. Try it and let me know how it answers your purpose.

The Art of Embroidery

IT IS said that embroidery is the mother of all needlecraft. Some enthusiasts claim that it is as great an art as painting or sculpture. There is much in early history that has been handed down to us in embroideries, which have depicted upon them certain events embracing historical persons of olden times. When embroidery was more or less young, the embroiderer was his own designer. As many men were interested in the work as women at that time, and some of the embroiderers, including both men and women, frequently devoted their entire lives to the work which authorities have agreed in calling one of the finest of arts.

Now, however, in this rapidly twirling time, embroidery has degenerated into nothing more than a pastime, and rarely is there an embroiderer who works lovingly and with thought of posterity, except, perhaps, over a baby's layette. But for really artistic embroidery, which is made with the idea of its lasting more than one generation, there is practically nothing being made by occidental fingers. Japanese and Chinese embroiderers yet take their work seriously and labor patiently and lovingly, and there may be here and there a piece of occidental church embroidery, modern yet worthy of comparison with the wonderful art of medieval times.

The Venetian stitch is a medieval stitch which works up beautifully, particularly when combined with punchwork. It is a stitch which was recently revived and finds much favor with those who can appreciate hand embroidery. It is not difficult.

The Modern Embroiderer

THERE should be more embroidery than ever done in the home of the average woman today. "Oh," you will say, "there is so much more in modern life to keep us busy that we haven't the time."

Not a bit of it. Just there you are wrong. Think of your several-times great-grandmother, and then ask yourself how much time she had after making the butter, cheese, candles, woolen socks, her own quilts, her own household linen, even to the weaving of it, and the clothes for the whole family, including the men. No, several-times great-grandmother didn't have any sinecure! But now, when there are so many labor-saving devices for the home, the housewife can garner many embroidering moments that were unknown to her feminine ancestors.

Indeed, fond mothers are again beginning on household linens for the wee baby girl, so that when the little one's mating time comes there will be no end of beautifully embroidered bed linen, etc., for her to take away to her new home with her. The custom is one that came from Germany, where the "hausfrau" begins her little maid's hope trunk as soon after her babyship comes into the world as is convenient.

All girls are highly desirous of possessing one of those beautiful sets of embroidered linen that they see marked with prohibitive prices in the first-class shops, and yet how few seem to realize that, with a little time and patience, they could duplicate, and perhaps improve on, those same sets for their own linen and lingerie collections. A piece of embroidery that impresses one as having taken an enormous amount of time is really made up of hundreds of odd moments that would have drifted away into nothingness if some clever fingers and industrious brain had not turned them into something worth while.

It is an excellent plan to keep a piece of embroidery always on hand for odd moments: moments when one is waiting for something to boil or dry or cool, or waiting for any one of a hundred odd domestic things during the day's work. Odd moments make hours, just as pennies make dollars.

A Twine Holder

THE traditional string-bag is not half so convenient as a ball of unbroken twine hung in an old candleshade. If the shade is of metal, so much the better. A frail shade of paper or silk will hardly do for the purpose, but one of heavy linen upon a frame or of thick parchment will probably do. The shade is to be turned upside down and a piece of ribbon tied across to make a sort of basket handle. This handle is hung to a nail in the wall or upon some little projection in an unobtrusive but convenient corner. A pair of scissors is suspended by another ribbon from this twine holder, and a ball of twine is placed within it and an end of the twine drawn through the bottom and small opening of the shade. When twine is needed the end is pulled through the shade in the very same way that the twine holder at the grocery store is used. If the ribbon suspending the scissors is sufficiently long, the scissors can readily be used for other cutting purposes.

How to Transfer

PLACE a sheet of impression carbon paper between your fabric and the newspaper design, the latter on top. With a sharp pencil or a glass-pointed pen go over the outline. The design will be transferred to the material and will last until worked.

Camisoles Impromptu

TWO girls were sitting on a vine-covered porch. One was sewing industriously and the other swung lazily to and fro in a large wicker rocker.

"If I had some material handy I'd make a camisole, too," drawled the lazy girl; "but I really can't think of going down the hot main street for it this afternoon."

"Isn't there any material in the house?" questioned the industrious one brightly.

"Not a shred!"

"Have you a ragbag?"

"Did you ever know a house that hadn't?" questioned an amused drawl.

"Well, let's see it," retorted the industrious girl. "I knew that I can find half a dozen camisoles in it in three shakes of a ram's tail."

"I'm sure you can't; but come along. It's behind the storeroom door," answered the languid one, resignedly, and led the way to the storeroom.

"Why, here's that rose-sprigged lawn you wore two season's ago," spoke up the sharp-eyed girl. "And it's trimmed with oceans of lace, edging and insertion, too. Didn't you see that little rose-sprigged camisole in that exclusive shop in town last Wednesday? Well, this is the very thing to make almost an exact duplicate. You see, there are yards and yards of lace insertion and edging on the dress, so that you will not even have to buy trimming for the camisole.

"Why, here's an old white dress, too. The material in it is perfectly good, only that the whole thing is out of style. We'll give your little sister 15 cents for ripping it up while I'm showing you how to make the rose-sprigged camisole."

Before you could say "Jack Robinson" the girl, an industrious girl, had gathered up the two dresses and fled down the stairs and out to the porch. "Now, get to work, you idle creature," she said gayly to the other; and her enthusiasm was so contagious that soon both girls and the little sister were working like bees. The result was two stunning camisoles, with not a new thing in their makeup but the thread with which they were stitched. Even the ribbons were found in the old ribbon box.

Crocheted Pincushion

IT IS pretty, it is easy to make, and it is just the thing to hang on the dresser at the side. It is not more than four inches square and is covered with pink or blue silk. Two crocheted medallions are then made, whipped together, with only one end open to form a little case, and then the pink cushion is slipped into the case, the opening is basted fast, a loop of ribbon is put upon one corner and the cushion is hung diamondwise from the side of the dresser mirror. The pattern is a very simple one of Irish crochet, with a raised crocheted rose in the center of the cushion and a border of shells in treble crochet. These little cushions are used when there is too much upon the dresser to think of cluttering it still further with a pincushion. The loop attached to the cushion is slipped over one of the mirror supports, and is so held up out of the way.

In Black and White

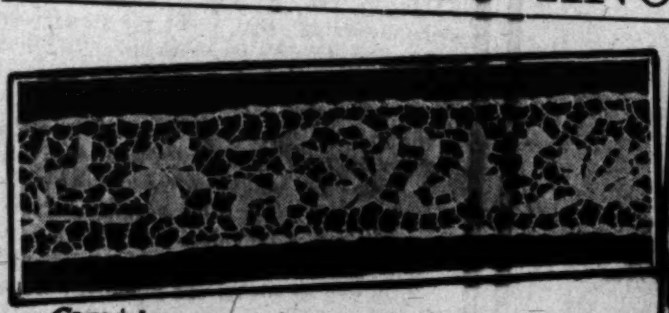
THERE is a sudden craze for black and white, a craze that actually filled one of the shop windows with all sorts of black-and-white candy. Whether it was edible or not was a question, but the effect was sufficient to halt the pedestrians before the store.

And the embroidery world is not behindhand, for one of the exclusive art needlework shops treats us to a feast of black-and-white embroidery. Chief among the pieces exhibited was a handsome table cover of what is known as "Black Forest" embroidery, the tablecloth having in its very center a huge circle composed of fir trees, foliage and gamboling deer. The stitch was far from difficult, being that much-loved and simple stitch known as cross-stitch. In the circle, in fact forming the circle itself, there were four fir trees, set at regular intervals and stretching their pointed tops toward the center of the circle, but sadly failing to reach their goal by about two feet. In the four spaces between the trees there were twelve deer in all, three deer in each space, and under and beside the deer were baby trees not as high as the animals, and a thick undergrowth. The design was altogether charming, and one could picture it going down to posterity and being hailed with delight by one's descendants.

The owner of the shop was very agreeable and volunteered the information that the famous "Black Forest" of Germany had inspired the design. You will doubtless recall that famous forest that lies in southern Germany. It is really a chain of elevated plains, the greatest of which, Feldberg, measures 4900 feet high. These plains are covered with dark fir trees. Many religious retreats are among the dense growth, and it is to the nuns of the forest that we owe the design found upon the attractive table cover.

We have had such a riot of color in embroidery that the return to a single color upon a white ground is restful to the color-surfeited eye. The design will work up so quickly in simple cross-stitch that either very young persons or busy housewives will find it pleasant to pick up at odd moments. There is very little to be learned in cross-stitching, but there is one precaution that must be taken, that of having the understitch always slanting in the one direction and the top stitch in the opposite direction. A good plan is to have all the understitches slanting from the lower left-hand corners to the upper right-hand corners, and the top ones in just the opposite direction. Any good art needlework store should be able to supply you with the design or have it stamped for you. It is really worth while, for the design is appropriate for so many things. The embroidery can be carried out in blue and white, but it is not so interesting as when done in black and white to suit its name of "Black Forest."

THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT LACES



Carrickmacross Joined by Brides

Carrickmacross upon Net

Chantilly Lace

CHANTILLY lace derived its name from its native town, Chantilly, France, a place long famous for its black and white silk laces, the manufacture having been established in the seventeenth century by the duchess de Longueville. Later the manufacturers removed from Chantilly to Calvados, Caen and Bayeux on account of the high wages demanded by lace workers in Chantilly, the town being sufficiently close to Paris to cause the workers to demand city wages. There is no place outside of Chantilly, excepting Caen, where the white chantilly laces have attained such purity of color.

To preserve this purity of color, many of the people work in the open air in the summer, and in winter months have their workrooms in the lofts of their cow houses, the heat from the animals enabling the workers to do without fires. Thus they avoid the danger of soiling the lace by smoke.

In 1847 Caen alone employed 50,000 workers on this lace.

Chantilly has always been made of silk, but owing to the lusterless quality of the silk it is commonly supposed to be of thread, whereas, black thread lace has never been made in Chantilly or the above-mentioned places of manufacture.

Usually the patterns in chantilly lace are elaborate, a pattern frequently seen being formal flower vases arranged so as to form an almost architectural effect. Baskets of flowers, too, are familiar designs to the lover of chantilly.

During the revolution the manufacture of chantilly lace was forbidden, because it was such a favorite among the nobility. In fact, even the workers of the condemned lace were obliged to go to the scaffold with their patrons and suffer undeserved death. In Napoleon's reign, however, it was revived, and enjoyed its greatest period of prosperity.

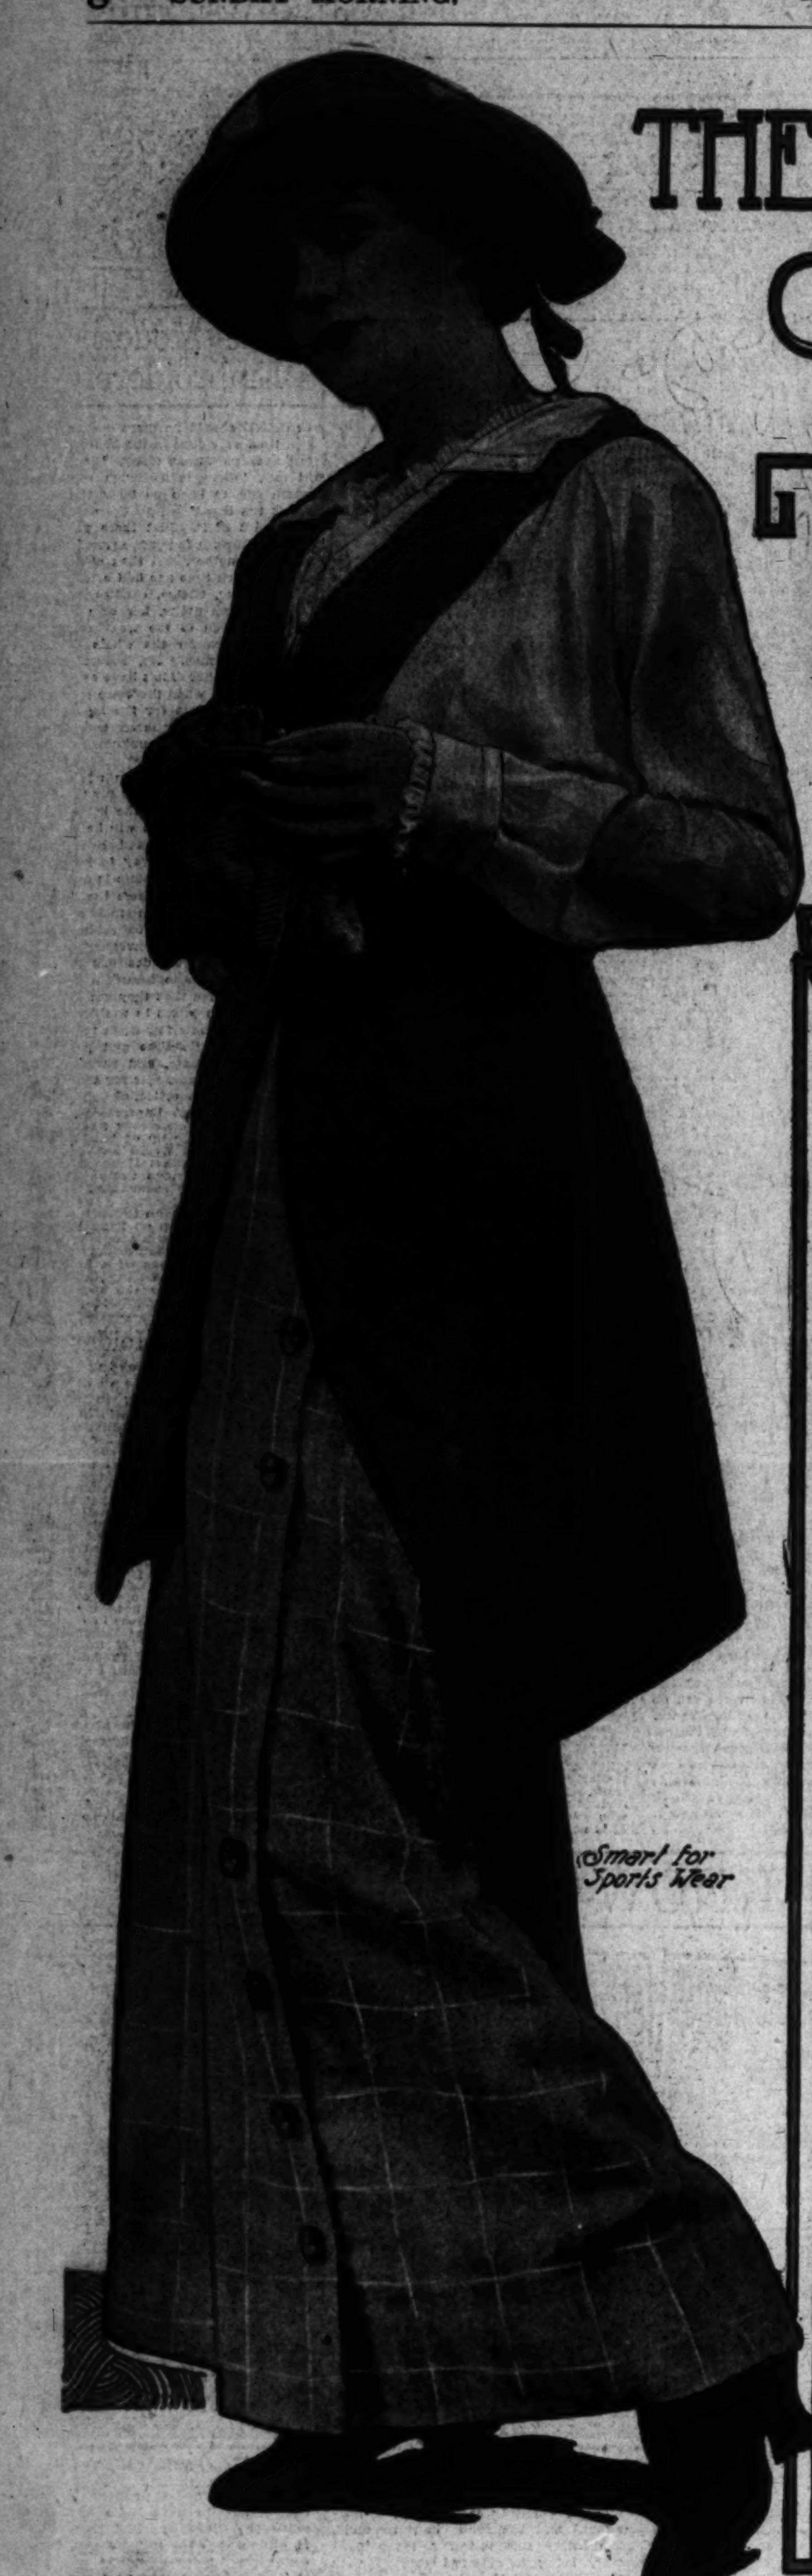
Two grounds, or reseaus, most common in chantilly laces are the hexagonal and the fond chant grounds, the latter resembling a six-pointed star, being a diamond crossed with two horizontal threads.

It is more difficult to distinguish between machine and handmade chantilly lace in black than that in white. Usually the weakest point in machine-made lace is its edge. In the edge of real chantilly lace the loops on the edge will be found to be part of the lace. In the machine-made lace these will be sewn on, and can be readily pulled away. In the cheaper imitations the edge will sometimes be found cut through the carelessness of the operator separating the strips when removing from the loom, proving immediately that it is of no value.

Carrickmacross is the oldest existing lace industry in Ireland, having been made in the neighborhood of Carrickmacross since 1820. Its manufacture is quite simple, being simply designs cut from cambric and applied to net with point stitches. Its origin is more or less shrouded in mystery, some people claiming that it developed in India or Persia, while the Florentine historian, Vasari, claims that the great artist, Botticelli, was its inventor. At any rate, it is well known that vast quantities of the lace were made in Italy—from the thirteenth to the seventeenth centuries.

It was Mrs. Grey Porter, wife of the then rector of Dunnamoyne, who taught her servant to copy a sample of the lace, which she had brought from Italy. Anne Stedmann, the servant, and her mistress then taught the art to the surrounding Irish peasantry. As the peasantry depended entirely upon private orders, there was soon an overproduction of the lace, for girls from far and near had flocked to the home town of Mrs. Grey Porter, Culloville, to learn the industry. The making of carrickmacross then waned, only to be revived again after the great famine of 1846. Schools were then established, and the workers were so carefully taught that the making of carrickmacross became a fine art, and ranked with the finest of Irish laces.

THE TWO-IN-ONE COSTUME



Smart for Sports Wear

IF YOU are searching for something different, look no further, for here it is: an interchangeable costume which is the acme of smartness. We have had reversible wraps for evening wear and motor bonnets which were transformable in the twinkling of an eye; but for the first time we are to wear a costume suitable for the afternoon call or for sports wear. If you contemplate a trip abroad, invest in this model and pack it in your steamer trunk and, besides being a saver of space, you will be modishly frocked for all occasions, with the exception of those demanding formal attire.

The costume consists of a jacket and skirt of exceptional smartness; but the latter holds the secret of the "two-in-one" costume, and once you have mastered it you will keep the world guessing.

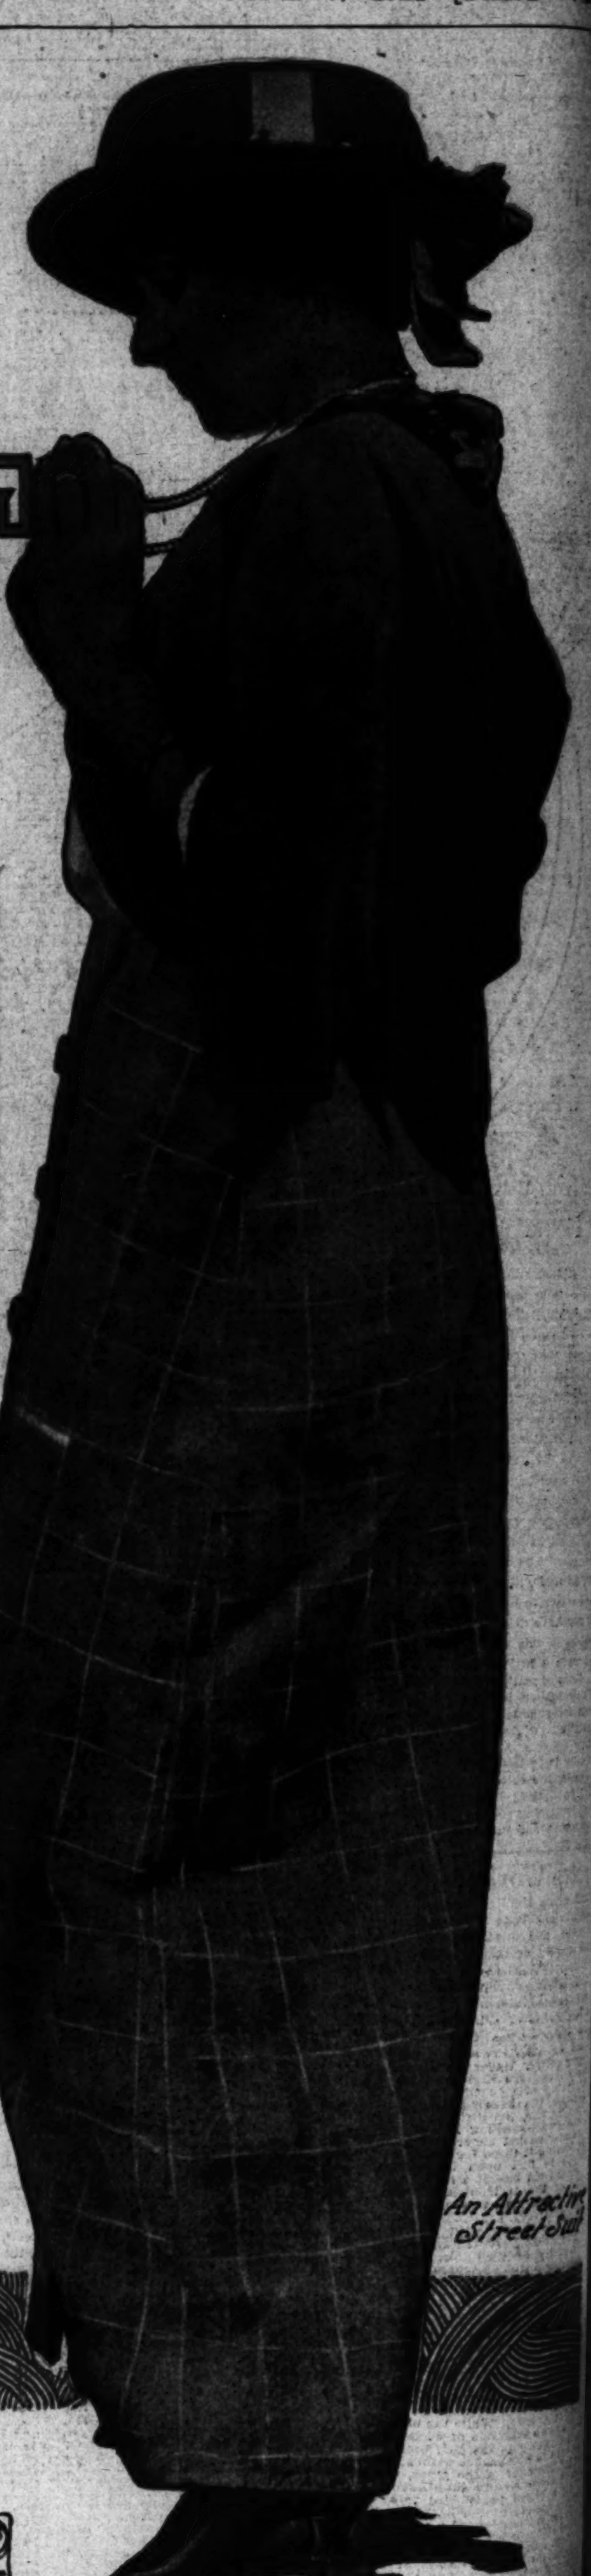
The couturier who is responsible for this creation has combined a plaid worsted material of medium weight and summer corduroy. The skirt is simplicity itself and is developed of the plaid, which is woven in tones of blue, white and yellow. The chic little jacket hints of the eton with its high waist line in front and pointed back. The corduroy chosen for this is of a rich old-blue, which is enlivened by a collar of Roman-striped silk. Now for the secret! Suppose you are going to attend the horse show, the races or a tennis tournament and desire a sports coat. Simply unfasten the row of clasps beneath the sleeves, unbutton the straps, which confine the slight fullness across the back of the jacket, and presto! you have a sleeveless sports coat fit for the races. The straps are brought up over the shoulders and cross in front in grenadier fashion, and the wide sleeves drop to form the skirt of the coat. Truly this is an innovation worthy of your notice.

The details of this costume did not "just happen." The treatment of color and line is well worked out and the ensemble is an artistic expression of economy, style and serviceability. Who knows but that this costume may revolutionize the designing of garments for street wear? There is something extremely alluring about a "two-in-one" coat which will win the approval of progressive American women.

After you have enjoyed the sports, readjust the coat—and you are wearing a stunning jacket without the faintest suggestion of a "sporty" line. Truly the designer of this costume deserves to be famous, with his creative ability to fashion two totally different garments in one.

There are unlimited possibilities in the "two-in-one" costume, and the designer will probably create reversible skirts, which will be silk on one side and worsted on the other. The woman with a limited dress allowance will thank her lucky stars she was born in this age of novelties such as the "two-in-one" costume. For one-half the amount she will be able to have twice the number of costumes; and, variety being the "spice of life," the modern woman likes many changes of attire. One royal princess of France had nearly two thousand costumes and compelled her husband to dispose of part of his estates to pay her dressmaker's bills. This would not have been necessary had the "two-in-one" costumes been in vogue at that time.

We have heard of "Two minds with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one," but it remained for a clever Frenchman to supply the sartorial world with the "two-in-one" costume.



An Attractive Street Suit

run through the pages. He waited for a moment, considerably dashed, and then said "Oh," in a very unfriendly manner. She found her place in the magazine, assumed a more comfortable position, and with noteworthy resolution, set about reading as if her life depended upon it.

He sat down, pulled the rug up to his chin, and stared out at the great, heaving billows. Suddenly remembering another injury, he felt once more of the back of his head.

"By jove!" he exclaimed. "There is a lump there."

"I can't hear you," she said, allowing the magazine to drop into her lap, but keeping her place carefully marked with one of her fingers.

"I can hear you perfectly," he said.

"It's the way the wind blows," she explained.

"Easily remedied," said he. "I'll move into Mrs. Gaston's chair if you think it will help any."

"Do!" she said promptly. "You will not disturb me in the least, — unless you talk." She resumed her reading, half a page above her finger tip.

He moved over and arranged himself comfortably, snugly in Mrs. Gaston's chair. Their elbows almost met. He was prepared to be very patient. For a long time she continued to read, her warm, rosy cheek half-averted, her eyes applied to their task with irritating constancy. He did not despair. Some wise person once had told him that it was only necessary to give a woman sufficient time and she would be the one to despair.

A few passengers possessed of proud sea-legs, staggered past the snug couple on their ridiculous rounds of the ship. If they thought of Miss Guile and R. Schmidt at all it was with the scorn that is usually devoted to youth at its very best. There could be no doubt in the passing mind that these two were sweethearts who managed to thrive on the smallest of comforts.

At last his patience was rewarded. She lowered the magazine and stifled a yawn — but not a real one.

"Have you read it?" she inquired composedly.

"A part of it," he said. "Over your shoulder."

"Is that considered polite in Vienna?"

"If you only knew what a bump I've got on the back of my head you wouldn't be so ungracious," he said.

"I couldn't possibly know, could I?"

HE LEANED forward and indicated the spot on the back of his head, first removing his cap. She laughed nervously, and then gently rubbed her fingers over the curly hair.

"There is a dreadful lump!" she exclaimed. "Oh, how sorry I am. Do — do you feel faint or — or — I mean, is it very painful?"

"Not now," he replied, replacing his cap and favoring her with his most engaging smile.

She smiled in response, betraying not the slightest sign of embarrassment. As a matter of fact, she was, if anything, somewhat too self-possessed.

"I remember falling down stairs once," she said, "and getting a stupendous bump on my forehead. But that was a great many years ago, and I cried. How was I to know that it hurt you, Mr. Schmidt, when you neglected to cry?"

"Heroes never cry," said he. "It isn't considered first-class fiction, you know."

"Am I to regard you as a hero?"

"If you will be so kind, please."

She laughed outright at this. "I think I rather like you, Mr. Schmidt," she said, with unexpected candor.

"Oh, I fancy I'm not at all bad," said he, after a momentary stare of astonishment. "I am especially good in rough weather," he went on, trying to forget that he was a prince of the royal blood, a rather difficult matter when one stops to consider he was not in the habit of hearing people say that they rather liked him.

"Do your friends come from Vienna?" she inquired abruptly.

"Yes," he said, and then saved his face as usual by adding under his breath: "but they don't live there." It was not in him to lie outright, hence the handy way of appeasing his conscience.

"They are very interesting looking men, especially the younger. I cannot remember when I have seen a more attractive man."

"He is a splendid chap," exclaimed Robin, with genuine enthusiasm. "I am very fond of Dank."

She was silent for a moment. Something had failed, and she was rather glad of it.

"Do you like New York?" she asked.

"Immensely. I met a great many delightful people there, Miss Guile. You say you do not know the Blithers family? Mr. Blithers is a rare old bird."

"Isn't there some talk of his daughter being engaged to the Prince of Graustark?"

He felt that his ears were red. "The newspapers hinted at something of the sort, I believe." He was suddenly possessed by the curious notion that he was being "pumped" by his fair companion. Indeed, a certain insistent note had crept into her voice and her eyes were searching his with an intentness that had not appeared in them until now.

"Have you seen him?"

"The Prince?"

"Yes. What is he like?"

"I've seen pictures of him," he equivocated. "Rather nice looking, I should say."

"Of course he is like all foreign noblemen and will leap at the Blithers' millions if he gets the chance. I sometimes feel sorry for the poor wretches." There was more scorn than pity in the way she said it, however, and her velvety eyes were suddenly hard and uncompromising.

He longed to defend himself, in the third person, but could not do so for very strong and obvious reasons. He allowed himself the privilege, however, of declaring that foreign noblemen are not always as black as they are painted. And then, for a very excellent reason, he contrived to change the subject by asking where she was going on the continent.

"I may go to Vienna," she said, with a smile that served to puzzle rather than to delight him. He was more than ever convinced that she was playing with him. "But pray do not look so gloomy, Mr. Schmidt, I shall not make any demands upon your time while I am there. You may ——"

"I am quite sure of that," he interrupted, with his ready smile. "You see, I am a person of no consequence in Vienna, while you — Ah, well, as an American girl you will be hobnobbing with the nobility while the humble Schmidt sits afar off and marvels at the kindness of a fate that befell him in the middle of the Atlantic ocean, and yet curses another fate that makes him unworthy of the slightest notice from the aforesaid American girl. For, I daresay, Miss Guile, you, like all American girls, are ready to leap at titles."

"That really isn't fair, Mr. Schmidt," she protested, flushing. "Why should you and I quarrel over a condition that cannot apply to either of us? You are not a nobleman, and I am not a title-seeking American girl. So, why all this beautiful irony?"

"It only remains for me to humbly beg your pardon and to add that if you come to Vienna my every waking hour shall be devoted to the pleasure of ——"

"I am sorry I mentioned it, Mr. Schmidt," she interrupted coldly. "You may rest easy, for I shall not keep you awake for a single hour. Besides, I may not go to Vienna at all."

"I am sure you would like Vienna," he said, somewhat chilled by her manner.

"I have been there, with my parents, but it was a long time ago. I once saw the Emperor and often have I seen the wonderful Prince Lichtenstein."

"Have you traveled extensively in Europe?"

SHE was smiling once more. "I don't know what you would consider extensively," she said. "I was educated in Paris, I have spent innumerable winters in Rome and quite as many summers in Scotland, England, Switzerland, Germ——"

"I know who you are!" he cried out enthusiastically. To his amazement, a startled expression leaped into her eyes. "You are traveling under an assumed name." She remained perfectly still, watching him with an anxious smile on her lips. "You are no other than Miss Baedeker, the well-known authoress."

It seemed to him that she breathed deeply. At any rate, her brow cleared and her smile was positively enchanting. Never, in all his life, had he gazed upon a lovelier face. His heart began to beat with a rapidity that startled him, and a queer little sensation, as of smothering, made it difficult for him to speak naturally in his next attempt.

"In that case, my pseudonym should be Guide, not Guile," she cried merrily. The dimples played in her cheeks and her eyes were dancing.

"B. stands for Baedeker, I'm sure. Baedeker Guide. If the B. isn't for Baedeker, what is it for?"

"Are you asking what the B. really stands for, Mr. Schmidt?"

"In a round-about way, Miss Guile," he admitted.

"My name is Bedelia," she said, with absolute sincerity. "Me mither is Irish, d'ye see?"

"By jove, it's worth a lot of trouble to get you to smile like that," he cried admiringly. "It is the first really honest smile you've displayed. If you knew how it improves you, you'd be doing it all of the time."

"Smiles are sometimes expensive."

"It depends on the market."

"I never take them to a cheap market. They are not classed as necessities."

"You couldn't offer them to any one who loves luxuries more than I do."

"You pay for them only with compliments, I see, and there is nothing so cheap."

"Am I to take that as a rebuke?"

"If possible," she said sweetly.

At this juncture, the miserable Hobbs hove into sight, not figuratively but literally. He came surging across the deck in a mad dash from one haven to another, or, more accurately, from post to post.

"I beg pardon, sir," he gasped, finally steadying himself on wide-spread legs within easy reach of Robin's sustaining person. "There is a wireless for Mr. Totten, sir, but when I took it to 'im he said to fetch it to you, being hunable to hold up 'is head, wot with the wretched meal he had yesterday and the ——"

"I see, Hobbs. Well, where is it?"

HOBBS looked embarrassed. "Well, you see, sir, I 'esitated about giving it to you when you appear to be so ——"

"Never mind. You may give it to me. Miss Guile will surely pardon me if I devote a second or two to an occupation she followed so earnestly up to a very short time ago."

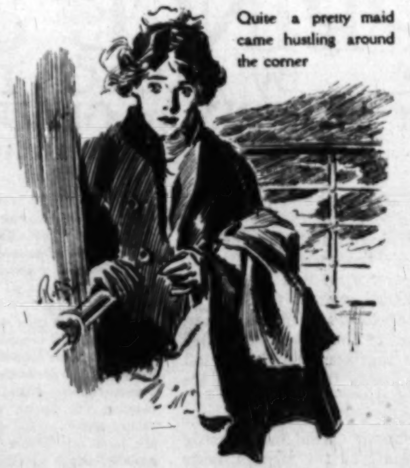
"Pray forget that I am present, Mr. Schmidt," she said, and smiled upon the bewildered Hobbs, who after an instant delivered the message to his master.

Robin read it through and at the end whistled softly.

"Take it to Mr. Totten, Hobbs, and see if it will not serve to make him hold up his head a little."

"Very good, sir. I hope it will. Wouldn't it be wise for me to hannounce who it is from, sir, to sort of prepare him for ——"

"He knows who it is from, Hobbs, so you needn't worry. It is from home, if it will interest you, Hobbs."



Quite a pretty maid came hustling around the corner

"Thank you, sir, it does interest me. I thought it might be from Mr. Blithers."

Robin's scowl sent him scuttling away a great deal more rigidly than when he came.

"Idiot!" muttered the young man, still scowling.

There was silence between the two for a few seconds. Then she spoke disinterestedly:

"Is it from the Mr. Blithers who has the millions and the daughter who wants to marry a prince?"

"Merely a business transaction, Miss Guile," he said absently. He was thinking of Romano's message.

"So it would appear."

"I beg pardon? I was — er — thinking ——"

"It was of no consequence, Mr. Schmidt," she said airily.

He picked up the thread once more. "As a matter of fact, I've heard it said that Miss Blithers refused to marry the Prince."

"Is it possible?" with fine irony. "Is he such a dreadful person as all that?"

"I'm sure I don't know," murmured Robin uncomfortably. "He may be no more dreadful than she."

"I cannot hear you, Mr. Schmidt," she persisted, with unmistakable malice in her lovely eyes.

"I'm rather glad that you didn't," he confessed. "Silly remark, you know."

"Well, I hope she doesn't marry him," said Miss Guile.

"So do I," said R. Schmidt, and their eyes met. After a moment, she looked away, her first surrender to the mysterious much like an exaggerated weasel, but almost black in color. Its head was almost triangular; its eyes, set near together, were bright and cruel. It came half-way across the meadow, then stopped, and eyed for some time the tethered horse and the deserted wagon. Seeing nothing to take alarm at, it made a wide circuit, ran behind the cabin, and reappeared, as the fox had done, at the corner nearest to the wagon. From this point of vantage it surveyed the situation anew, a little spark of blood-red fire alternately glowing and fading in its eyes as its keen nostrils caught the scent of the fish.

A BASKET OF FISH By Charles C. D. Roberts

Satisfied at length that there was no danger within range, the mink glided up to the wagon. The horse it paid no heed to. It circled the wagon a couple of times in a nervous, jerky run, its head darting this way and that, till its nose assured it beyond question that the fish it scented were in the wagon itself. Thereupon,— for the mink lacks the fox's hair-splitting astuteness and does not take long to make up its mind,— it clambered nimbly up through one of the wheels, and fell straightway upon the fish-basket.

NOW the tramp, courteous in his depredations, had taken thought to refasten the basket. The mink was puzzled. The hole in the top of the basket, though he might have squeezed his head through it, was not large enough to let him reach the fish. He began jerking the basket and pulling it about savagely. The back of the wagon consisted of a hinged flap, and the fisherman had left it hanging down. The basket, dragged this way and that, came presently to the edge, toppled over, and fell heavily to the ground, on its bulging side. The fastening came undone, and the cover flopped half-open. The mink dropped down beside it, flung himself upon it furiously, and began jerking out and scattering the contents, tearing mouthfuls from one fish after another in a paroxysm of greed, as if he feared they were still alive and might get away from him.

The basket emptied and his first rage glutted, the mink now fell to the business of making a serious meal. Selecting a fish to his taste, he ate it at great leisure, leaving the head and the tail upon the grass. Then he picked out a larger one, as if he regarded the first as merely an appetizer.

As he gnawed luxuriously at the silver-and-buff, vermilion-spotted titbit, an immense shadow floated between him and the sun. He did not take time to look up and see what it was. It was as if the touch of the shadow had loosed a powerful spring. He simply shot from his place,— at such speed that the eye could not distinguish how he did it,— and in the minutest fraction of a second was curled within the empty fishing basket, which still lay on its side, half open. A pair of long, black, sickle-curved talons, surmounted by thickly-feathered grey shanks, clutched at the place where he had stood.

Furious at having missed her strike, the great horned owl, that tigress of the air, flapped up again on her soundless, downy wings, and swooped suddenly at the basket, as if trying to turn it over. As her talons clawed at the wickerwork, feeling for a hold, the head of the mink, on its long, snaky neck, darted forth, reached up, and struck its fine white fangs into her thigh.

But the great owl's armour of feathers, though it looked so soft and fluffy, was in fact amazingly resistant. The mink's long teeth reached the flesh, and drew blood; but he gained no grip. That steel-muscled thigh was wrenched from his jaws, leaving him with an embarrassing mouthful of down. He jerked his head into cover again, just as the bird made another lightning clutch at him.

For all his rage, the mink kept his wits about him. He knew the owl for one of his most dangerous rivals and adversaries. He knew that he could kill her if once he could reach her throat, or get his grip fixed on one of her mighty wings, close to the base. But that if kept him prudent. He was too well aware that in an open combat he was more than likely to get his neck or his back into the clutch of those inexorable talons,— and that would be the end of him. Discreetly, therefore, he kept himself well within the basket, which was large enough to hold him comfortably. He snarled shrilly through the little square hole in the cover, while his assailant, balked of her prey and furious with the smart of her wound, pounced once more upon the basket and strove to claw an entrance. A chance blow of one of her pounding wings drove the lid — the basket being still on its side — completely to. The sorrel horse under the birch tree swung round on his tether, and rolled his eyes, and snorted, deeply scandalized at such goings-on about his familiar wagon.

It was just at this point in the mink's adventure that the fox returned to the clearing. He had had rather poor luck with the wood-mice, and his chops watered with the memory of those trout in the wagon. Something of an expert in dealing with traps, he made up his mind that he would try to circumvent this one.

The sight that met his shrewd eyes as he emerged warily from the cover of the fir woods amazed him. He halted to take it in thoroughly. He saw the basket lying on the ground, and the angry owl clawing at it. The fish he did not see. He concluded that they were still in the basket, and that the owl was trying to get at them. This particular kind of owl, as he knew, was a most formidable antagonist; but with his substantial weight and his long, punishing jaws, he felt himself much more than a match for her. His eyes flamed green with indignation as he watched her trying to steal the prize which he had already marked down for his own. He darted forward on tip-toe,— noiselessly, as he thought,— and made a long leap at the flapping, dusky wings.

But the ears of an owl are a very miracle of sensitiveness. They can catch the squeak of a mouse at a distance which, for ordinary ears, would make the sharp clucking of a chipmunk inaudible. To the bird on the basket the coming of those velvet footsteps were like the scamper of a frightened sheep. She sprang into the air without an effort, hung for a moment to glare down upon the fox with her hard, round, moonpale eyes, and then sailed off without a sound, having no mind to try conclusions with the long-jawed red stranger.

THE fox was surprised to find the trout lying scattered about the grass, some of them bitten and mangled. What, then, was in the basket? What was the great owl trying to get at, when the precious fish were all spread out before her? Curiosity dominating his hunger, he stepped up to the basket and sniffed at the hole in the lid. Instantly there was a shrill, vicious snarl from within, and a wide-open, triangular mouth, set with white teeth, darted at his nose. He drew back hastily, and sat down on his tail, ears cocked and head tilted to one side, to consider.

It puzzled him greatly that there should be a mink in the basket. Tiptoeing cautiously around it, he saw that the lid was slightly open, so that the mink could come out if he wished. But the fox did not want him to come out. What the fox wanted was fish, not a fight with an adversary who would give him a lot of trouble. By all means, let the mink stay in there.

Keeping a sharp watch on the lid of the basket, the fox backed away cautiously several feet, lay down, and fell to devouring the trout. But never for an instant did he take his eyes off that slightly moving lid. He lay with his feet gathered under him, every muscle ready for action, expecting each moment to find himself involved in a desperate battle for the prize he was enjoying. He could not imagine a fiery-tempered personage like the mink tamely submitting to the rape of his banquet. He felt sure that in the next second or two a snaky black shape, all teeth and springs and venom, would dart from the basket and be at his throat. He was ready but was not hankering for trouble.

Meanwhile, there behind the basket lid, the mink was raging irresolutely. It galled him to the marrow to watch his big, arrogant, bush-tailed rival complacently gulping down those fine fat trout. But,— well, he had himself already eaten one of the trout, and a good part of another. His hunger was blunted. He could rage within reason. And his reason admonished him to keep out of this fight if it could be managed. He knew the whipcord muscle underlying that soft red fur, the deadly grip of those long, narrow jaws. There is no peace-counsellor like a contented belly. So he snarled softly to himself, and waited.

The fox, having swallowed as much as he could hold, stood up, stretched himself, and licked his chops. The look which he kept upon the basket was no less vigilant than before, but there was now a tinge of scorn in it. There were still some trout left. But he wanted to get away. He snatched up the two biggest fish in his jaws, and trotted off with them to the woods, glancing back over his shoulder as he went.

BEFORE he had gained the cover of the fir trees, the mink glided forth, planted his forepaws on the remaining fish, and stood staring after him in an attitude of challenge. Had the fox returned, the mink would now have fought. But the fox had no thought of returning. There was nothing to fight about. He had got what he wanted. He had no rooted objection to the mink having what was left. He trotted away nonchalantly toward his burrow under the roots of an old birch tree on the hill.

The mink stuffed himself till he could not get another mouthful down. There were still a couple of trout untouched. He eyed them regretfully; but he had not the fox's wit or providence to carry them off and hide them for future use. He left them, therefore, with a collection of neatly severed heads and tails, to mock the fishermen when they should return at sunset. He was feeling very drowsy. At a deliberate pace, quite unlike his usual eager and darting movements, he made off down the clearing toward the water. Beneath the bank was an old musquash hole which he was well acquainted with. Only the other day, indeed, he had cleared out its inhabitants, devouring their litter of young. He crawled into the hole, curled up on the soft, dead grass of the devastated nest, and cosily went to sleep.

CHAPTER X.

AN HOUR ON DECK.

MISS GUILE literally was blown into his presence. He sprang to his feet to check her swift approach before she could be dashed against the wall or upon the heap of chairs in the corner. The deep roll of the vessel had ended so suddenly that she was thrown off her balance, at best precariously maintained in the hurricane that swept her along the deck. She was projected with considerable violence against the waiting figure of R. Schmidt, who had hastily braced himself for the impact of the slender body in the thick sea-ulster. She uttered an excited little shriek as she came bang up against him and found his ready arms closing about her shoulders.

"Oh, goodness!" she gasped, with what little breath she had left, and then began to laugh as she freed herself in confusion — a very pretty confusion he recalled later on, after he had recovered to some extent from the effects of an exceedingly severe bump on the back of his head. "How awkward!"

"Not at all," he proclaimed, retaining a grip on one of her arms until the ship showed some signs of resuming its way eastward instead of downward.

"I am sure it must have hurt dreadfully," she cried. "Nothing hurts worse than a bump. It seemed as though you must have splintered the wall."

"I have a singularly hard head," said he, and forthwith felt the back of it.

"Will you please stand ready to receive boarders?

RETROSPECTIVE — Prince Robin of Graustark, traveling about the world, arrives in the Catskills to visit the Truxton Kings. W. W. Blithers, self-made multimillionaire and doting father of an only daughter, Maude, prematurely decides on the Prince as a son-in-law. He knows that Graustark is financially embarrassed as a result of the Balkan wars, and with the Blithers millions in mind he confides his domestic ambition to his wife. Blithers calls at the King villa and meets the Prince. He decides to lend Graustark $16,000,000, and departs for New York to confer with Count Quinnox, the Graustark Minister of War. Meanwhile it is decided to give a ball at Blitherwood in honor of Prince Robin. Maude does not attend the ball, and Mr. Blithers, meeting the Prince the next day, apologizes and invites him to dinner and to be his son-in-law. Maude writes her parents that she and her former governess are going abroad, she under an assumed name, and expect to book passage on the Jupiter. Coincidently Prince Robin plans his return to Graustark, and sails under the name R. Schmidt, to avoid publicity. He meets a mysterious Miss Guile on board and is infatuated.

Quite a pretty maid, with wide, horrified eyes and a pale green complexion came hustling around the corner. R. Schmidt, albeit a prince, received her with open arms.

"Merci, m'sieur!" she squealed and added something in muffled French that strangely reminded him of what Hobbs had said in English. Then she deposited an armful of rugs and magazines at Prince Robin's feet, and clutched wildly at a post actually some ten feet away, but which appeared to be coming toward her with obliging swiftness, so nicely was the deck rotating for her. "Mon Dieu! Mon Dieu!"

"You may go back to bed, Marie," cried her mistress in some haste.

maid, and then once more: "Merci, m'sieur!" She clung to the arm he extended, and tried bravely to smile her thanks.

"Here! Go in through this door," he said, bracing the door open with his elbow. "You'll be all right in a little while. Keep your nerve." He closed the door after her and turned to the amused Miss Guile. "Well, it's an ill wind that blows no good," he said enigmatically, and she flushed under the steady smile in his eyes. "Allow me to arrange your rug for you, Miss Guile."

"Thank you, no. I think I would better go inside. It is really too windy ——"

"The wind can't get at you back here in this cubby-hole," he protested. "Do sit down. I'll have you as snug as a bug in a rug before you can say Jack Robinson. See! Now stick 'em out and I'll wrap it around them. There! You're as neatly done up as a mummy and a good deal better off, because you are a long way short of being two thousand years old."

"How is your head, Mr. Schmidt?" she inquired with grave concern. "You seem to be quite crazy. I hope ——"

"Every one is a little bit mad, don't you think? Especially in moments of great excitement. I daresay my head has been turned quite appreciably, and I'm glad that you've been kind enough to notice it. Where is Mrs. Gaston?" He was vastly exhilarated.

She regarded him with eyes that sparkled and belied the unamiable nature of her reply.

"The poor lady is where she is not at all likely to be annoyed, Mr. Schmidt."

When Beauty Was Sacred

SEVEN vestal virgins tended the ever-burning sacred flame of Vesta in ancient Rome.

Absolute cleanliness was one of their religious obligations. Their house, which was maintained by the State, contained baths of surpassing beauty and luxury.

A most important feature of the toilet, as well as of every great Roman household, was the use of fine oils—apparently palm and olive.

The utter luxury of the Roman bath is today enjoyed by the more than two million women who use Palmolive Soap.

In this delightful form, palm and olive oils are most perfectly blended.

Those who use Palmolive daily find there is nothing else quite like it for cleansing, soothing and nourishing even the tenderest skin. It leaves the skin smooth, firm and white and protected against irritation.

Palm and Olive Oils give Palmolive its delicate color. Naught else is needed. The natural delightful fragrance is a veritable breath from the Orient. And the price is only 15c a cake.

Palmolive

In hard water or soft, hot water or cold, Palmolive lathers freely and quickly. It imparts a smooth, clear complexion, and adds that touch of charm unknown to any other soap. It is very hard—does not waste.

Palmolive Shampoo —the Olive Oil Shampoo—makes the hair lustrous and healthy, and is excellent for the scalp. It rinses out easily and leaves the hair soft and tractable. Price 50 cents.

something that lay deep in his.

"It would prove that all American girls are not so black as they're painted, wouldn't it?" she said, striving to regain the ground she had lost by that momentary lapse.

"Pray do not overlook the fact that I am half American," he said. "You must not expect me to say that they paint at all."

"Schmidt is a fine old American name," she mused, the mischief back in her eyes.

"And so is Bedelia," said he.

"Will you pardon me, Mr. Schmidt, if I express surprise that you speak English without the tiniest suggestion of an accent?"

"I will pardon you for everything and anything, Miss Guile," said he, quite too distinctly. She drew back in her chair and the light of raillery died in her eyes.

"What an imperial sound it has!"

"And why not? The R stands for Rex."

"Ah, that accounts for the King's English!"

"Certainly," he grinned. "The king can do no wrong, don't you see?"

"Your servant who was here speaks nothing but the King's English, I perceive. Perhaps that accounts for a great deal."

"Hobbs! I mean to say, 'Obbs? I confess that he has taught me many tricks of the tongue. He is one of the crown jewels."

Suddenly, and without reason, she appeared to be bored. As a matter of fact, she hid an incipient yawn behind her small gloved hand.

"I think I shall go to my room. Will you kindly unwrap me, Mr. Schmidt?"

He promptly obeyed, and then assisted her to her feet, steadying her against the roll of the vessel.

"I shall pray for continuous rough weather," he announced, with as gallant a bow as could be made under the circumstances.

"Thank you," she said, and he was pleased to take it that she was not thanking him for a physical service.

A few minutes later he was in his own rooms, and she was in hers, and the promenade deck was as barren as the desert of Sahara.

He found Count Quinnox stretched out upon his bed, attended not only by Hobbs but also the reanimated Dank. The crumpled message lay on the floor.

"I'm glad you waited awhile," said the young lieutenant, getting up from the trunk on which he had been sitting. "If you had come any sooner you would have heard words fit only for a soldier to bear. It really was quite appalling."

"He's better now," said Hobbs, more respectfully than was his wont. It was evident that he had sustained quite a shock.

"Well, what do you think of it?" demanded the Prince, pointing to the message.

"Of all the confounded impudence—" began the Count healthily, and then uttered a mighty groan of impotence. It was clear that he could not do justice to the occasion a second time.

ROBIN picked up the wireless message, and calmly smoothed out the crinkles. Then he read it aloud, very slowly and with extreme disgust in his fine young face. It was a lengthy communication from Baron Romano, the Prime Minister of Edelweiss.

Last week that foot had corns. But the owner read of Blue-jay.

She applied it one night and the pain instantly stopped. In 48 hours all the corns came out. And those corns will never come back.

That's the story folks have told about sixty million corns. And tens of thousands tell it every day.

Some of them used to pare corns, merely to relieve. Some of them tried the old-time treatments until they gave up in disgust.

Now never again will they suffer from corns. When one appears, Blue-jay goes on it.

There is no more pain. The corn is forgotten. In two days they lift it out. No soreness, no pain, no trouble.

That sounds too good to be true. But remember, please, that a million corns a month are ended in this Blue-jay way.

Why don't you let it put an end to yours?

A BASKET OF FISH

by Charles G.D. Roberts·
Illustration by Paul Bransom

FRESH and tender, the light of the mild spring afternoon caressed the little abandoned clearing in the wilderness. At the back of the clearing, beneath a solitary white birch tree just bursting into green, stood a squatter's log cabin, long deserted, its door and window gone, its roof of poles and bark half fallen in. Past the foot of the clearing, with dancing sparkle and a crisp, musical clamour, ran a shallow stream some dozen yards in width, its clear waters amber-tawny from the far-off cedar-swamps in which it took its rise. Along one side came the deeply rutted backwoods road, skirting the clearing, and making its precarious way across the stream by a rude bridge not lightly to be ventured after dark. Over all the faces of the lonely backwoods world was washed the high, thin green of the New Brunswick Maytime, under a sky of crystal cobalt dotted with dense white fleeces.

Before the ruined cabin stood a light wagon, its wheels and polished body bespattered with mud. In the open back of the wagon, thrust, well under the seat to be in shade, lay a large wicker fishing-basket, with a tuft of grass sticking out through the square hole in the cover. Some ten or a dozen paces distant, tethered beneath the birch tree, a sorrel horse munched the last remnants of a bundle of hay, and whisked his long tail to keep off the flies.

FROM behind a corner of the ruined cabin peered craftily a red fox. He eyed the wagon, he eyed the horse beneath the birch tree, he scrutinized the whole clearing, the road, and the open stretch of the stream. Then his narrowed, searching gaze returned to the wagon, and to the fat basket in the back of the wagon. At length he stepped forth, mincingly, into full view, trotted up, and sniffed inquisitively. As if in doubt, he raised himself on his hind legs, with his forepaws on the tire of the nearest wheel, and took a long, satisfying sniff. Yes, undoubtedly there were fish in the basket, fresh fish,— trout, in fact.

He wanted those fish exceedingly. It seemed easy enough to get them. He shifted his forepaws to the back of the wagon, and studied the situation. Why should he not climb up and help himself? The sorrel horse, catching a whiff of his pungent scent, looked around at him suddenly, and snorted. But what did he care for the disapproval of the sorrel horse? All horses, submissive and enslaved, he held in profoundest scorn. He would have those trout, whether the horse liked it or not. And anyhow, he saw that the horse was tethered to the tree. He settled himself back upon his haunches to spring into the wagon.

THEN a new idea flashed into his cunning red head. No one who valued fresh-caught trout at their full worth would leave them thus unguarded, unless for a sinister purpose. They were surely left there as a trap. The fox wrinkled his nose with mingled regret and disdain. He knew something of traps. He had once been nipped. He was not to be caught again, not he. What fools these men were, after all! His satisfaction at having seen through their schemes almost compensated him for the loss of the expected meal. He drew back, sat down on his tail, and eyed the wagon minutely for a while. Then he trotted away into the forest again to hunt wood-mice.

But it was just here that the red prowler's cunning overreached itself. The basket in the wagon was full of trout. And there was no trap to be feared. He might have feasted to his heart's content, and incurred no penalty more serious than the disapproval of the tethered horse, had he not been quite so amazingly clever. For even among the wild kindreds the prize is not always to him of nimble wit.

The trout were there in the basket simply because the fishing had been so good. The two fishermen who had driven out from town, in the grey of dawn, over those fifteen miles of bad backwoods road, had fished the stream upwards from the bridge throughout the morning. At this season the trout,— fine, vivid fish, of good pan size,— were lying in the open, dancing runs and about the tails of the rapids; and they were rising freely to almost any bright fly, though with a preference for a red hackle. Toward noon the fishermen had returned to the clearing to lunch beneath the birch-tree and to feed and water the horse. They had emptied all their catch into one basket, stowed the basket under the wagon-seat, then started off again to fish the finer reaches of the stream, with its wide poles and long, sunlit rapids, below the bridge. Good fishermen, but not expert woodsmen, they had no idea that, here in the solitude, they ran any risk of being robbed of their morning's spoils.

Soon after the departure of the over-crafty fox, a backwoods tramp came by with a ragged little bundle slung from the stick on his shoulder. His eyes lighted up at sight of the unguarded wagon from town, and he understood the situation at a glance. In the front of the wagon, by the dashboard, he found a lunch-basket,— still half-full, as the fishermen had provided themselves for another substantial meal. He hurriedly devoured about half the contents of the lunch-basket, transferred the rest to his dirty bundle, and with huge content lighted a half-burned cigar which one of the fishermen had left lying on a log. Next he investigated the fishing-basket. Half a dozen of the finest fish he took out and strung upon a forked twig. This he did not regard as stealing, but merely as the exaction of a small and reasonable tribute from a Society which had of late neglected to feed him any too well. Puffing his cigar butt in high good humor, he went over and made friends with the horse, feeding it a few handfuls of fresh grass. Then, with the string of fish dangling beside his bundle and flapping against it as he walked, he resumed his solitary journey, picked his way over the dilapidated bridge, and vanished into the fir forest beyond. The horse, feeling rather lonely, neighed after him.

AN abandoned clearing or a deserted log cabin, something to which Man has set his hand and then withdrawn it, seems always a place of peculiar fascination to the creatures of the wilderness. They have some sense, perhaps, of having regained a lost dominion. Or possibly they think, from these, his leavings, to learn something significant of Man's mysterious over-lordship. In any case, the attraction seldom fails.

The tramp had not been long gone, when a new visitor arrived. Up from the fringing bushes along the stream's edge came furtively a little, low, long-bodied beast, in shape

In the adjoining suite, Miss Guile was shaking Mrs. Gaston out of a long-courted and much needed sleep. The poor lady sat up and blinked feebly at the excited, starry-eyed girl.

"Wake up!" cried Bedelia impatiently. "What do you think? I have a perfectly wonderful suspicion—perfectly wonderful."

"How can you be so unfeeling?" moaned the limp lady.

"This R. Schmidt is Prince Robin of Graustark!" cried the girl excitedly. "I am sure of it—just as sure as can be."

Mrs. Gaston's eyes were popping, not with amazement but alarm.

"Do lie down, child," she whimpered. "Marie! The sleeping powders at once! Do—"

"Oh, I'm not mad," cried the girl. "Now listen to me and I'll tell you why I believe—yes, actually believe him to be the—"

"Marie, do you hear me?"

Miss Guile shook her vigorously. "Wake up! It isn't a nightmare. Now listen!"

CHAPTER XI.

THE LIEUTENANT RECEIVES ORDERS.

THE next day brought not only an agreeable change in the weather but a most surprising alteration in the manner of Mrs. Gaston, whose attitude toward R. Schmidt and his friends had been anything but amicable up to the hour of Miss Guile's discovery. The excellent lady, recovering very quickly from her indisposition became positively polite to the hitherto repugnant Mr. Schmidt. She melted so abruptly and so completely that the young man was vaguely troubled. He began to wonder if his incognito had been pierced, so to speak.

Now it is necessary to relate that Miss Guile had been particularly firm in her commands to Mrs. Gaston. She literally had stood the excellent lady up in a corner and lectured her for an hour on the wisdom of silence. In the first place, Mrs. Gaston was given to understand that she was not to breathe it to a soul that R. Schmidt was not R. Schmidt, and she was not to betray to him by word or sign that he was suspected of being the Prince of Graustark. Moreover, the exacting Miss Guile laid great stress upon another command: R. Schmidt was never to know that she was not Miss Guile, but some one else altogether.

"You're right, my dear," exclaimed Mrs. Gaston in an excited whisper as she burst in upon her fair companion, who was having coffee and toast in her parlor. The more or less resuscitated Marie was waiting to do up her mistress's hair, and the young lady herself was alluringly charming in spite of the fact that it was not already "done up." "He is the—er—he is just what you think."

"Good heavens, you haven't gone and done it, have you?" cried the girl, a slim hand halting with a piece of toast half way to her lips.

"Gone and done it?"

"You haven't been blabbing, have you?"

"How can you say that to me? Am I not to be trusted? Am I so weak and—"

"Don't cry, you old dear! Forgive me. But now tell me—absolutely—just what you've been up to. And Mrs. Gaston repeated every word of the conversation she had had with R. Schmidt, proving absolutely nothing but stoutly maintaining that her intuition was completely to be depended upon.

"And, oh," she whispered in conclusion, "wouldn't it be perfectly wonderful if you two should fall in love with each other—"

Eggs in wrong combination and an excess of starchy (paste making) and fatty foods make people sluggish and cause dull, splitting headaches, lack of memory and concentration, drowsiness and inertia. A complete change to "digestible" brainy foods (suitable meat, game, fish and suitable dairy foods, combined with suitable vegetables and fruits according to the new brainy food plan) produces the most marked improvements in a few weeks.

A thin man, after being out of work nearly a year through weakness, was restored in three weeks to hard work as a carpenter at full pay. In such cases the change from wrong combinations of foods, an excess of starchy, cloggy, death producing foods to energizing foods causes a literal transformation.

Another person, deaf in the right ear, owing to a discharge caused by an excess of mucus making foods (cream, butter, cheese, etc.), completely eliminated the catarrh, thereby restoring his hearing by taking correct combinations of suitable foods.

A case of kidney and bladder trouble of ten years' standing was saved from a surgical operation. Abstinence from all irritating drinks and certain irritating foods proved within a few days that no operation would be needed.

Chronic skin diseases, such as prurigo, which have failed to respond to customary treatment, have disappeared within three months.

A chronic sufferer, weighing 415 pounds, unable to exercise, reduced over 150 pounds (in public life, under many witnesses), gained strength and firmer flesh, and lost rheumatism.

H. Ward Leonard

A Square Deal for Inventors

By H. Ward Leonard

An Engineer Who Has Figured Largely in the Industrial Development of the World

IT is a common impression among those who are not familiar with the origin and development of patent systems that the United States Patent Office exists in order to reward meritorious inventors. This is an open question. There is no reason why inventors should have any exceptional privileges and they never have had. But they merit a square deal, insofar as invention is the principal factor in efficiency of production. and is largely responsible for the manufacturing supremacy of the United States. Hence the important question arises: what is the best method of stimulating the creation of the most valuable inventions and ensuring prompt disclosure?

If, as frequently asserted, a corporation, by employing men of inventive minds and furnishing them the best equipped laboratories, libraries and assistants, can produce inventions of greater value than can be produced by independent inventors, then the logical thing to do is to abolish the patent system. But if it is a fact that the great inventions have always been made by independent inventors, then the logical thing to do is to adopt as the platform of patent reform "Back to the Constitution," and see to it that a patent gives to the inventor the reasonable security in an exclusive right which the Constitution intended he should have.

The practical question is how can a patentee be given reasonable protection, when, for example, his patent has been deliberately infringed by one of perhaps several hundred members of an association, in which such members join forces to furnish the money, influence and legal talent needed to make the inventor accept the terms offered by their one representative. Or when his patent is deliberately appropriated by members of an association whose members tax themselves to "protect themselves" against any inventor who tries to assert his patent rights against any of their members. Or when a large manufacturing company, which after combining numerous companies and thereby securing the protection due to several thousand patents in one field of industry, infringes scores of patents of one inventor and says it is too large to be bothered with paying royalties.

ORVILLE WRIGHT is reported to have said recently that $200,000 was needed to pay for his side of the legal fight on one patent, and this is not very exceptional.

Evidently if it is good policy for the United States to stimulate the patenting of inventions by independent inventors, some way must be found for reasonably and promptly securing a patentee against unscrupulous and piratical infringement.

It should be born in mind that before a patent is sustained by a court the court must be convinced that the patent is clearly infringed and also that it is clearly valid.

In trying to prove that the patent is invalid the wealthy infringer can go back to the origin of historic records, and drag the inventor all over the world to meet the paid-for testimony of false witnesses.

But as to the question of infringement of the claims it is different. The real patent pirate is undoubtedly infringing the claims of the patent. In fact it is customary in such cases for the pirate to stipulate the fact that he is infringing the claims when the suit is first started. He merely asserts that the government erred in granting the patent and would not have done so had the Patent Office known its business.

To meet such cases of unquestionable and deliberate infringement of a patent which the Patent Office has said is valid and the infringer says is invalid, a bill has been introduced in Congress by Chairman Oldfield, of the Patent Committee. This bill provides that whenever the patentee has established to the satisfaction of the court that the claims granted by the Patent Office are infringed and the patentee has made a motion for a royalty payment in the way provided for in the bill, the court shall order that, pending the determination of the question of validity by the court, the infringer shall pay a royalty of five per cent upon every infringing article he sells until he has established to the satisfaction of the court that the Patent Office was wrong in issuing his patent to him.

But in accepting this five per cent royalty the patentee waives any further claim as to the articles upon which the royalty is paid, in the nature of damages and profits, and can never make any further claim against those articles based upon other patents owned or controlled by him at the time the court grants the five per cent royalty.

UNDER such a modification of the Patent Laws, the average inventor could probably cope single handed with the largest and most powerful Association or Chamber of Commerce or equivalent combination. And in fact the unconscionable infringement of patents would probably cease because this five per cent royalty would enable the inventor to pay for his legal fight and hence such legal fights would seldom start. A capitalist would dare once more to invest money in a good patent. Inventors would be stimulated to increased efforts.

The courts would be freed from the clog of intentionally complicated and delayed patent suits and in many cases the inventor would become the most efficient manufacturer in his line in the world.

One thing is very clear. Congress ought to either abolish the present patent system, on the ground that it is no longer necessary or desirable, or else it should make a patent an asset instead of a liability to the patentee.

fall in love with you for yourself and not because —"

"I have also said that I will not marry any man, prince, duke, king, count or anything else unless I am in love with him. Don't overlook that, please."

"But he is really very nice. I should think you could fall in love with him. Just think how it would please your father and mother. Just think —"

"I won't be bullied!"

"Am I bullying you?" in amazement.

"No; but father tries to bully me, and you know it."

"You must admit that the — this Mr. Schmidt is handsome, charming, bright —"

"I admit nothing," said Miss Guile resolutely, and ordered Marie to dress her hair as carefully as possible. "Take as long as you like, Marie. I shall not go on deck for hours."

"I — I told him you would be up soon," stammered the poor, man-hating ex-governess.

"You did?" said Miss Guile, with what was supposed to be a deadly look in her eyes.

"Well, he enquired," said the other.

"Anything else?" domineered the beauty.

"I forgot to mention one thing. He did ask me if your name was really Bedelia."

"And what did you tell him?" cried the girl in sudden agitation.

"I managed to tell him that it was," said Mrs. Gaston stiffly.

"Good!" cried Miss Guile, vastly relieved, and not at all troubled over the blight that had been put upon a very worthy lady's conscience.

When she appeared on deck long afterward, she found every chair occupied. She started for a walk; then, feeling that people were following her with their eyes — admiringly, to be sure, but what of that? — she abandoned the pleasant exercise and sought the seclusion of the sunless corner where her chair was stationed. The ship's daily newspaper was just off the press and many of the loungers were reading the brief telegraphic news from the capitals of the world.

During her stroll she passed several groups of men and women who were lightly, even scornfully employed in discussing an article of news which had to do with Mr. Blithers and the Prince of Graustark. Filled with an acute curiosity, she procured a copy of the paper from a steward, and was glancing at the head lines as she made her way into her corner. Double-leaded type appeared over the rumored engagement of Miss Maud Applegate Blithers, the beautiful and accomplished daughter of the great capitalist, and Robin, Prince of Graustark. A queer little smile played about her lips as she folded the paper for future perusal. Turning the corner of the deck-building she almost collided with R. Schmidt, who stood leaning against the wall, scanning the little newspaper with eyes that were blind to everything else.

"Oh!" she gasped.

"I'm sorry," he exclaimed, crumpling the paper in his hand as he backed away, flushing. "Stupid of me. Good morning."

"Good morning, Mr. Schmidt. It wasn't your fault. I should have looked where I was going. 'Stop, look and listen,' as they say at the railway crossings."

"'Danger' is one of the commonest signs, Miss Guile. It lurks everywhere, especially around corners. I see you have a paper. It appears that Miss Blithers and the Prince are to be married after all."

Every Granule Exploded In Prof. Anderson's Way

Those cells in each Puffed Grain are caused by a hundred million explosions. Each separate food granule is exploded from inside.

The grains are sealed in guns, then subjected to fearful heat. Thus the trifle of moisture inside of each granule is changed to explosive steam.

Then the guns are shot and the steam explodes. Each granule is blasted to pieces.

This is Prof. Anderson's process for making digestion easy and complete. No other process does that. In the best of cooking at least half of the granules remain solid and unbroken.

So Puffed Grains are more than enticing. They are scientific foods. Your physician knows them to be the best-cooked foods in existence.

Good for 10 Cents

Buy from your grocer a 15-cent package of Puffed Rice. Then present this coupon and he will give you a 10-cent package of Puffed Wheat. He will collect the 10 cents from us.

Serve some of these grains with cream and sugar. Mix some of them with fruit. Serve some for supper, like bread or crackers, floating in bowls of milk.

Use some like nut meats in home candy making or as garnish for ice cream. And let the children when at play eat the grains like peanuts. You will find these both foods and confections. Cut out this coupon, lay it aside and present it when you go to the store.

FLAT CHESTED FOR 15 YEARS

SHE DEVELOPED HER FORM SIX INCHES IN THIRTY DAYS

Any Lady Can Now Do the Same by Following the Simple Directions Given Below

Why Exercises, Massage, Creams, Prescriptions, Apparatus, Appliances and Similar Methods Can Never Develop the Bust

No longer need any woman suffer the humiliation of a flat, scraggy chest, nor endure the thoughtless shafts of ridicule or pity which pierce the hearts of those unfortunate members of her sex who lack that distinguishing and essential attribute of perfect feminine beauty, a perfect bust. For fifteen years I vainly longed for this alluring attraction that nature had denied me, and the lack of which overshadowed every other attraction I possessed. I foolishly and vainly tried worthless and harmful pills and medicine, also massage, creams, exercises, vacuum appliances, apparatus, electricity, prescriptions and everything else I had ever heard of, but only harm resulted, so I was finally obliged to give up in despair and conclude that my condition was hopeless and must be due to hereditary causes, like being too tall or too short.

The miracle working discovery which finally released me from this condition was purely accidental and one which I shall never cease to regard as providential. A dull, dreary world became gay and bright again. I felt like a butterfly newly burst from its cocoon. In a single month my busts were developed six inches, the hollows in my cheeks, neck, chest, shoulders were quickly filled out and made marvelously smooth, graceful and fascinating in contour; from a flat chested, imperfect, angular, masculine appearing member of my sex I was transformed into the full bosomed and sublime perfection of ideal womanhood. I neither need nor desire the slightest profit for explaining to others the method that did so much for me, and I have nothing whatever to sell, this offer being prompted by gratitude alone.

I found that the breasts, being the only organs in the human body which lie idle and out of use the greater part of one's lifetime, they positively can never be developed by treating them as though they were simple muscles or other organs in use daily with regular and constant functions to perform. I firmly believe that the new and radically different method of developing which I discovered is the only one in existence which takes this fact into consideration, and the utter failure of all the other methods, treatments, medicine and appliances which I formerly used in thus fully explained. The first moment you feel the tingling, exhilarating action my treatment exerts, the forerunner of the splendid development soon to follow, you will then be able to realize why it cannot fail to cause dormant tissues to rapidly develop as they awaken to new life.

Without knowing it, you already have the facilities for using the treatment in the strict privacy of your own home unknown to your most intimate friends. My only caution to you is, do not use the treatment unless you really require at least 3 to 4 inches or more bust development. Do not use it to develop other parts of your body without developing the bust, for, while it greatly improves the general health and fills out neck, shoulders and chest, it is certain to act primarily upon the mammary glands of the bust. As the development is permanent and cannot be reduced afterward be sure to discontinue the treatment as soon as your bust becomes exactly the size and firmness desired. Growth cannot continue after treatment is stopped, but on account of the strong, stimulating action exerted you may begin to gradually lessen the treatment as your bust begins to reach the required size and firmness.

Inquiries concerning my method have been so extremely numerous that, although many are letters from personal acquaintances, I found it impossible to write a personal letter in reply to each. I have therefore decided to have a full description of my method printed in the form of a small booklet for free distribution to any ladies sufficiently interested to send me two 2 cent stamps for return postage. I have nearly a thousand of these booklets left, and this offer is made in the belief that it may prove of interest to the general public as well as to my personal acquaintances. Simply send your name and address to Margarette Merlain, Suite 1880 Pembroke House, Oxford street, London, W., England, and, while they last, a regular copy of my booklet will be sent to you by return post, sealed in plain package. Postage on a letter to England is only 2 cents, and no [illegible] for I have nothing to sell, [illegible] my object in consenting to have this article published.

This picture shows the wonderful development referred to in this article.

A New and Growing Southern California Industry.

By Charles Alma Byers.

THE TOOTHSOME TUNA.

LITTLE Willie may not have been a very good Bible student, but he was evidently a very keen observer. And it is quite likely that his father was a very active member of the Boosters' Club. His Sunday-school teacher asked him one day if he could tell her where it was that Noah landed with his ark.

"Sure; in California," was his prompt reply.

"What makes you say California?" the teacher asked.

"Why, everybody comes to California. And I know, too, because we have so many things that other places ain't got. Big trees and Indians and strange animals and —and——"

Willie may have been, unconsciously, a little over-enthusiastic, but we surely can't blame him. California unquestionably has an unusually large number of things, in the way of natural attractions and peculiar industries, that other places "ain't got." Among its peculiar industries is the canning of albicore, often called tuna, a new exclusive California industry which, it would seem, will never be possessed by any other place in the world.

The albicore, a deep-sea fish, is, at present, found only along the coast of Southern California, from Santa Barbara to San Diego. Here in season, that is from about the first of June to the last of January, it is found in large numbers, and is easily ably smaller. The former rarely exceeds fifty pounds in weight, whereas the latter frequently reaches more than three times that weight. Both are gamy, and angling for them, particularly the tuna, has long been an exciting sport for rod and reel fishermen at Catalina Island. Certain species of the tuna have been found in various places, notably in the Mediterranean, but, as already stated, the albicore seems peculiar to the waters of the California coast.

The canning of albicore was begun about six years ago, but until last year it was only in what might be termed its experimental stage as an industry. Last season 115,000 cases, of four dozen one-pound cans each, were put up, and it is estimated that the coming season's pack will be more than double that amount. There were eight packing companies engaged in the business last year, but this year there will be ten or more. A single firm last season canned approximately ten tons, and this season it will be prepared to put up about thirty tons.

The product is considered a delicacy equal, if not superior, to salmon, and has found a good market wherever it has been introduced. It has been shipped already to all parts of the United States, many large consignments going to New York City and other eastern points. Although it should rightly be called albicore, it is variously canned under the names of tuna and albicore-tuna, as well as under its proper name.

The fish used for canning purposes vary in size from about fifteen to forty pounds in weight. At the beginning of the season rather mysteriously, for it is not known just where they come from, and they are much more plentiful some seasons than others. Most of the packing is done at San Pedro, and there is a large fleet of boats here, mostly gasoline launches, which is engaged exclusively in the catching of albicore for these packing-houses. The boats emerge from the harbor at about daybreak each morning, and are soon plowing the open sea in search of a school, for the fish always run in large schools. So-called "fisherman's luck" is a conspicuous element of the business. Sometimes a school will be sighted very early in the morning, and then again one may not be found until late in the afternoon. Quite often the little boats are compelled to go many miles, sometimes a distance of seventy miles, before they meet with success. If the "school" is sighted early the fishermen will often be back in port with their cargo by noon, and occasionally one of these thirty-foot launches will return bearing a load of as much as three or four tons of fish. The usual catch, however, is from 500 to 700 pounds.

Upon being sighted, the boat is steered into the midst of the school, which is usually engaged in a wild war upon a school of sardines, and the fishermen, numbering from two to four to each boat, immediately begin to throw overboard from a barrel handfuls of other sardines. There is soon a wild scramble, and the albicore become so excited that the sardines have scarcely time to touch the water before they are grabbed. In a few minutes the fishermen begin to lower their short, strong lines, with hooks bated with sardines, into the water, and for some time thereafter the heavy cane-poles as outriggers from each side of the boat, and in this way each fisherman will be able to hande about four lines. The latter method is used largely by the Japanese, who are especially successful in catching this fish.

The fish are cleaned immediately after being caught, and the blood is allowed to drain, this assuring a perfectly white meat. The catching and the first cleaning of the fish is a business entirely independent of the packing, each fisherman being free to dispose of his catch to anyone he wishes to, and receiving therefor a price of so much per pound.

After being weighed and received by the packing-house, the fish are transferred to a draining-room, where they are hung by the tails until every drop of blood is drained. They are then taken down and placed on wire trays, each of which holds four or five fish. The trays are stacked into rolling racks and run into sealed, steam-tight cookers. When cooked, the fish are placed on large cooking tables, and after becoming entirely cold are taken in charge by a corps of women, who remove all skin and bones and cut them into large single pieces that just fill a can. Only the white meat is used, and the pieces are packed in the cans with pure salad oil.

Traveling chains carry the cans from the packing tables into automatic sealers, after which they are ready for retorting. The sealed cans are placed in steam-tight drums, where they are left in live steam for sufficient time for the oil to become properly cooked into the meat. After venting, the cans are ready for cleaning and labeling.

Canned albicore is a solid white meat, a single piece usually to each can, and, unlike salmon, is entirely free of bones and skin. It promises to become a strong rival of the salmon, and, unless present indications are erroneous, it will become an important industry confined exclusively to Southern California.

living, I'm not sure but he knows more about the I.W.W. than he lets on.

Surely, a garden is life in miniature. The clean good growth, the velvety flower, the well-flavored fruitage are inextricably involved with the parasite and the destroyer. Eternal struggle is the price of increase, even with the kind hand of the Husbandman training and pruning, preparing the soil and tempering the elemental stress.

But, after all, the garden is good. The cooler days prevailed again. The sweet peas are in bloom along the fence, as fragrant as hope or one's faith in his best-beloved. The muskmelons and cucumbers are coming on most gratifyingly, while the Kentucky Wonders are climbing the bean-poles like the fabulous Jack himself, and the second planting of peas is already yielding a crop.

Let the snail stay on the thorn, if he wants to. Maybe he's comfortable there. And anyhow, the thorn has a rose just above it.

Healing by Electric Light.

[Electrical World:] The therapeutic value of electric light is now very generally recognized by most physicians, and the most memorable work in light treatment is that of Dr. Niels Finsen of Denmark, whose labors in this field won for him the $50,000 Nobel prize. Dr. Finsen discovered that the chemical rays of light destroy certain disease germs and by means of these rays, usually obtained from a powerful electric arc lamp, he has been able to effect a cure for lupus—an ulcerous disease which is rather rare in America, though common in Europe. The head of the Finsen Light Institute of Copenhagen has also successfully applied the electric arc light in the treatment of patients suffering from surgical tuberculosis. An ordinary arc lamp is placed about a yard away from the patient and the affected part is exposed for fifteen minutes a day at first to two and one-half hours farther along in the treatment. In most cases artificial light has given better results than sunlight.

[Judge:] Crawford: So you're going to give up your doctor because he doesn't understand your physical condition?

Crabshaw: Yes; he seems more interested in my financial condition.

A New and Growing Southern California Industry.

By Charles Alma Byers.

THE TOOTHSOME TUNA.

LITTLE Willie may not have been a very good Bible student, but he was evidently a very keen observer. And it is quite likely that his father was a very active member of the Boosters' Club. His Sunday-school teacher asked him one day if he could tell her where it was that Noah landed with his ark.

"Sure; in California," was his prompt reply.

"What makes you say California?" the teacher asked.

"Why, everybody comes to California. And I know, too, because we have so many things that other places ain't got. Big trees and Indians and strange animals and —and——"

Willie may have been, unconsciously, a little over-enthusiastic, but we surely can't blame him. California unquestionably has an unusually large number of things, in the way of natural attractions and peculiar industries, that other places "ain't got." Among its peculiar industries is the canning of albicore, often called tuna, a new exclusive California industry which, it would seem, will never be possessed by any other place in the world.

The albicore, a deep-sea fish, is, at present, found only along the coast of Southern California, from Santa Barbara to San Diego. Here in season, that is from about the first of June to the last of January, it is found in large numbers, and is easily caught with hook and line. The government, however, has recently undertaken the study of the habitat of the albicore, and it is possible, but scarcely probable, that the fish may be found to exist in a few other places. The albicore belongs to the same family as the tuna, but is considerably smaller. The former rarely exceeds fifty pounds in weight, whereas the latter frequently reaches more than three times that weight. Both are gamy, and angling for them, particularly the tuna, has long been an exciting sport for rod and reel fishermen at Catalina Island. Certain species of the tuna have been found in various places, notably in the Mediterranean, but, as already stated, the albicore seems peculiar to the waters of the California coast.

The canning of albicore was begun about six years ago, but until last year it was only in what might be termed its experimental stage as an industry. Last season 115,000 cases, of four dozen one-pound cans each, were put up, and it is estimated that the coming season's pack will be more than double that amount. There were eight packing companies engaged in the business last year, but this year there will be ten or more. A single firm last season canned approximately ten tons, and this season it will be prepared to put up about thirty tons.

The product is considered a delicacy equal, if not superior, to salmon, and has found a good market wherever it has been introduced. It has been shipped already to all parts of the United States, many large consignments going to New York City and other eastern points. Although it should rightly be called albicore, it is variously canned under the names of tuna and albicore-tuna, as well as under its proper name.

The fish used for canning purposes vary in size from about fifteen to forty pounds in weight. At the beginning of the season the average size is from fifteen to twenty pounds, but as the packing progresses the fish gradually become larger until at the close of the season in January the average size has increased to from thirty to forty pounds.

The fish appear in the Coast waters rather mysteriously, for it is not known just where they come from, and they are much more plentiful some seasons than others. Most of the packing is done at San Pedro, and there is a large fleet of boats here, mostly gasoline launches, which is engaged exclusively in the catching of albicore for these packing-houses. The boats emerge from the harbor at about daybreak each morning, and are soon plowing the open sea in search of a school, for the fish always run in large schools. So-called "fisherman's luck" is a conspicuous element of the business. Sometimes a school will be sighted very early in the morning, and then again one may not be found until late in the afternoon. Quite often the little boats are compelled to go many miles, sometimes a distance of seventy miles, before they meet with success. If the "school" is sighted early the fishermen will often be back in port with their cargo by noon, and occasionally one of these thirty-foot launches will return bearing a load of as much as three or four tons of fish. The usual catch, however, is from 500 to 700 pounds.

Upon being sighted, the boat is steered into the midst of the school, which is usually engaged in a wild war upon a school of sardines, and the fishermen, numbering from two to four to each boat, immediately begin to throw overboard from a barrel handfuls of other sardines. There is soon a wild scramble, and the albicore become so excited that the sardines have scarcely time to touch the water before they are grabbed. In a few minutes the fishermen begin to lower their short, strong lines, with hooks bated with sardines, into the water, and for some time thereafter the action in the boat is swift and exciting.

Several methods of fishing for albicore, however, are employed. Some fishermen troll for the fish with heavy lines to which is fastened a bone jig hook, and as the jig is hauled through the water the fish will strike it for a live sardine. Others will use heavy cane-poles as outriggers from each side of the boat, and in this way each fisherman will be able to hande about four lines. The latter method is used largely by the Japanese, who are especially successful in catching this fish.

The fish are cleaned immediately after being caught, and the blood is allowed to drain, this assuring a perfectly white meat. The catching and the first cleaning of the fish is a business entirely independent of the packing, each fisherman being free to dispose of his catch to anyone he wishes to, and receiving therefor a price of so much per pound.

After being weighed and received by the packing-house, the fish are transferred to a draining-room, where they are hung by the tails until every drop of blood is drained. They are then taken down and placed on wire trays, each of which holds four or five fish. The trays are stacked into rolling racks and run into sealed, steam-tight cookers. When cooked, the fish are placed on large cooking tables, and after becoming entirely cold are taken in charge by a corps of women, who remove all skin and bones and cut them into large single pieces that just fill a can. Only the white meat is used, and the pieces are packed in the cans with pure salad oil.

Traveling chains carry the cans from the packing tables into automatic sealers, after which they are ready for retorting. The sealed cans are placed in steam-tight drums, where they are left in live steam for sufficient time for the oil to become properly cooked into the meat. After venting, the cans are ready for cleaning and labeling.

Canned albicore is a solid white meat, a single piece usually to each can, and, unlike salmon, is entirely free of bones and skin. It promises to become a strong rival of the salmon, and, unless present indications are erroneous, it will become an important industry confined exclusively to Southern California.

Growing Pains.

TWO SORTS OF NATURE TO RECKON WITH.

By Neeta Marquis.

The pansies in our little California backyard garden all face toward the west. That is because most of their sunlight comes from that direction. So we have to go halfway down, between the lettuce and the onion beds, and then look back at them to get the full benefit of their cheerful, varied countenances. And then, such a gladness to the eyes as they are!

They are such alert, intelligent-looking youngsters that it is stimulating to take even the most casual survey of them. Perhaps the most dashing is the big golden one with faint black pencillings on his chin. He cocks his eye so gaily at the sky, as if he said:

"I feel the earth move sunward,
I join the great march onward,
And take by faith while living
My freehold of thanksgiving!"

Then there is the milk-white one, large and calm, which upon examination looks as if someone had tattooed it with a fine pen dipped in dark blue ink. Its name is Silver Queen, and it makes me think of Little Snow White in the fairy tale.

When there are fifty pansies in bloom at once, it is hard to choose the most fascinating—the rich purple Earl of Beaconsfield with a golden eye, the mahogany one, the French gray with blue velvet dots, the claret-color edged with silver, the new London make, or the Bismarck in two regal shades of blue. But the way to appreciate them best is to get down almost on one's knees beside the bed and turn each little visage up until it looks straight into one's own, and say:

"Good morning, my dear! I wish I might always greet the day with such a shining morning face as you, who have grown up so mysteriously from a queer little seed and after so short a life will be content to lay your bright head in the dust of things again. Dust can't be so bitter and humiliating, after all, since it is mixed with pansies!"

There is another one, deep cream-tinted with a black dab on his chin, like an urchin who has been eating bread and jam. I think this was the identical one Milton meant when he wrote:

"The pansy freaked with jet,
The glowing violet,
The musk-rose and the well-attired woodbine."

I have a strong impulse to wash this little chap's face for him and make him promise to keep away from the fruit cupboard.

But, dear me, such a shock as I had the other morning, when I stooped to pluck a huge blossom which measured two inches from ear to ear, and more than that from chin to forehead! It was one of the monkey-faced pansies, blue with irregular patches of yellow, and whiskery touches of indigo across the cheeks. It was a fat, honest-looking face, like the lad who always blurts out the truth on the most embarrassing occasions. But hanging from its lip, down across the broad chin, was a wretched little long brown worm, as if the little pansy-boy were nursing a limp and vile cigarette.

Shrinking with disgust, but spurred on by a Juvenile Protective instinct, I took up a twig and carefully removed the obtruding reptile. Then I plucked the pansy and transferred it to a wormless environment.

Twice I had a similar shock when gathering lettuce. I broke off two cool, crisp green heads, only to find a great round green worm at the core of each.

Now, as it happens, I have schooled myself to be philosophical about animal life of all sorts. I am studiously kind to the creeping thing that creepeth, from the Book of Genesis down to the latest text on biology. I have learned while rejoicing with the poet over the lark on the wing to be reconciled also to the snail on the thorn. I try earnestly to remember not to call any created thing common or unclean.

But in spite of my schoolings and philosophies and philanthropies, and squarely in the face of both poetry and science, the unhappy fact remains that I—do—not—like—worms.

And here, in my own sweet little domain, the unwelcome presence has had to obtrude itself. Does every earthly Eden "gotta" have its serpent?—every lettuce-head a reptilian monster preying on its heart? It seems such a pity. And yet, when one declares soulfully that he "loves nature," he must remember that there are always these two sorts of nature to reckon with.

Another disappointment in my garden is the mulberry tree. The berries which came out so red and promising a few weeks ago, when I went to note their development the other day had completely disappeared. Closer search revealed shriveled little black bunches where the forming fruit had been.

And so another dream had gone glimmering.

The botanist tells me that it is often so with fruit. It reaches a critical point in its life, and if all conditions are not then favorable for it to go forward, it turns around and goes back—strikes in, as it were, like a case of measles when the patient takes cold.

Well, existence, for both people and plants, is certainly a "peculiar proposition."

Those hot, unseasonable days in the middle of April settled things with the first planting of peas, too. They burned the plants almost crisp. Peas, it seems, are "impatient" of heat, to use the botanist's expression, as other sorts of plants are "impatient" of wet and cold. It is the old familiar story of unfavorable environment as a reason for unfulfilled promise.

The loquats, moreover, have been undergoing a severe trial. Theirs, however, was less from weather conditions than from feathered depredators. Dickie Linnet and Peter Mocking Bird became so unsparing in their assaults upon them, presenting their bills so often and insistently, that we had to cover the fruit clusters with pieces of cloth and bunches of excelsior in order to have any left for jelly-making.

And such an excitement as followed upon this measure! Peter Mocking Bird hopped irately around the kitchen windows demanding an explanation, for all the world as if he had been a taxpayer robbed by a soulless corporation. The Linnet family were more practical, and began to carry the excelsior off, bit by bit, for building material.

Birds are certainly the original Communists, reaping where they have not sown, gathering where they have not strawed. And from the impudent bravado with which Peter Mocking Bird lays down the law to the proprietors of the garden from which he collects a large part of his gratuitous living, I'm not sure but he knows more about the I.W.W. than he lets on.

Surely, a garden is life in miniature. The clean good growth, the velvety flower, the well-flavored fruitage are inextricably involved with the parasite and the destroyer. Eternal struggle is the price of increase, even with the kind hand of the Husbandman training and pruning, preparing the soil and tempering the elemental stress.

But, after all, the garden is good. The cooler days prevailed again. The sweet peas are in bloom along the fence, as fragrant as hope or one's faith in his best-beloved. The muskmelons and cucumbers are coming on most gratifyingly, while the Kentucky Wonders are climbing the beanpoles like the fabulous Jack himself, and the second planting of peas is already yielding a crop.

Let the snail stay on the thorn, if he wants to. Maybe he's comfortable there. And anyhow, the thorn has a rose just above it.

Healing by Electric Light.

[Electrical World:] The therapeutic value of electric light is now very generally recognized by most physicians, and the most memorable work in light treatment is that of Dr. Niels Finsen of Denmark, whose labors in this field won for him the $50,000 Nobel prize. Dr. Finsen discovered that the chemical rays of light destroy certain disease germs and by means of these rays, usually obtained from a powerful electric arc lamp, he has been able to effect a cure for lupus—an ulcerous disease which is rather rare in America, though common in Europe. The head of the Finsen Light Institute of Copenhagen has also successfully applied the electric arc light in the treatment of patients suffering from surgical tuberculosis. An ordinary arc lamp is placed about a yard away from the patient and the affected part is exposed for fifteen minutes a day at first to two and one-half hours farther along in the treatment. In most cases artificial light has given better results than sunlight.

[Judge:] Crawford: So you're going to give up your doctor because he doesn't understand your physical condition?

Crabshaw: Yes; he seems more interested in my financial condition.

The Hedge Between. By May C. Ringwalt.

ROSES AND THORNS.

THERE was only a hedge between John Brooke's palatial house with its porte-cochere, its garage, its pergolas, and Ann Brewster's wee bungalow—a hedge that bore roses and thorns.

For the three years that she'd been living in the bungalow, the house next door had been unoccupied except for a crabbed old caretaker whom Ann dubbed "the living scarecrow."

Then with the suddenness of a tight-budded fruit tree bursting into bloom, came an awakening flash. The opening of shuttered windows and boarded doors. The bustling chug-chug of the vacuum-cleaner wagon out front with its rubber-serpent appendages thickly coiled along the garden walks. The supplanting of the living scarecrow by a retinue of Chinese servants who wiped windows, mopped porches, and polished the door knocker until old Sol's eyes fairly blinked from the glare.

All of which was as exciting as a motion-picture show to Ann, who had been seized by a violent attack of spring gardening out on her side of the hedge the day the living scarecrow took his departure.

But the interested little lady had no intention of peeping after the master of the house arrived.

She was simply caught in the act.

A night of storm suddenly burst upon the peaceful spring weather, and in the racket of wind and rain a rubber-heeled auto bearing the globe trotter and his suit cases from the station padded in through the porte-cochere without the bungalow at its elbow being the wiser.

The next morning was made for digging about the roots of rose trees.

Ann went out to the hedge and dug—in an old gray skirt and an upper garment with flowing sleeves in fashion at the time Mrs. Shem entered the Ark.

"I wonder what's on for today?" she thought as she gave a bird-glance peep over the hedge.

As though in answer, the door of the house opened and a tall, broad-shouldered man, with an at-home air of smoking jacket and hatless head, sauntered up the front path.

The horrified Ann ducked behind a spindle-legged rose tree and trusted to ostrich luck.

"Good morning," said a genial voice already half way between path and hedge. "You must be the new neighbor Hodgkin wrote me about."

Cornered, Ann met the situation jauntily enough.

"I don't know about that," she sparkled up at him. "I would have said that you were the new neighbor."

He gave an amused chuckle.

"I suppose a truant like me doesn't deserve any better, but as a matter of fact I've been living here off and on for the past ten years, and—by Georgie, what a stunning rose!"

Smiling, she clipped it off and handed it to him.

"It did sound a bit like fishing, didn't it?" he laughed, as he thanked her and fixed it in his buttonhole. "But I've been daffy over roses ever since I was a kid. We were poor as church mice then, and back in Massachusetts where I lived when a boy, a rose was worth its weight in gold, yet somehow mother always managed to have one around. Kept a rose for a pet, you know, the way other people kept a dog."

The pink in Ann's face deepened and there was a startled look in her brown eyes.

"It's absurd to ask"—she began apologetically. "Of course you didn't come from Salem?—and your mother couldn't possibly have been the Mrs. Patience Brooke who lived opposite the Hezekiah Brewsters?"

"The whole family tree in an acorn shell!" he declared, his face boyish in its pleasure. "And—and—by Georgie, if you aren't little Ann! Why didn't either of us guess before?"

Laughing, they shook hands through a rose tree's looping spray.

"To think, after all these years," he went on gaily over the surprise, "we should turn up next-door neighbors 'way out here in California!"

"With only a hedge between," smiled Ann.

"'A hedge between keeps friendship green'," he flashed back.

And then they laughed and shook hands over again.

But there was no laughter in Ann's face when she came into the house an hour later.

"Oh, why did I try to find out anything!" she sighed aloud, as she caught the sleek black cat that ran to meet her with a peeved purr. "Let on that I was the Ann Brewster he used to know! Even you, Jeremiah, have sense enough to leave sleeping dogs lie!"

Jeremiah looked up into her face in round-eyed wonder.

A fat tear had plashed upon his forehead.

For when the sleeping dogs that you rouse are the years of a totally different sort of past they bite hard.

"To the very bone of one's pride!" sighed Ann as she began the wee bungalow's detested weekly cleaning. "And just when I thought I was reconciled to being tucked away in a humdrum rut and living shabbily ever after!"

How the silk-lined young days of ease and comfort and every wish gratified rustled through memory as the shabby little woman of 40 swept and dusted—and fiercely shook the faded sofa cushions on the living-room's decrepit couch. The happy-hearted young days when Jack Brooke, together with other boy and girl friends, used to take part in private theatricals in their attic; to roll back the downstairs rugs for impromptu dances; to drop in for informal Sunday supper and——

The set line of her lips suddenly twinkled. She was thinking of Minty's caraway cookies, and the Sunday night John Brooke ate seventeen by actual count.

"Jeremiah," she cried, darting into the kitchen and addressing a pair of yellow eyes gleaming out from black interior depths of the stove, "you must get out of the oven—I'm going to build up the fire."

The caraway cookies were a glorious, golden brown success.

A plate handed over a hedge by your next-door neighbor cannot be returned by a servant. The following day John Brooke brought it back himself. His boyish pleasure over the cakes made him forget the stab of shame she had felt in letting him into the secret of her shabby surroundings. Then he spoiled it all by an invitation to dine downtown and go to the theater afterward.

"I accepted this once, Jeremiah," she confided, a red spot on each excited cheek, "because I couldn't think of an excuse quick enough—and because I'm dying to see a good play!—but it's got to stop where it begins—I won't be under obligations!"

But John Brooke, who had forged his way up in the world against all obstacles, was not accustomed to stopping where he began, and in the weeks that followed, in spite of protests Ann constantly found herself whisked off to entertainments or spinning away on long auto rides through the spring-awakened country with its blossom-laden ranches, its poppy-fringed roads, its fields of lupine and buttercups.

"Why don't you sometimes ask other people instead of always inviting me?" scolded Ann.

"Because it's so much easier to go out to the hedge and politely whistle than to harangue over a telephone," he teased. "Besides, 'other people' don't care a darn for my society—only for the good times they'd get out of me."

He laughed as he said it, but there was a wistful look in the gray eyes, and the wistful look touched a sore spot in the conscience that Ann had brought out from New England with other family heirlooms.

For days an ugly little worm of self-distrust had nibbled at the opening buds of her happiness. If she had not been tired and sick of being cooped up in the poky little bungalow, would she have so eagerly welcomed the growing intimacy with her next-door neighbor? No, it was because she loved the purple and fine linen of life—the good times that he gave her. She was as bad as the "other people," only he had not found her out.

"A hedge between keeps friendship green" he had quoted the day they met. A hedge of self-respect—of proper pride and spirit. And she let him trample the hedge down—for the gifts that he bore in his hands.

"But it shan't go on!" she rallied. "I'll decline his very next invitation!"

She heard the next invitation whistling across to the little bungalow one afternoon that same week, and braced herself to meet it—while hurrying into her most becoming old-rose gown.

"I heard the approaching whistle when it jumped over the hedge," she began jauntily as she opened the front door, "but I couldn't get here any sooner."

"This time, Miss Ann, it's a case of the small boy whistling in the dark to keep his courage up."

There was a stiff-jointedness in his laugh, an awkward self-consciousness in his straightforward gray eyes, but Ann was too intent upon her Spartan purpose to notice.

"Without beating about the bush, Miss Ann," he began again, "I came to ask you to——"

"Don't—please," she interrupted, laying a protesting hand upon his arm. "I know what you mean to ask and I really can't——"

"You are sure, Ann?"

"Yes." The pink in her cheeks flamed crimson. "Oh, don't you understand?" she cried. "It's because I want to be your friend true-blue that I can't let things go on. Because—because——"

"I understand, little girl," he said gently. "Forgive me—I ought to have understood before."

And with a quick right-about-face in the conversation he began talking of the little trip that he was planning to take to San Francisco.

"Any commissions, Miss Ann?" he asked with a wan smile as he rose to go. "If nothing prevents, I think now I'll be off this afternoon."

Nothing prevented, for Ann saw the auto flash by just in time to catch the Owl.

The sore spot was gone from Ann's conscience—it had shifted to her spirits.

"My feeling so dismal the moment things come to a stop proves how demoralized I've grown, Jeremiah," she sighed at the end of the forlorn week. "How dependent on——"

Never had Jeremiah been so carelessly shuffled from lap to floor as at that startling instant when at sight of one of the next-door Chinese passing the kitchen window his mistress had sprung up and darted to the door.

"Wong, what is it?" she cried, convinced of disaster before the celestial had spoken.

"Just now little while ago I come home flom butch'r shop," he excitedly explained. "I hear lok'motive blow whistle. I stop, wait tlain go by. Dr. Sim'son he thlow him to me out car window."

He fumbled in his blouse and produced a crumpled wad of yellow paper.

"Mr. Bl'oke he met an accident. He velly bad hurt in his head." The Mongolian impressively grabbed hold of his own temples. "I think maybe he die."

With trembling hands Ann smoothed out the telegram.

"Head-on collision," it read. "Laid up for repairs at Junction. No confidence in the sawbones here. For the love of Mike come to me as quickly as you can. John Brooke."

For the first time in her life Ann's sense of humor failed her. Rather, Wong's interpretation of the head-on collision did not brush her consciousness. Her one thought that John Brooke was injured. In a miserable hospital at the wretched Junction. She must go to him at once—on the next train.

She had only twenty minutes to pack her grip, arrange to have Jeremiah fed, and make the station on a run.

The ride to the Junction was an hour of dumb, helpless agony. For at last Ann knew her singleness of heart. Knew that John Brooke filled it from attic to cellar. That if he would only get well, come home, be her friend again, she would not care if she never saw an auto, never went to the theater, never——

The train was whistling for the Junction. Ten minutes later, Ann—with her legs shaking under her so she could hardly walk—mounted the steps to the ramshackle hospital building that had been pointed out to her.

"I wish to inquire for Mr. John Brooke," she said tremulously as she stood before a dapper youth seated at a desk in the office.

"Oh, he's all right—doing fine."

Ann fixed his glibness with a steely glance.

"Dr. Simpson is here, I understand," she said, presenting her card. "I'd like to speak to him personally, if you please."

"Sure."

Measured by her suspense, the wait in the linoleum-covered reception-room with walls hung in glaring chromos seemed endless, but the sallow-faced clock in the hall had only ticked off ten minutes when the doctor's familiar figure appeared in the doorway.

"You will tell me the truth," cried Ann, running to him with a child's straightforward eagerness. "Is he going to get well?"

The gray-haired, kind-eyed man smiled reassuringly down at her.

"I think," he said with a twinkle in his voice that escaped Ann's consciousness, "that together we may be able to pull him through."

Tears trembled on her lashes, but she held herself under stern self-control.

"Could—could I just peep in at him?"

"He would be much disappointed if you didn't," answered the doctor with a quizzical smile. "He was as pleased as Punch when he heard you were here."

In a daze, she followed him down a long corridor to a room from which a nurse was coming out with a tray.

"If you will go in awhile," the doctor excused himself at the door, "I'll join you later."

The room was so small she had no sooner entered than she found herself standing at the injured man's bedside.

"By Georgie, Miss Ann," he greeted her, holding out a bandaged hand in welcome, "it's awfully bully of you to come."

"I—I wanted to tell you," she said breathlessly, "how ashamed I am of the way I behaved the last time we met. I know now I acted like a little goose."

He leaned eagerly forward from out his pillows.

"Do you mean it, Ann?"

She nodded brightly.

"I mean that in the future it's 'yes' to anything that you ask of me, you spoiled boy," she answered jauntily.

New color leaped to his white cheeks; new light flashed in his dull eyes, and as Ann looked down into the face transfigured with joy, in a sweep of astonishment that almost bowled her off her feet she suddenly understood what her next-door neighbor had intended to ask the day he jumped over the hedge between.

But it was too late for withdrawals. She had already pledged yes. And don't you see, when a woman had brought out her New England conscience with other family heirlooms she couldn't possibly go back on her word!

Fat Kings are Valuable.

[Baltimore American:] There was for generations a custom in India for weighing the king, or ruler, in gold, and giving that gold to the poor. The custom prevails today in some parts of India, and King George V of England would have been weighed during his visit there, in keeping with the custom, had it not been for the fact that he objected.

Perhaps this was because most Indian rulers were extremely fat gentlemen, while King George is considerably below the average-sized man. At any rate, it was the fat monarchs who were the most popular in the olden days, for on the "weighing days" every additional pound of king meant so many more rupees for the poor.

A maharajah who was recently crowned seated himself in one of the gold pans of the balance, while into the other was thrown gold coin until royalty rose in the scales.

A maharajah, by an unwritten law, did not become legally chief until he had been weighed in this manner. In olden times the custom prevailed of throwing the money into the air and letting the people scramble for whatever part of it missed the scales, but this resulted in disorder and frequent loss of life, and, moreover, defeated the object in view, as the strong and well-fed usually prevailed over those more in need of the benefit. After this a commission of functionaries was named to divide the gold among the poor of the country districts after the monarch had been weighed.

The Pool.

The frogs above their little pool
Draw curtains green to keep them cool.
I'm sure it's damp upon their floor,
Because their throats sound very sore.
I do not care to hear them sing
Except at night in early spring.

Astronomy Not so Much.

SIR ROBERT BALL, the famous English astronomer, whose death occurred a few months ago, used to tell a little story of an experience that he had when he was at the Dunsink Observatory. A farmer came to him one day and asked if he might look at the moon through the telescope.

"Surely you can," said Ball. "Come round tonight and I shall be very happy to let you see it through the telescope."

"Can't I see it now?" asked the farmer, surprised.

"I am sorry that you cannot," said the astronomer. "You will have to wait until night."

"Huh! Then your old telescope is not so great a thing as I thought it was!" cried the man, relieved from his illusion. "I can see the moon as night without it."—[Youth's Companion.

What Ailed the Senate.

AN OLD colored man from Virginia had received at last the position that fulfilled his ambitions. He held the job of sweeping the steps on the east side of the Senate end of the Capitol. Finding himself in this prominent place he set about mastering the legislative and parliamentary phrases that are batted about so freely in the Senatorial presence.

One day a party of tourists were disappointed when they found, upon arriving at the Capitol, that the Senate was not in session.

"I wonder what's the matter with the Senators today," said a woman in the party to old John.

"I ain't sartin," he replied judicially, "but I spec' dey done took an abscess."—[Popular Magazine.

Different Definitions.

PRESIDENT WILSON likes novels of an idealistic rather than a realistic trend.

At a reception in Washington a lady mentioned a realist who had just produced a shockingly depressing and unpleasant book.

"How would you define a realist?" someone asked, and the lady said:

"A realist is a writer who is disgusted with the world."

"Oh, no, not at all," smiled the President. "A realist is a writer with whom the world is disgusted."—[New York Tribune.

Nobody Works But Father.

TWO men, who had formerly lived in the same town, met after a number of years and entered into conversation.

"Did all your boys turn out well, Jim?" asked one of them.

"Yes, indeed they did."

"What's Albert doing?"

"He's trying to discover a new germ," replied the father.

"And Bob?"

"Oh, Bob is tryin' his hand at a newspaper an' bein' editor," was the old gentleman's reply.

"And Charlie—what's he at?"

"He's an actor. All the time talkin' about elevatin' the stage."

"Well," answered the old man, "I'm a-supportin' of Albert an' Bob an' Charlie."—[National Monthly.

By Way of Inducement.

A CERTAIN youngster in Washington was one day suffering greatly by reason of an aching tooth. His mother was endeavoring to calm him against the necessary visit to the dentist.

"You'll have it out, won't you, dearie?" the mother pleaded. "It won't hurt much, and then the ache will all be over."

But the unhappy child continued to howl with pain. His brother, a year older, was likewise distressed, and added his pleadings to those of the mother.

"Do have it out, dear," repeated the mother.

"Yes, Dick, have it out," added the brother. "It will be one less to clean, you know."—[Lippincott's Magazine.

What He Left.

RESIDING in a little village is a lawyer who is famous for drawing wills, in which branch of business he has long enjoyed a monopoly of the country for miles around.

A few months since a wealthy man died. There was much speculation as to the value of the property, and the town gossip set about to find out the facts. He hunted up the lawyer, and, after a few preliminary remarks about the deceased, he said rather bluntly:

"I suppose you made Brown's will?"

"Yes."

"Then you probably know how much he left. Would you mind telling me?"

"Not at all," the lawyer answered, as he resumed his writing, "he left everything he had."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Jail Was Good Enough for Him.

"You have no fault to find with the ventilation, nor the sanitation, nor the management?"

"That's very strange. Perhaps you would prefer to remain in prison rather than go free?"

Paying Him Back.

EARLY-DAY DOCTORS.

IT MAY be that when individuals know there are neither doctors nor drugs to get them out of a scrape into which hygienic indiscretions may have led them, these same individuals learn to exercise a certain amount of common sense and self-control in the interests of self-preservation. It is very certain that in the early days of California there was no Dr. Don to jump into a carreta, and go whirling and clattering away in the wake of a pair of animated oxen in answer to a hurry call. And yet healthy pink and golden-brown babies were born, and men and women lived to a magnificent fullness of years. Of course it was the business of the padre to know something about the virtues of herbs and simples. As a rule, too, he could do very well in the setting of a broken limb, and putting it in splints. Even the Indians had some knowledge of simple hygienic measures which kept them very well in their hardy out-of-door life. Their villages did not become centers of filth and corruption until after their enslavement by the civilized man.

"It is strange no medical man was kept on the establishment," writes Hugo Reid, of the San Gabriel Mission, "as the number of people was great, and the stock of medicines very large. They were provided not by the pound, but by the quintal; not in gallons, but in barrelfuls. Still all the dependence for medical aid (with the exception of midwives) was either on a casual foreigner passing, or on the stupidity of some foreigner employed on the premises. I know not why, but an Anglo-Saxon, in those days, was synonymous with an M. D. Many an 'Estrangero,' who had never before possessed sufficient confidence in himself to administer even a dose of Epsom, after killing, God knows how many, has at length become a tolerable empiric. One thing in favor of the sick was that after a lapse of years the greater part of the drugs lost their virtue."

Evidently the practice of medicine was not popular among the Spaniards, since they left it, in those early days, so exclusively to the foreigners. When Dr. Marsh, a graduate of Harvard College, and of its medical school, came to Los Angeles in 1836, over the old Santa Fe trail, he found a clear field of operation. He complied with the usual condition which a foreigner—particularly an American—found essential to his successful business operations with the Angelenos of those times—namely, that of naturalization. He made formal announcement of his presence, and of his intention to practice medicine and surgery. The members of the Muy Illustro Ayuntamiento decided that "Don Juan Marchet" could not practice surgery without the permission of the Ayuntamiento. This announcement was productive of the following, taken from the translation of the old archives of February 25, 1836: "A petition from Mr. Juan Marchet (sh at the end of a word being unknown to the Spanish tongue) asking to be permitted to practice his profession, was read. The Ill. Body decided to give him permission to practice medicine, as he has submitted for inspection his diploma, which was found to be correct, and also for the reason that he would be very useful to the community."

It is stated that no one in Los Angeles was able to read Latin; and since the diploma was entirely in Latin, it became necessary to send it to the priest at San Gabriel for translation. And thus the old pueblo became the proud possessor of a real physician, and no doubt the denizens did their best to accumulate an adequate amount of disease to meet the necessity. The good man was obliged to accept hides, cattle and horses in payment, since there was little money in circulation. As this was inconvenient currency for a town doctor, Marsh yielded to necessity, abandoned his practice, and went to ranching on Los Midanos, near Monte Diablo, after a visit to Yerba Buena—San Francisco, then a city of but two houses. He was murdered on his ranch by a Mexican in 1856. A letter written by him to a Missouri paper in 1840 was instrumental in bringing the first immigrant train across the plains in the following year.

[Photo's from Ingersoll Collection]

When Dr. Richard S. Den was called to Los Angeles by a petition of the citizens, in 1844, he was but 23 years of age. He had qualified as obstetrician, and taken first certificate in public examination at the School of Anatomy, Medicine and Surgery in Dublin at 19, two years later sailing as ship surgeon to Melbourne, being singled out as the only doctor in the ship's employ who had ever landed his entire cargo of people alive and in good health. While in Mazatlan he found by mere accident that his brother was in Santa Barbara, and this influenced his coming and remaining in this part of the country.

It is related of his early days of practice here that he was summoned to treat the family of the Alcalde, which service he performed repeatedly, after a reasonable lapse of time presenting his bill. To his astonishment the Alcalde manifested great indignation, making it plain to the young Irish physician that he should feel honored in the privilege of serving so high a dignitary. But Dr. Den thought otherwise, and pressed his claim. The Alcalde promptly made an effort to prohibit the physician from practice in this section. Dr. Den then produced his certificate of authority to practice, secured from the Mexican government in 1844. The Alcalde not only paid, but endeavored to make amends by a superabundance of graciousness ever after.

But the handsome young Irishman made a few enemies through the very stress of his popularity, which was very great among the ladies, he being a splendid entertainer and a faultless dresser. At a certain dance he was a conspicuous figure in his immaculate linen, and other fine accessories. The native gentlemen became furiously jealous of his social distinction and success with the gentler sex, and resolved to humiliate the hero. A dose of croton oil concealed in a glass of wine brought an embarrassment upon the young man which caused him to withdraw permanently from the life of social functions. He became reserved—eccentric as some chose to call it—and never married.

He was chief physician and surgeon for the Mexicans during the war of 1846 and 1847, but treated Californians and Americans impartially. He attended Don Benito Wilson and Thomas O. Larkin, securing the latter's removal to more healthful quarters—the home of Don Luis Vignes. He alleviated the conditions of the sick and wounded everywhere, with the consent of Gov. Flores, and responded to Capt. Gillepsie's request for a physician. The doctor prospected at Sullivan's Diggings, practiced in the mining camp, and also in San Francisco, being paid in gold dust—$5 to $6 an ounce at the mines, and $12 in San Francisco, and sometimes earning as high as $1000 in a day. He later gave his time and attention to his cattle ranch—the San Marcos—in Santa Barbara county. He intended to return to his native country, and make an effort to recover his lost estate, but losses through drought thwarted him. He eventually returned to Los Angeles, to practice in honor and high esteem, well-beloved by all who knew him, to the end of his days. He was a striking figure as he rode out on his black horse every day, with beautiful saddle trappings. His hair was white and fine, his eyes clear and blue, his complexion rosy. He wore a tall tile hat, gauntlet gloves and English leggings.

"It was inevitable that Los Angeles should become a center for the very best surgeons and physicians," declared Dr. J. P. Widney, as we sat in the big living room in his home among the foothills about Avenue 39, whole walls of which are windowed, admitting great seas of light, "because of the proximity of Drum Barracks, at Wilmington, where from 1000 to 2000 troops were stationed for frontier service. I came in the capacity of army surgeon with Gen. Gregg, and a steamer load of soldiers on the Orizaba—a wooden side-wheeler of 1000 tons—in 1867. The old bell of the Orizaba, by the way, is now on the pier wharf at Port Harford, near San Luis Obispo. The government warehouse and the ship-building plant were where the west basin of the harbor is now.

"I was in the frontier wars for two years, part of the time in the field, part of the time in the hospitals. While I was surgeon at Apache Pass I built a hospital for the post. I came to Los Angeles to remain on October 8, 1868. I found here Drs. Den, Griffin, Hayes, Kurtz and Orme, Dr. H. S. Orme having come a few months before I did. The population did not exceed 4000 or 5000 at the time, but there was plenty for all of us to do. Large numbers of people came from the interior for surgical treatment—from Utah, Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona."

The doctor then with modest dignity spoke about his boyhood days, and showed me the old flintlock gun he had used when a mere child in defense of his native State, Ohio, his handsome, sensitive face lighting up as he spoke of his education in the Miami University, he being one of ten survivors of the class of 1864. He was graduated in medicine at the Toland Medical College, now the medical department of the University of California.

Dr. Widney was the surgeon who patched up Vasquez, when he was brought into the city bleeding from a number of wounds. Widney was county physician at the time, and was left in charge of Vasquez in the jail. "Vasquez, judging from his demeanor, was badly, even mortally hurt," says Dr. Widney. "He played the part so well that the irons had been taken off of him, and he was lying on his cot quite free. I made a careful examination of him, and immediately summoned the Sheriff. 'Put the irons on that man, and chain his arms to the bed,' I commanded. 'He's good for fifty miles of hard riding.' "

"I have heard it said that the word antiseptic was scarcely in use in those early days," I suggested. "How did you prevent epidemics from spreading?"

"Well, the word antiseptic means simply

The Brute.

OVER THE DINNER—AND AFTERWARD.

By Dix Drummond Osmun.

Dillingsworth and I were discussing physiognomy over our dinner. I had made the mild statement that there was something in it, and Dillingsworth had flatly contradicted me, whereupon I shifted my basis to an absolute faith in its indication of character, and we proceeded to hammer each other with instances—conceived for the most part in our own minds—and ridiculed every statement advanced by the opposing orator. Thus we came down to our black coffee with little knowledge of and less delight in anything we had eaten. The food is especially well prepared in that particular cafe, but we might as well have eaten at a lunch counter. Also, there is a superior orchestra. Its strains fell upon deaf ears.

I was about to dismiss the argument in favor of a fresh one, when a face a few tables off caught my eye.

"Look over your right shoulder—a little toward the door—and you will see the type I was just speaking of."

Dillingsworth turned half way around. When his eyes again met mine, there was something more than a frown on his face.

"For once you are right," he said slowly. "That man is the most downright brute I have the misfortune to know."

"You know him then?"

"His name is Rufus B. Engerwood."

"So that is Engerwood!"

"It is. I suppose you know his wife got her decree of absolute divorce today."

"I saw the headlines as I was on my way here. Do you know her?"

"Yes, I have known her a good many years, and I am pretty well acquainted with Bob Harvey. I tell you, Howe, if there ever was a man that needed killing it's that man Engerwood. You've read about the case?"

"Well, no—that is, little more than the headlines. Suppose you tell me about it."

Dillingsworth lighted a cigarette and leaned forward across the table.

"I've known Katherine Rodgers—that was her name before she married Engerwood—ten years or more, and I tell you, Howe, she's all right. Whatever you may have heard against her is a pack of dirty lies. It is true that she was in love with Bob Harvey before she met Engerwood, and it is true that they had some sort of lovers' quarrel which sent Bob abroad for a couple of years, during which time she met and married Engerwood. What under heaven she saw in the man is beyond me. The papers hinted that she married him for his money. That is nonsense—she is rich in her own right. He is at least twenty years older than she, and—there he is, look at him—absolutely nothing that would appeal to a woman like Katherine."

"He looks like a low brute," I commented.

"He is that and more too. What happened when Bob came back, no one knows. I have it on pretty straight authority that he did not see Katherine at all alone. But at any rate Engerwood got it into his head that she was in love with Bob, and raised merry war. There were things that came out in the trial that I do not dare allow myself to think of while I am in the same room with that man. I think I would go over and pull the life out of him. Finally he struck her. Up to that time she had refused to divorce him, although he had given her plenty of cause. Then she came to her senses. This thing has pretty nearly killed her, but thank God it is over now."

"She will marry Harvey, I suppose."

"Oh, yes, I think so. It's what she ought to have done in the first place. I think he would satisfy even you and your physiognomy test."

"That's all right, but you'll have to admit I was correct in Engerwood's case."

"Oh, certainly—any child could tell an extreme type like that!"

"Then why didn't she?"

"Well, my own opinion is that she married him out of pity. He isn't a man that makes friends, and yet until this thing came up, he seemed harmless enough. I rather liked him in a way. He never speaks of his money—he has scathers of it, you know, and he always seems rather grateful if any one notices him. He certainly isn't conceited."

"Do you think—"

"I think," said Dillingsworth, suddenly leaning back in his chair, "that I would rather not talk about it any more. It has been a pretty constant subject of conversation among Katherine's friends for a good while, and I am tired of it. It's all over now, and I want to forget it."

"That was just what I was about to ask you—do you think it is all over now?"

"Why, certainly—what do you mean?"

"Look at the man carefully. Do you notice his undershot jaw, and the narrowness between his eyes? Just take into consideration those indications and his mean little eyes, and tell me honestly if you think he is going to let another man have his wife."

"You mean—"

"Precisely."

"Oh, we all realize that. We've made Bob promise to go armed."

"And Katherine? Excuse me for calling her that, but I hardly know how else to refer to her."

"She doesn't know it, but she is guarded day and night by private detectives. Engerwood himself is being shadowed. We have taken every precaution we can, and yet—"

"And yet you are afraid."

"Yes."

"Because," I said triumphantly, "you can read in his face what kind of a man he is—which proves my contention."

Dillingsworth yawned.

"Sometimes, Howe, you bore me exceedingly. I'll flip you a nickel to see who buys tickets to the show."

Dillingsworth went to see "The Girl From Anywhere" at my expense, and I revenged myself by pointing out types all over the place. After the theater we repaired to a place of refreshment on Broadway, and did not emerge therefrom until nearly 2 o'clock—it's hard to get Dillingsworth to go home at a decent hour—not that I tried, however. We separated at Forty-second street, Dillingsworth taking the Subway, and I going east toward the L.

The street was almost deserted. Some distance in front of me a man was walking with heavy tread. His footfalls boomed out in the comparative quiet. I did not recognize him at first, then I saw it was Engerwood. With an exclamation of disgust, I was about to cross over and put at least the width of the street between us, when he suddenly staggered, and nearly fell. I am ordinarily a kind-hearted fellow, but I confess I abandoned my intention of crossing the street, because I hoped he would fall, and I wanted to go by without offering my aid. In my mind I called him a drunken brute and other things.

Between Eighth and Ninth avenues there were a number of old-fashioned brick houses with iron-railed stoops. Engerwood passed three of these successfully. Then he slopped over onto one and sat huddled, his face in his hands. A second later the most despairing cry I have ever heard human voice utter, broke from his lips.

"Katherine!"

I stopped as though a bullet had struck me—and then in a flash of inspiration, I understood it all. Upon my honor, the thing was absolutely clear to me. I hurried up to him.

"See here, Engerwood,' I said, roughly taking him by the shoulder, "what's the matter with you anyhow? Don't you know you are twice the man Bob Harvey is—don't you know Katherine loves you—it has all been a hideous mistake? How in the name of all that's sensible did you get it into your fool head that she loved him, and you'd have to make her get a divorce from you so she could marry him and be happy?"

He looked up at me, at first with the expression of a setter dog expecting a kick, then as I went on, with a gleam of hope in his eyes.

"How do you know?" he asked hoarsely.

"Know!" I lied fiercely. "She told me."

The gleam died out of his eyes. "You are not telling the truth," he said heavily. "She does love him—I found a letter. She had fool ideas about sticking to her bargain, refused to consent to a divorce. I had to make her. She will be happy with—" his voice faltered—"him. She will be happy with him," he repeated more strongly. "I could not make her happy. Nobody could love me anyway. I look like a brute. But I'll be all right," he went on apologetically. "I drank too much tonight, and made a fool of myself. You heard?"

"Yes," I answered, my heart torn with pity, and shame of my misjudgment of the man, "I heard."

He struggled to his feet.

"See here," I said desperately, "you ought to get out of this—go away, or something. Listen! I've been planning a cruise in my yacht. Come along—it will take your mind off things. We'll have a cracking time."

He laid his hand on my shoulder. "I can't thank you enough," he said, his voice shaking with gratitude. "I'll accept with pleasure." Then he looked at me under the dim rays of a distant arc light. "I don't seem to place you," he said regretfully, "but I like you—your face shows what you are, and—"

"Ouch!" I cried.

"Oh, excuse me," he exclaimed, taking his hand quickly from my shoulder. "Did I hurt you?"

"You touched me on a sore spot," I replied; "but now about this cruise—"

The Land of Silvia.

JASPER'S EXCITING HOUR AT THE MOVIES.

By Glenn Harold Wichman.

Having just a moment before slid a nickel toward the pink-cheeked lady in the glass case, Jasper now occupied a seat in the Light as Day Moving Picture Theater. His heart was thumping violently within the narrow confines of his chest, for a reel had just started to unwind preceded by the announcement that Silvia Van Bibber was in the cast.

Jasper imagined he knew Slyvia about as well as he knew which was his right foot. That the lovely Silvia never would have recognized Jasper, even had she been brought into violent collision with him while rounding some crowded street corner, did not worry him a bit. Distance likewise separated them—for the hero of our tale fitted people's feet into shoes some three thousand miles from where Silvia was made love to by exquisitely dressed gentlemen in evening clothes. Uncle Sam had done his best to bridge the continent—but the tender epistles of affection continued to travel in but one direction. The Question Editor had had a hand also. Confidentially, in the pages of his magazine, he had informed Jasper of her age, her lack of a husband and the color of her hair.

At some future date, when the railroads were indulging in a rate war, Jasper intended to transport himself to that far-off "Land of Silvia" and apply for the position of leading man in her company. In preparation for the event, he had purchased a book on the gentle of art of acting, and religiously "worked out" in front of a mirror every night before retiring. He knew exactly how he was going to hold her head when he kissed her, the exact attitude he would assume when he proposed, both pseudo and otherwise. Goodness, yes!

Occasionally he would delightfully torment himself by imagining he was the dark-complexioned man who carried the struggling Silvia bodily off to his mountain fastness. The denouement, however, was always slightly modified. He hated the idea of having his neck stretched in the last act, so invariably he would slightly reform, shoot the hero, and as the picture faded away could see himself holding the clinging Silvia in his stalwart arms.

"Dazzled by Ducats" was the title of the drama in which Silvia was to appear. Jasper, having read a book on the drama's technic, could see the ending before the first little scene had flickered itself out. The honest man in overalls—but there's no need of saying any more. Sorrowfully, Jasper glanced around over the half-darkened house, with a feeling of deep concern for everybody else's ignorance. A feminine titter directly in front of him distracted his attention. The perpetrator of the unseemly noise was a young woman. She was sitting with a companion of the like sex. Their heads, Jasper observed, were drawn together in immediate proximity.

"—phoney hat."

The two words were all that Jasper's ears caught. By Jove! They were commenting on Silvia. The little dear had just walked on the screen. Cunning—well, I should say so! Nevertheless, Jasper was troubled. Her hat. It was perfectly lovely. The she-cats! What did they know about hats!

"—grand man."

The man—shoot him for a pirate! (Our hero's favorite expression, by the way.) He was a milk-sop! Jasper's upper lip curled in prescribed fashion according to the book of rules. Gladly he would have pulled both of their feminine ears.

"—awkward as a cow."

Exasperations! Silvia again. He had to admit that the hat might be— But Silvia awkward? He would change his seat and bear no more treason. But a lady of some proportions sat down beside him just then, so he changed his mind.

Jasper was beginning to be troubled. The man in overalls wasn't playing his hackneyed role worth a cent. He showed bad habits and wasn't honest. The man with the ducats, on the other hand, had just given a blind man forty cents. There was obviously something wrong with the drama's technic. He would surely have to read rule five on dramatic criticism over again.

"—some—chic—her."

A rare compliment, but the donor had failed to pronounce the adjective properly. This remarkable quality of Silvia's had not been likened unto a fowl freshly hatched from an egg, as Jasper thought. "Some chicken!" he repeated in disgust. "Poor Silvia is being misunderstood." The feeling that swept over him was one of joy. What a chance! Silvia must be defended. Clearing his throat, he leaned forward, but a gentleman with large biceps sitting beside the traitress happened to turn around just then, so Jasper hesitated. Having hesitated, his courage evaporated. Dropping back in his seat, he became absorbed in the picture.

Silvia had now married the "richest man." Their surroundings fairly exhaled the perfumes of luxury.

He without the ducats had just stolen a sandwich from a man with but one leg. Jasper had originally cast himself for that character, but was now beginning to regret his decision. Silvia had dealt his ideas of drama a knock-down punch. She was actually influencing her husband into being generous. The scoundrel!—he had just given five thousand perspiring children a day's treat at the beach. After being thus enlightened on the possibilities of womanly charm, there was small chance of Silvia ever marrying him (Jasper.) Even his model goodness and sweet personality couldn't take the place of a fat wallet and an admired husband.

"—doesn't know what to do with her hands."

At this juncture the stalwart gentleman with the tight-fitting coat got up and left. The last obstacle had now been removed. Jasper would labor with the females. The error of their ways—. A titter passed over the audience. Looking up, Jasper saw that six hours had flashed by, and that the man in overalls had just crawled out from under Silvia's bed. She was sitting at her dressing table attired rather negligee, unconscious of his presence. The crouching figure being suddenly reflected in a hand-glass, she discovered the intruder. Reaching quickly to one side, Silvia pulled open a small drawer, and the next minute the desperado was looking into the muzzle of a pearl-handled revolver. Being kind-hearted, she then proceeded to lecture him on the sin of being dazzled by ducats, after which he meekly made his exit—much to Jasper's dramatic chagrin. A little scandal followed, and a matrimonial ship threatened to go on the rocks, but in the end she was tacked about and went sailing off peacefully on life's tempestuous sea.

"—bum piece."

Jasper agreed perfectly, but the unwarranted criticism was unwomanly. Now or never. He touched the wayward sister lightly on the shoulder. She turned quickly. A surprised look, followed by an indignant one, flashed across her face. An usher happened to be coming up the aisle. She beckoned to him, whispered a word in his ear, and within ten seconds Jasper found himself on the sidewalk in front of the Light as Day Theater. Something slippery chanced to be under foot—a dull, stingy feeling vibrated up and down his spine, and then Jasper made a momentous resolution. Poor Silvia! He had decided to forsake her forever—in short, to transfer his affections to the round-faced girl who played in the "Westerns" and rode a horse like Philip Sheridan. Poor Silvia!

Hard Time for Caddies.

[The Argonaut:] A gentleman who had been spending a holiday at a Scottish seaside village noted for its golf links asked one of the caddies if he got much carrying in the winter time. "Nae, sir, nae," replied the caddie. "There's nae carrying in the winter time. Ye see, it is this way. If it's nae sna' it's frost; if it's nae frost it's sna'; if it's neither sna nor frost, it's rain; if it's nae rain, it's wind; an' if it's a fine day, it's the Sawbath!"

At Belvidere Heights a new water company has been organized with a capitalization of $100,000.

for the night. Trimming the boat for business, I put my weight against those rheumatic oars, and for the next hour pulled hard and doggedly. The river bent and wound upon itself and familiar stars appeared now upon this side, now upon that, but I had my direction, I thought, and kept on with my wobbly one stroke on the right and two strokes on the left, and then one stroke on whichever side it was needed to even up and keep the boat on its course. After awhile I began to get the swing of the strokes better. Down a long straight stretch I came at a speed which I told myself was more than creditable under the circumstances, determined to land at the bend and tie up for the night. Around the curve I swung, pulling hard for a grand stand finish, headed for the bank at what appeared a likely landing—and came full upon nothing less than the embers of my camp fire built at that spot a full three hours before.

More Crooked Than the Snake.

The current, such as it was, had been down stream all the time, and the bending of the river had confused me and given me more than an hour's hard pulling to get back where I started from. Which fact impels me to note that the famous Snake River of Wyoming and Idaho appears only in the first stage of crookedness when compared to the Hardy. Writing of the former, someone has said that it ran along for a while and then turned 'round and ran beside itself to see how well it had done. I quoted this to a cowboy at a cattle camp to which I came later, and he, sniffing contemptuously, replied that that was nothing to the Hardy. The Hardy, he said, ran beside itself all the way to the Gulf, and, what was more, made every man beside himself who had anything to do with it. "Why, dern it all, friend," he said, "some day that blasted creek'll get to hatin' itself so bad fer not gettin' along faster that it'll break through onto itself an' allus arter that run round in a circle." I couldn't quite follow this reasoning; but the river is certainly very crooked.

Resolved to make the current take me back at least a part of the distance I had already traversed twice, I made up my bed in the bottom of the boat and shoved off once more. Just as I was about to go to sleep one of my hands came in contact with a pool of water, and chancing to touch my finger with my tongue, found it sweet almost to stickiness. This was almost the last straw, for I certainly felt that the river had exhibited enough eccentricities for one evening. I was prepared for anything reasonable, but not for the water's turning to syrup. Behind my head I found some more water. To my horror, this was neither sweet nor of a strong brackishness like that of the river water, but of a briny saltiness. My bed, laid out on boards, exhibited nothing peculiar in the way of taste or appearance, so, after vainly seeking for a solution to the mystery of how the boat leaked such a variety of waters, I decided that the blankets were the best answer for the present and was soon sleeping the fitful sleep of the tired but perplexed. Not until the next morning, when I sought my salt and sugar bags among the provisions that the Indians had hastily thrown into the bottom of the boat, did I find the proper solution of the puzzle.

The great tidal bore, of which I had heard so much, had been often in my mind during the day, and my last thought before going to sleep at night had been to wonder if I had not been foolish in running the risk of meeting it at night, in the dark and unprepared. It was not long before daybreak that I was awakened by the sound of water lapping against the sides of the boat, and, ahead somewhere, the noise of more violent splashing. Thoroughly aroused in an instant, I sprang from the blankets, seized the oars and began madly to paddle for the lee of a huge pile of drift that towered against the sky, a few yards ahead.

For a moment it seemed that my efforts would avail me nought, for before I had the old scow well under way, out of the darkness ahead there came a rush of water and a roar of air and the boat began to rock violently with the force of unseen waves. Each wave slapped harder than its fellow; now they began to splash into the boat, and I felt that it was but a matter of seconds before the main bore, which I heard roaring toward me through the darkness, would reach and overwhelm me. But the boat was responding to its ill-matched oars now, and just as I felt that there was to be no escaping a swamping, I felt the blunt old nose grate upon the drift.

A False Alarm.

Breathless, I waited for the shock that did not come; for though the waves continued to rock the boat, even in the shelter of the drift, the roar began to recede. With it I now detected the cry of myriads of birds, and as my excitement subsided I realized that it was almost sunrise, and that all the animal life along the river was awake and stirring.

Daylight found me more mystified than ever. Why had the bore gone off in the direction from which it had seemed to be approaching. No one had told me of its turning back at the sight of frightened hunters in open boats. Or had my ears deceived me, and had I been going up stream all the time, and had the bore come along from behind and passed me? Perhaps it was all a dream conjured up by my nerves and the unusual conditions under which I was trying to sleep.

I was about to admit the truth of the dream theory, when my eyes rested on my shotgun case in the bow of the boat. The even sheen of its tan surface was blotched and spotted with water, and on examination the rest of the outfit in that part of the boat proved to be soaked. Turning my attention to the banks of the stream, I observed that they were splashed and spattered for a distance of several feet above the water line. That let out the dream theory, and I gave it up for the time and started to push on.

Before going, however, I paddled across to take a look at a foundered boat stuck in the mud of the opposite bank, and was rewarded by finding a good pair of oars stuck under its submerged seat. This was good luck, indeed, and as I pulled off down stream in the grateful warmth of the morning sun, I tried to persuade myself that the strange phenomenon was a special performance, arranged by that kind Providence that I mentioned a ways back, to prevent my passing those oars in the dark. I became quite confirmed in this belief when I noticed that a quarter of a mile below where the disturbance had occurred the banks were not wet above the water line.

Two miles farther along I came upon the solution of the whole mystery. Driven by the new oars, the boat came around the bend at a rattling clip, and glancing over my shoulder to get a line on direction for steering, I beheld one of the strangest sights I ever witnessed. The impression conveyed to my mind by the first glance was of the river's being strewn with popcorn, scattered thickly as far as the eye could reach. The next moment a hundred thouand pelicans had risen as one bird, and the raucous shrilling of their combined screams, the rush of the countless wings and the splash of the agitated water smote on my ears like the roar of a tornado. And those were no mean waves that the flying multitude stirred up in its flight, and for a couple of minutes I was kept quite busy in keeping the boat from shipping more water than was good for my guns and blankets. Probably this was the same flock that I had floated upon in the night.

If anyone is skeptical regarding the possibility of a flock of these birds raising a commotion in air and water that might be mistaken in the dark for a tidal bore at a first encounter, let him think of the noise which half a dozen ducks stir up in leaving a pond, and then let him consider the fact that the pelican weighs from six to ten times as much as a duck, has often a spread of wings of eight feet, and that these birds occasionally pack those Lower California sloughs and lagoons from bank to bank for half a mile.

Ashore for Breakfast.

After a half-hour's row for a warming up I pulled into the bank at a favorable looking spot for breakfast. Here I discovered for the first time the fact that my sugar and salt had been dissolved in the bottom of the boat, and with this last of my mysteries cleared up I was at liberty to take a more comprehensive view of my surroundings. For some time the river had been gradually changing. Here it was much broader than above, though seemingly quite as deep, and the banks, instead of running up at an angle of 45 degrees or more, now sloped easily back, but were muddy and not pleasant to walk upon. The willows now grew only in patches, their erstwhile soiled wall being now replaced with a thick growth of carrisa—a cane much resembling sorghum—and beyond the carrisa, on the higher ground, were the stock growths of the country, mesquite, ironwood and palo verde. The tracks of a half dozen different kinds of animals showed on the plastic surface of the little strip of mud beach where I breakfasted, those of pig, deer, wild cat and coyote appearing quite fresh.

Floating on down stream after breakfast, I secured a half-dozen ducks by shooting them as they flew over, but used a good many shells in doing it. I also tried several close-range shots with No. 5 into a flock of pelicans, but the big birds, seemingly little injured by the showers of lead, simply rose up, screamed a bit, and finally settled down again a mile farther down. Later in the day I winged several with my rifle. Their breasts are very closely and tenaciously feathered and make splendid rugs when sewn together. Toward evening I saw a good-sized herd of deer crossing below me, but as the sun was shining squarely in my face and the distance was considerable, my hasty shots were probably very wild.

The following day I shot from the boat two wild cats and a mountain lion, the story of which has been told elsewhere. The day after that I used up the last of my fresh water and from then on till I reached the Salada cattle camp, almost two days later, I was forced to use the river water, which even boiling and straining rendered far from palatable. At a point where Mayor, the highest mountain of the Cocopah range, comes down to the river I found a well, but its water, which I brought up from a considerable depth with much trouble, was no better than that of the river. This lack of water was the one unpleasant feature of the trip, and it was due entirely to my unfamiliarity with the country. There were many spots, as I learned later, at which I could have replenished my canteen within a few hundred yards of the river and thus saved myself a couple of very unpleasant days.

A Big Turtle But No Soup.

About sunset of the third day I came upon my first green turtle, and after a hard hour's work succeeded in adding him alive to the motley collection of game already piled up in the stern of the boat. I discovered him resting on a bed of mud, well back from the water at a bend of the river, and began pulling in at once to look him over with the idea of pre-empting him for food. He divined my purpose before I reached the bank, and promptly came floundering around and headed for the water. He had but three feet to go to my thirty, but his flippers were not made for rapid transit and I was already under good headway. We reached the river rim together and the flat nose of the scow came squarely against the end of his shell as he drew in his head at the moment of impact. The mud behind offering little resistance, the turtle was shoved back several feet, the boat, whose impetus was considerable, following close after him.

I, of course, went over backward, but was on my feet an instant later and up in the bow ready for action. My first step was to split the blade of one of my good oars over the nose he showed for an instant, in an effort to make him draw in and back up. Then I stepped gingerly out on his broad back and moved the scow's painter back and forth among his hind flippers, after which I clambered aboard again, pushed off with a pole and brought my quarry right along with me. Before I had gone a hundred feet, however, he either grabbed a snag in the bottom of the river or else became entangled in it; anyhow, he brought the boat to a sudden stop with a jerk that must have exerted a very uncomfortable strain upon his hind flippers. A thorough prodding with the pole finally induced him to relinquish his job of animated anchor, and after a great deal of pulling and hauling, I at last slid him over the gunwale into the bottom of the boat.

My appetite was pretty well dulled at this stage of the trip, and my stomach absolutely refused to hold anything that contained the river water. That night I mixed up some ground cocoa with a can of condensed milk and made a supper without landing. While I was busy endeavoring to negotiate this concoction forward, the turtle went on a prospecting expedition and deposited a layer of mud, half an inch thick and two feet wide, over my blankets. This led me to tie him up for the night. Passing a half-inch rope over his neck and under each of his front flippers, I noosed it under him; then, standing him up in the corner, I drew the rope taut, took a couple of hitches around a cleat in the bottom of the boat and had him secure. In the night I heard him sigh heavily once or twice, and in the morning he was as dead as any of the other members of the natural history collection that shared with him the after part of the boat. At the cattle camp, which I reached the following day, they refused to use him either for soup or "jerkey," saying that no strangled animal was fit for use as food. I must have drawn his picket rope too tight.

The last day of the trip was not a pleasant one on account of the water trouble, and I am passing it over without dwelling on details. At the cattle camp I learned, among other things, that the great tidal bore only runs high during the two or three days immediately preceding and following the full moon, and that it is never dangerous as far up as Charley's Bend. This for the benefit of anyone who may start at night and encounter a flock of pelicans.

Has Talked a Million Years.

[New York Times:] The remarkable conclusion has been arrived at, by putting two and two together in high expert pronouncements, that man had the power of speech a million years ago.

This important point arises out of the address delivered before the Dublin Royal Society by Prof. Arthur Keith on the ancient Pitsdown skull known as the Eoanthropos Dawson.

If it be granted that Prof. Keith is right in fixing the date of the Eoanthropos as a Pliocene, and that Prof. Elliot Smith, who also examined the discovery, is right in interpreting the features of the brain as indicative of speech, the remarkable revelation is made that mankind in the Pliocene period, a million years ago, or even more, had the power of forming and communicating ideas by means of speech.

Americans are Heavily Insured.

[Philadelphia Record:] That Americans carry a total insurance on their lives of $34,000,000,000 was the statement made by Charles Nesbit, superintendent of insurance, in an address before the Young Men's Christian Association. Nesbit said there were two divisions of life insurance companies. He said the old-line companies have outstanding 34,552,348 policies, while the fraternal concerns have outstanding certificates numbering 7,594,981.

"Insurance is a social function," he said. "It is a substitution of social co-operative provision for individual provision. Technically, this substitution of social effort for individual effort is known as the theory of distribution of losses and the subsequent elimination of risk. The importance of insurance may be measured somewhat by its extent."

Grenade for Rifles.

[Popular Mechanics Magazine:] The rifle grenade has already been adopted in some countries as an integral part of the soldier's equipment, and is likely to come into general use among the armies of the world. It is expected that it will to a great extent supplant the use of the bayonet and do away with the necessity for close-quarter fighting, as it will provide a means for attacking trenches and covered positions and rendering them untenable without recourse to hand-to-hand combat. The grenades can be fired singly or in volleys, and the effect of volley firing with such weapons would probably be astounding. In hilly country especially, where the bringing into action of field pieces is extremely difficult, the use of the grenade will prove of incalculable benefit to the troops equipped with it.

To R. L. S., Pirate.

When he passed on, so much of youth he took away
The world grew old. So much of joy embarked that day
With him, the world grew sad. Gray-haired, staff-leaning, bent,
The world limped on. "Not given," the gods declared, "but lent
To show what life may be. From us he stole the joy
Of heaven to give to you. Now we reclaim the boy,
Glad pirate of Olympian cheer. With you remains
The message that he brought, easing the galling chains."

The City and the House Beautiful.

Gardens, Grounds, Streets, Parks, Lakes.

Beautify for 1915.

SCHOOL CHILDREN GENERALLY ARE HELPING.

JUDGING by the activity plainly noticeable in both city and country schools the children are going to accomplish as much for the beautification scheme in 1915 as are the adults. "And a little child shall lead them" may actually prove true in this grand work.

For long years this department has pleaded for improvement of schoolgrounds and "points with pride" to many such premises, now lovely, that received their planting through the stimulus given our readers in advice on this phase of work. All over the county school officials and pupils are showing unusual activity, and after the summer vacation is over a great uplift will everywhere be noticeable.

Out of thirty schools visited by the writer of late, all outside the city of Los Angeles, only one has refused to enter the competition for cash prizes offered by the Committee for Beautification of Los Angeles County. This committee has at its disposal $7000 for prizes to be awarded the most beautifully planned and planted school premises, the final judging to be done at the close of the year 1915.

The judges are to visit each school three times during the year 1915; in January, June and October. Immediately after the last visit the awards will be made and the money paid over to the trustees of the winning schools, to be used as they think best. The various schools are divided into ten classes, based on attendance, so that no school will have to compete against those larger or more powerful. This encourages the humblest district to enter with the assurance of as good chances for prize-winning as any other district. While all this stimulated activity is most pleasing it is pathetic that the only piece of ground in a community in which all have common interest and common ownership should be the one most neglected. It is, in some few instances, almost the only one that is not in some degree beautified. If the reverse of this order of things is accomplished in the beautification scheme then will the money have been most wisely expended. The outlook is indeed promising.

The Silver Wattle.

THE illustrations on this page show an Acacia dealbata, the Silver Wattle of Australia, at time of planting and the same tree taken a year later—lacking eight days. Its height in the last picture was twenty-one feet and six inches. Next week we will show how this tree was pruned.

This tree is considered by the writer to be the best of all acacias for street planting and one of the very best trees obtainable for either street or park or garden. It needs severe pruning in the spring of each year, just after the flowering period is past. It can hardly be pruned too severely, and the work may be done at almost any time of the year, though a loss of flower crop may result if done at certain seasons.

Boston's Elms Dying.

THE fine old elms on Boston Common, also those in the yard at Harvard College, are dying and, one by one, as they become unsightly, are being removed. They are dying from old age, or rather premature old age, brought about through association with man. Had they been growing in the wilds of some river-bottom lands, they would still be comparatively young and vigorous. "Acute indigestion" is the name experts give as the cause of death.

Free Lippia Needed.

IN CONNECTION with the contemplated schoolgrounds improvement in competition for cash prizes offered by the 1915 beautification committee, a great deal of Lippia repens will be used at schools along the ocean front. This is a grass that has no equal under certain conditions of soil and climate. Also the only material available where a large area is to be covered by a school whose funds are low. Lippia grows so freely that it is scarcely considered a commercial plant and plenty may be had free if these schools knew how to get it. Persons having such surplus will confer a favor upon our county schools if they will send in their names and addresses to the editor of this (City Beautiful) department, for all wish the available funds of the many schools to be used for prime necessities not obtainable except by purchase.

A New City Playground.

ALL parents living in the Highland Park and Garvanza sections of Los Angeles will be rejoiced to learn that county and city have made an exchange of properties whereby the city obtains a playground of six acres, known as "Block J," lying between the two districts noted and adjoining the new Arroyo Seco library on the south.

The Park Commission was also allowed by the City Council the $1000 asked for to improve a small triangular park at Meridian street and Avenue 63. This will provide a resting-place and playground for those living in the extreme northeastern corner of the city. Both these sections have had no recreation spot nearer than Sycamore Grove Park.

Passing of the Cypress.

OF LATE years sales of Monterey cypress have steadily fallen off, more especially those of small plants in boxes of 100. This fact is due to an awakening on the part of a discriminating public that we have many superior trees and plants that may be used for the same purposes. This cypress, and nearly all others, are too dark and funereal to improve the average landscape. For hedges almost any other material is preferable, for all other plants used for hedge building are more cheerful in foliage color and all have a more or less conspicuous bloom to relieve the otherwise endless monotony of foliage.

Two Ever-blooming Shrubs.

SPARTIUM JUNCEUM, the Spanish Broom, and Polygala Dalmaisiana are two evergreen shrubs that are in bloom nearly all the time. The former has yellow flowers and grows to ten or more feet tall, while the other grows but three feet and bears flowers of magenta and white, the white consisting of small blotches on the deeper color. These two plants also look well in combination. Plant one of the broom and then three of the other about two feet away in a circle about the base of the larger plant. After a year's growth you will have a cloud of yellow hanging over a mass of magenta. These colors harmonize very well.

Economic Value in Ornamentals.

ALMOST any garden is beautified by the presence of one or more loquat trees, and the fruit crops they bear are valuable for family use, more especially for the children, who generally appear to be more fond of the fruit than adults. There is a great range in the flavor of loquats. The named varieties that come from budded trees only are the largest, and by many considered the best. To the present writer all are too sweet and insipid and none have sufficient acidity. There are a few dwarf trees in the market that were budded plants which would be preferred by many to the named American varieties on the market. Often local seedlings bear best of all and have splendid fruits, though until fruiting one does not know what he has.

A Good Climbing Small Rose.

THE roses of the polyantha type have been exceptionally good this season. Even the Crimson Rambler has been less troubled with mildew than in years past. Dorothy Perkins, a rich pink of the same class, has been admired by thousands, for it has presented some lovely masses of bloom during the past two or three months. There are other named sorts of the Crimson Rambler type that far surpass the deeper color, yet even the crimson may be kept beautiful if one dusts with sulphur at the beginning of the season of blossoming.

A Paradoxical Season.

FOR nearly all classes of plant life the present season has proven an early one. Plants are everywhere in bloom that last year did not unfold their loveliness until a month later. But a cold May has retarded the tropical plants so that their blooming period is going to be later than usual. Therefore our garden glories are extending over an active season that for length has never been surpassed in Southern California history.

Sunset in the Philippines.

The day in brazen beauty dies;
Bathed in amber and rose the calm sea lies;
Through the palm trees the wind is sighing.

Come, night, fling down your purple veil
O'er the parched world its cool folds trail,
For thy shelter the earth is crying.

The sun for hours has seared her breast—
Come, night, and let the world be dressed
In a garment of thy own making—

A shimmering garment, misty and gray,
Spangled with stars from the Milky Way,
To be worn till the fruit bats fly away
And the dawn from the east is breaking.

Down Hardy's Colorado. By Lewis R. Freeman.

A LONELY VOYAGE.

AN HOUR before sunrise on Hardy's Colorado. The morning star, just clearing the tops of the willows at the next bend, throws a clear, gleaming path like a fine-cut gold band across the unrippling water. The Little Dipper pauses a moment, with its cornermost star resting on the jagged edge of a towering Cocopah, as though gaining courage before descend- into the deep salt sea that lies beyond. The great torpedo-shaped constellation, which last night floated up out of the east in a languid horizontal, has now swung to a perpendicular and is diving behind the earth-to-heaven-reared curtain of the western mountains, as though it feared the approach of day and was fleeing full tilt to the protection of the vanishing skirts of its mother night.

An absolute stillness. Not a rustle from the bank, not a splash from the water, not a whirr from the air. No movement save the steady, almost imperceptible drift of the boat in the silent, unbubbling current.

Suddenly the clear path of the morning star quivers and trembles through its length and a chill creeps over the water as the first forerunning zephyr from the Gulf breeze moves on to the mountains. Now the small stars in the east are losing their sharpness, and even the brilliance of the morning star has faded to a dull lemon against the paling sky. Overhead, the vault of heaven is changing from black to a deep unfathomable indigo, and in the west the mountains are just beginning to thrust forward their bulk, but misty and indistinct, like the figures on worn tapestry.

Over on the east bank the breeze has set smoking a smoldering fire in the peat, started, perhaps, miles away and weeks before by cattlemen or pig-hunters, and a broad patch of black spreads across the primrose flush of the morning sky, deepening and quenching its flood of color and throwing the pall of night over the river again. Then of a sudden up leaps the sun, a palpitant ball of red fire, while the river, under its screen of smoke, wells on with the sanguine blackness of stagnant blood, through the smoke pall the sun, seeming to poise for a moment with the edge of its disc resting on the plain, looms half as high as the mottled Pintos.

Now the smoldering fire dies out with the suddenness of its awakening, and the breeze, rending the smoke screen, lets in a flood of light upon the river, whose gently rippling waters gleam and sparkle like a stream of molten gold. Slowly the dusky blotch of smoke cloud drifts away, the sun shrinks to a glittering ball of fire, and full day has dawned upon Hardy's Colorado.

Unique Among Rivers.

In a class by itself in riverdom stands this Hardy's Colorado, or Rio Hardy as the Indians and Mexicans who live along its banks, and water their crops from its overflow, call it. For two months of the year it flows backward and carries fresh water from the flood of the main Colorado. At the height of this overflow it loses its identity through most of its course, and forms but the center of a vast inland lake several hundred thousand acres in extent. For the next three months it drains the brackish water of this lake back into the Colorado and the Gulf of California, and at the end of that time finds itself little more than a great lagoon, from fifty to three hundred feet wide and a hundred and fifty miles long, carrying a sluggish flow of decidely salt water. The lower seventy-five miles of this distance is tidewater; that is, the high tides at the full moons of each month are perceptible that distance from the point where its southern end meets the Colorado. Stranger still, from the fact that these tides force back the regular flow of the Colorado instead of the ocean water from the Gulf, its waters are fresher at high tide than at low.

This latter phenomen is accounted for by the fact that the Hardy is fed by the salt and volcanoes situated about twenty-five miles south of the international boundary line and the same distance west of the Colorado River, so that when the high tides back up the fresh water of the latter at each full moon, they merely serve to temper its strongly saline properties. Salt water from the Gulf is never forced more than a few miles up the Colorado, and even the waters of the tidal "bore" which run for many miles up both Hardy and Colorado are not salt beyond the head of the Gulf proper.

The Hardy runs through the heart of the game country of the great Colorado Delta, which in itself in sufficient to impel one to chance the journey. The unfortunate calling back to California of a white companion with whom I had been hunting in the Cocopahs' the defection of my Mexican guide, and the general apathy of every Indian in the country when the pulling of a flat bottom boat was mentioned, made it necessary to undertake the trip alone. Thanks to that special branch of Providence delegated to look after children and other irresponsibles, I finished, as I started, hale and hungry, but still a good deal hungrier withal, and a shade less hale. The trip is not an easy one for a number of reasons, but so unusual and interesting are many of the features incident upon it, that there is no question of its being worth the taking, even if one has to "go it alone:"

A half hour after I had seen the last of the dust of my companion's California-bound wagon, I had been packed over the two-mile trail to the river by Indians, helped with my outfit into a deserted boat, supplied with a pair of broken oars and pushed off. They gave me only one direction; that was in regard to digging for water by the river when my canteen gave out, and this chanced to be entirely wrong and cost me a day and a half of thirst.

The boat was a rectangular box, three feet wide and about eighteen feet long. One end, supposed to be the front, was sloped up to offer less resistance to the water. The oarlocks were holes between pieces of boards nailed to the sides of the boat, and as for oars, one was a foot shorter than the other, and even the long one had been broken and repaired with a couple of rusty nails and a shoe string.

The Start.

It was four o'clock, and I was anxious to make a subatantial start before dark. There was less current than I had hoped for—almost none at all, in fact—and I soon decided it was to be a rowing proposition to the end unless the tides came to my rescue. I had noted from my map that the head of tide water was a full ten miles above the point at which I embarked and was naturally counting on the downward flow to help me along. The incoming tide, I had been led to expect, came in all at once in the form of a great breaking wave called a "bore," and this I was going to let pass while I lay in some sheltered bend, and then utilize the back flow to carry me on.

An hour passed by, and still nothing to speak of in the way of a current had made its appearance. I was making fair headway rowing, and the winding river, with its fringe of yellow-leaved willows, was unspeakably lovely in the all-pervading light of the sunset; but the work was wearing, especially as the long oar was able to outpull its short and crippled brother about two to one. A rest and supper on the bank seemed the best diversion, with a starlight row afterward to put me in sleeping trim.

A cheerful fire, a couple of fried quail shot earlier in the day, some rice and maple syrup and a pot of chocolate brightened things up a bit, and I was almost on the point of admitting to myself that I didn't care whether the current flowed my way or not. A half-hour's pull dampened my enthusiasm a trifle, but there was still the beauty of the night and the strangeness of my surroundings to keep the situation from becoming irksome. Suddenly I brought up against a snag in the middle of the river and swung around several times in getting clear. Ah, here at last was the current; not a swift one to be sure, but with enough movement at least to take the boat steadily on. Now I could afford to rest for a while and watch the stars. And such stars as they were! Surely one could ask for no more than the privilege of just lying back and watching them play hide and seek through the nodding foliage of the willows. But hold! What was that constellation doing here, and that one over there? And what business had the boat to be floating straight for the North Star. The tide must be running up the river, I thought, and I must have become confused in my directions while whirling around the snag.

Nothing would now do but that I should make up for the lost distance, even in the teeth of the current, before I tied up

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

Give Them Useful Work.

[New York Tribune:] The boy or girl who is given some useful work to do at home is helped to realize and to enjoy the responsibility of doing the task and doing it well and is thus gaining in character-building. It may be that a boy is expected to keep a yard in order, go on errands, or relieve some one of care; or that a girl is required to attend to some household tasks, to dust a room, or keep a desk in neat condition, arrange flowers for the table, or make a dainty dessert. Little things, faithfully done, help to form habits of neatness, orderliness, thoroughness. These duties may seem small, but they are important beginnings.

The Honest Purpose.

Work of any sort is a training. The habit of concentration helps to give power and decision.

Success is never won by a careless, slipshod, slovenly way of working, but by a patient, persistent, faithful habit of attention to detail, and in the conscientious fulfilment of a task, large or small, and whether it is liked or not.

The honest purpose should be to do it well, although it may neither be observed nor praised.

Whatever our daily work the discipline of it teaches us self-restraint, obedience to law and guides us to a well-ordered life.

KINKS IN THE KITCHEN.

Soap Made From Scraps.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] To one teacupful of scraps of different kinds of toilet soap add three cups of boiling water. Put over the fire, stir till dissolved. Into this stir ground oatmeal to make a stiff batter. Pour this into greased tins or cups large enough to make a neat, round cake. Bits of colored fancy soaps can be melted the same way. Perfume lightly and thicken with Indian meal. One can also melt the pieces of laundry soap, one part soap to two parts water; when partly cooled, stir in as much scouring sand as it will take.

To Clean Milk Bottles.

An easy way to clean milk bottles is to fill the bottle half full of hot soap suds and drop in the wire dish cloth that hangs over most everybody's sink. Give the bottle a few shakes and rinse with hot water and your bottles are thorou cleaned a very few minutes.

HOME ADAPTATIONS.

The Old-Fashioned Shawl.

[Washington Star:] An old-fashioned shawl or large square of material may be converted into a handsome draped wrap for present use. To proceed, place the shawl wrong side up on a table, with the lengthwise middle fold in front, as this will be the line of the middle back from neck to bottom. Turn over toward you both upper corners at the right angles until the edges meet on the fold. About fourteen inches from the apex of the pyramid tack the two edges to the fold, and this joint becomes the middle of the neck in the back. Arrange on a form or on yourself.

The two lower corners will fall apart at the bottom. Take each in turn and loop it up under the arm until a loose sleeve is formed at the right place. Then lift the right lower corner and lay in plaits, one on top of the other. Lap this over on the left straight side and fasten with a hook and eye or fancy buckle.

Work Gloves From Old Stockings.

Quite convenient and simple work gloves can be made out of the tops of old stockings whose feet are past further darning. Begin by cutting off the top where it starts to shape for the calf, with the hem left on. Then lay on the table double as it is, and cut one of the folded edges down about two and a half inches, sloping in a little toward the center, which later forms a gusset for the thumb. Next cut three fingers about one inch wide, and the fourth a little less, which comes at the opposite side to that of the thumb. Finish by sewing the back fingers to the front and fold down the gusset piece so that its widest part will fit into the joint of the thumb. Elastic may be laced round the wrist.

NEEDLE NOTES.

Handling Sheer Material.

[Philadelphia Telegraph:] With sheer materials in vogue small seams are imperative, and some people have difficulty in making them. Try this way:

Cut the material very smoothly and evenly. Hold the edges together and overcast them closely to the end. Turn them over, crease down to make them flat, then sew in the regular French or double seam fashion as close to the edge as possible, thus producing the smallest, neatest seam imaginable. Always use fine thread and a fine needle for the second seaming to obtain the best results.

When any very soft sheer material must be stitched on the machine, if it is not properly adjusted for the purpose, it is likely to pucker and cause no end of annoyance. You will have no difficulty if you will cut strips of thin manila wrapping paper or tissue paper, put it under the material and then proceed with the sewing.

Reproducing China Patterns.

Women are reproducing the patterns and designs on their china in fancy work, especially on tea cloths, which are thus made to match the cups and saucers.

In some cases the design is drawn by the needle workers themselves, but in other cases patterns of different china are reproduced in tracings on the linens and are worked over in silk or woolen threads.

A fancy with many women just now is to embroider the old willow pattern on traycloths, tea cloths and doilies.

USEFUL HOME COMPOUNDS.

Tapioca Glue.

[New Haven Courier-Journal:] An excellent glue that is harmless, colorless and odorless is made of tapioca. Cover the desired quantity with cold water, put it over the fire and stir, adding more water as it boils to make a good paste. It can be used to glue wood, leather or paper. For scrapbooks or photographs it may be necessary to add a little water.

Sweeping Compound.

[Pharmaceutical Era:] A representative formula for sweeping compound to prevent dust from rising when sweeping floors or carpets: Dry sawdust, 10 pounds; paraffin oil, half pint; paraffin wax, 2 ounces; coarse salt, half pound; eucalyptus oil, 2 ounces; sea sand, 4 pounds. Warm the paraffin oil and mix with the melted wax, dissolve in the mixture any aniline color required, add the eucalyptus oil, and saturate the sawdust. Then mix with the sand.

KINKS IN THE KITCHEN.

Perforated Mixing Spoon.

[Philadelphia Record:] We cooks have discovered that a mixing spoon with a perforated or slit bowl is more effective for beating eggs, batters and sponge than one with the old-fashioned liquid-tight bowl. It is also much easier to manipulate. A novelty recently put upon the market has two slit spoon bowls set at an angle to each other in one handle, says Mothers' Magazine. The bowls are of retinned steel, the handle of wood. The cost is 15 cents. It can also be used to lift vegetables and eggs from the liquid in which they have been boiled.

Double Top for Table.

Have a carpenter make a second top for the ordinary table; have it fastened on with hinges, this top shuts down tightly over the table and is used for the daily service, but when bread or pastry is to be made, it is raised and a fresh pine surface never used for anything else is ready. Fine if you are limited for room in kitchen.

FOR MENDING CHINA.

White Oil Paint.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] The best substance for mending china or porcelaine or pottery of any description, is white oil paint. Buy a tube of a good make and use it like tube paste. If you have a box of oil colors you may add enough of any tint to the white to match the broken article, but the white does not show, and is astonishingly effective. Cut glass may also be mended with it.

Gum Arabic and Plaster of Paris.

[Indianapolis News:] Into a thick solution of gum arabic stir plaster of paris until the mixture assumes the consistency of cream. Apply with a brush to the broken edges of china and join together In three days the article cannot be broken in the same place. The whiteness of the cement adds to its value.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] Oxalic acid will clean wicker chairs and tables. Apply the acid with an old toothbrush after stains are removed; rinse the article thoroughly, first in clear warm water and then in cold.

To make rice cakes for an invalid wash two teaspoonfuls of rice; put it into a quart of water; cover closely and cook gently in the oven about three hours. Strain, sweeten and flavor with orange or lemon.

It is sensible and convenient to have large pockets in your apron when going about putting the house in order. Pieces of string or any out-of-the-place article can be slipped in the pocket and put away at leisure.

To clean suede shoes first stuff the shoes with soft paper; get a saucerful of spirits of turpentine; apply with a saturated clean rag; rub until the rag becomes quite black; then get a fresh piece and continue until the shoes are clean.

When towels become dingy looking cover with cold water, in which are dissolved shavings of pure white soap and juice of a lemon. Place the kettle on the back of the stove and allow to come slowly to a boil. Rinse in tepid water, then in bluewater. They dry in the open air.

Suffering from moist feet may be relieved if one ounce of boric acid is mixed with one ounce of finely powdered starch. Fill a little bag of coarse muslin with this, and before putting on the stockings shake the powder on the feet and inside the shoes. The same recipe will answer for moist hands.

HEARTSEASE.

Simplicity and Nobility.

[Emerson:] Between simple and noble persons there is always a quick intelligence; they recognize at sight and meet on a better ground than the talents and skills they may chance to possess, namely, on sincerity and uprightness.

Infinity.

Ah love!
How shall we fill the emptiness
Of life's deep inner room,
All vacant now and lightless
As some dark ruined tomb,
Whence ev'n the mouldered mortal clay,
Impalpable dust, has fled away.

Beloved!
Time was, in a world forgotten of men,
When light we sped through space together,
All through the scintillant cosmic weather,
Adrift with star and sun—
Still clings the mem'ry and the love still clings
That made us one.

Thy love
For me holds all, for good or ill,
Both past and yet to come,
With promise of a deathless joy
In some far star-girt home;
So that this deep remembering
Of joy so sweetly sown,
Makes sordid death a glorious thing
For the harvest it will bring.

discoveries netted him over 677,000 castellanos of that precious metal. They are now finding gold in the excavations being made at Teohuanaco, and that in the shape of gold and silver plates tacked to the heads of mummies and skulls.

The building of the great granite cathedral in Cuzco, which stands on the plaza nea. the ancient site of one of the Inca palaces, was brought about by the discovery of an Inca treasure. Its origin was in a miraculous dream of the bishop. In his dream the Virgin Mary appeared before the bishop, and told him that she wanted a cathedral in Cuzco. She fixed the location on the ancient plaza of the Incas and described the grand building as it now is. The bishop replied that his people were poor, that he had no money and that he could not possibly raise the sum needed. Thereupon the Madonna directed him to go to a place near Cuzco and dig. There he would uncover some of the lost treasures of the Incas. This was duly reported to the people, and, as the story goes, they went with the bishop in a great procession to the place designated. They dug down into the earth and there found a large store of gold. It was with this gold that they began the cathedral which although here far off from the sea, and between the walls of the Andes, is one of the finest churches of the new world.

I have already described the Cathedral of Cuzco. All told, it is perhaps more gorgeous than was Coricancha, the Inca Temple of the Sun. It is a vast museum of gold carvings and beautiful paintings. One of its treasures is a life-sized figure of the Christ fastened to a wooden cross by great nails of solid gold. The figure is decorated with jewels and the pedestal or car upon which the cross stands is plated with silver and incrusted with diamonds.

This image is greatly revered by the Indians and also by the other people of Cuzco. They carry it around through the streets on Good Monday, at which time they kneel down on the sidewalks and pray before it. They call it the Lord of the Earthquakes and believe that their city is safe from seismic disturbances as long as the annual procession takes place. This comes from a tradition that the Christ was once left in the church beyond the hour usually set for the procession, when the mountains began to sway, and an earthquake occurred which it was thought would swallow the city. Thereupon the Christ was brought out and the earth ceased its quaking.

Another story of lost treasure relates to a Cuzco white man of Spanish descent whom the Lord blessed with numerous children. It is the custom here that a godfather shall look after and provide for his godchild; and so, as this man was poor, he tried to add to his resources by getting a corps of good godfathers. So as the infants came one after another he named each in honor of one of the distinguished citizens of the town. The citizens, however, did not respond and the man grew poorer and poorer. At last he had had nine babies, each of whom had been given a rich godfather, but there was no help forthcoming. The father swore that he would leave the rich and choose as the patron of his next child the first man he met on the street after its birth. In due time the stork came again, and the man, rushing out, saw a poor Indian driving a caravan of llamas into the town. He stopped him and told him he wanted him to be godfather to his child. The Indian objected, saying that he was poor and not fit to be godfather to a white child. The man then told of his vow and finally persuaded the Indian to accept the position.

In due time the baby was baptized and the Indian appeared at the ceremony as its godfather. He kissed his godson as he left the church, and the next day came back into Cuzco with a score of llamas, loaded witn wood. He took this wood to the father of his godchild, saying that he had brought what he could, and that he must accept the wood as a gift. The man was thanked and the wood was duly stored away in the court of the house. Some time after that the bundles of sticks and roots were opened, and inside each was found a great bag of gold in nuggets and dust. In the meantime the Indian had disappeared and could not be found. The man took the gold and built two large houses on the street called Triumph. If you do not believe this story, come to Cuzco, and the people will show you the street and point out the houses.

Another treasure story is the tale of an Indian woman 100 years old. It relates to a great hoard of gold that was hidden in the Andes by one of the chiefs, who was murdered before he came back to Cuzco. This treasure has long been searched for in vain by both foreigners and Peruvians. Not long ago this old Indian woman, being about to die, sent word to a hacendado of Spanish descent for whom she had worked, asking him to hasten to her. He reached her hut in the mountains just in time to get her last message. This was that her maternal grandmother, who had died eighty years before, had given her a word that would indicate where this treasure lay. The word was an Indian one, and it meant the Lake of the Two Stones. The old woman was questioned, but she would tell nothing more. That night she died. The story went forth and the whole country was searched by treasure hunters, all seeking for the Lake of Two Stones. At last a narrow valley was discovered containing a lake in which there were two tall rocks rising high over the water. The investigators drained the lake. They dug down under the largest stone and there found a platform of masonry, covering a chamber in which the treasure was found. The secret was kept from the officials for fear of confiscation. And so no one knows just how much gold was discovered, but it was of such great value that it made all of those who participated in the division rich.

Another of those Inca traditions relates to a cave in a mountain called Pellchau, near Cuenca, in Ecuador. This cave contains a mighty treasure of gold, but its entrance is closed by a giant of granite under whose arm is a hole which is open only once a year and that on Good Friday. Then, and then only, the giant raises his arm and the man who can be there at that time can crawl in under it and get an immense treasure of gold. As the story goes, the gold is in piles so labeled that only one pile is to be taken at a time. If one man takes only the assigned quantity he will get away safely. But if he is greedy and takes more he will be squeezed to death by the arm of the giant as he goes out. This is the belief held by the Indians. Many superstitious people have looked for that cave, but so far neither the cave nor the giant has yet been discovered.

A fairly well authenticated tradition refers to an Inca named Ruminagui, who is said to have carried away the gold and silver of Quito and buried them. These treasures were taken from the palaces of Atahualpa and from the temples and convents of the virgins of the sun at that place. It is said that some of the gold was started to Cajamarca in order that it might aid in freeing Atahualpa, but that Ruminagui feared the treachery of the Spaniards and buried the gold on the way. This story came to the Spaniards, and Sebastian de Benalcazar, one of the subordinate officers under Pizarro, took 150 men and started for Quito, searching along the path of Ruminagui, but finding nothing.

In the meantime, Ruminagui had dug traps in the trails and made snares to destroy the enemy and their horses. He also set fire to Quito and killed the virgins of the sun before Benalcazar appeared. He then climbed to the high mountain behind the city, where he was finally taken by Benalcazar. He was tortured to death to make him tell where the golden hoard was secreted, but he showed no sign of weakness, and the knowledge of the location of the treasure died with him.

There is a story told in Cuzco of an Indian girl who was in love with a Spaniard. The Spaniard had taken advantage of her affection, but he would not make her a proposal of marriage until she told him that she could make him the richest man in Peru. He thereupon promised to marry her if she would prove that she could do what she proposed, and at her request went with her one night into the mountains. There he was blindfolded and led through ravine after ravine until he finally came to a cave. Here the bandages were taken off his eyes and his sweetheart said:

"Behold! This is the gold that I am ready to give you when we are married."

The Spaniard looked down and saw a great pile of golden bars and a collection of golden vessels curiously carved. It is supposed that they were from the treasures of Atahualpa. The greedy man attempted to seize some of the largest pieces nearest him, but the girl pulled him back, saying: "Those things are sacred until we are wedded, and if you attempt to touch any of them or take away any, my friends who are here at hand will certainly kill you."

The girl was so earnest the Spaniard grew scared. He threw down the gold and submitted again to be blindfolded. When he returned to Cuzco he informed the authorities, and an order was issued for the arrest of the girl. The officers went to her hut, but they found that she and all the rest of the family had left for the mountains. And that was the last of the treasure.

There are records left by the Spaniards describing several localities where they think some of these Inca treasures may be found. One of these is in Chapter V of the Derretero of Valverde. Valverde died in Spain, after having returned from the mountains of Llanganati, in Ecuador. He was known to have gone many times into the mountains and to have brought out a great quantity of gold whose character showed it to be a part of the treasures of Atahualpa.

Upon dying, Valverde left directions giving the route to where the gold lay, and the King of Spain sent this description to Ambato, a town now on the railroad between the coast and Quito, and ordered the officers there to search for the treasure. I understand that the manuscript of the King's letter is still on record. I abbreviate the description: It tells the searcher for the treasure to stand on the mountain of Guapa, with his back to Ambato, and look to the east. From there he will see three mountains in the form of a triangle surrounding an artificial lake, into which the ancients, when they heard of the death of the Incan king, threw the gold they had prepared for his ransom. The Spanish directions then show one just how to get there, and the dangers he is liable to incur on the way. By following them he will finally come into a bog, filled with grains of gold that can be washed out in a stream near by, and still farther on is a stream cave where was the furnace through which the Indians melted their ores. This is on the left-hand side of the mountain. The directions are quite intricate, and so far no one has yet found the treasure.

Returning again to the treasures of Atahualpa, buried by Ruminagui, there was an Indian boy named Catuna, the son of one of the Inca chiefs, who was with his father at the time the hoard was secreted. This boy was injured in one of the battles and was supposed to be dead. He was taken up by one of the Spaniards, and he recovered. His injuries were so severe, however, that his features were distorted and he became hunchback. The Spaniard who adopted him, as it were, was a Capt. Suarez. He taught him to read and write, and made him a Christian. He treated the Indian boy so well that he came to love him, and his heart was filled with gratitude.

Later on, Suarez became unfortunate in his speculations, and his house was about to be sold by his creditors, when Catuna told him that if he would make a secret vault under the residence and give him some instruments for gold smelting he could find enough gold to pay off his debts. He also made his master promise not to say where the gold came from. Suarez agreed to this, and Catuna supplied so much treasure that he became a rich man. He gave a great deal to the church, and when he died in 1550 he made Catuna his heir.

After that, Catuna gave very liberally to the church and he was known to have so much money that he was questioned as to the source whence he derived his great wealth. He answered that he had made a compact with the evil one, to whom he had sold his soul for this gold. This statement was credited, and the more easily because at that time the Indians were believed to have regular intercourse with the devil.

After Catuna's death his premises were searched and the vault was discovered. It contained a great quantity of gold in ingots and bars, and also in vessels of gold that evidently came from the Incas. The people, however, persisted in believing that the story of the pact with the devil was true, "and," says Father Velasco, from whose letters this story comes, "the truth would have never been discovered if it had not been that Catuna's confessor, a Franciscan monk, had left a written account of the burial of Atahulpa's treasure, and his use of it, which had been confided to him."

A Song.

Like little motes that filter through
A shaft of gladdening sun,
Float lazily love-thoughts of you
The whole day long.

The sunbeam is your purity
That, as your hands, to you belongs,
And brightens all the heart of me
Like low, sweet songs.

Menelik a Modern Solomon.

[Pearson's Weekly:] Another good story is told of Menelik, by which it would appear he had studied the judicial methods of King Solomon.

Two Abyssinians were gathering fruit, one up a tree shaking the branches, and the other below collecting the fruit as it fell. A branch snapped suddenly and the man up the tree slipped and fell. He landed on his companion on the ground, breaking the unfortunate man's neck, but himself escaping without fatal injuries.

The family of the dead man demanded blood money, and when the accidental murderer replied that he had no money they demanded his life. This the man declined to part with, and the case went before the judges, finally working its way up to the supreme tribunal of Menelik himself.

The claimants by this time refused to accept blood money even if offered, and demanded their full right of a life for a life.

"Very well," said Menelik, in delivering judgment, "you have undoubtedly the right to claim this man's life; but the law says that the murderer must be killed in the same manner as his victim. Therefore let one of the dead man's relatives climb a high tree and fall on the accused until he kills him."

But none of the dead man's relatives cared to take the risk, so the innocent murderer was set free.

Johnson's Famous Dictionary.

[Indianapolis News:] Dr. Johnson's ignorance of derivations led him to absurdities of spelling that were admitted even by Boswell. Dr. Johnson's methods in tracing etymologies were of the simplest. "This is a great work, sir," said Dr. Adams to him. "How are you to get all the etymologies?" "Why, sir," replied Johnson, "here is a shelf with Junius and Skinner and others, and there is a Welsh gentleman who has published a collection of Welsh proverbs who will help me with the Welsh." And so the famous dictionary was written, with little assistance from the learned, as the dictionary-maker himself complained. That little came from a man who sent him a list of thirty derivations.

Quail are the Farmer's Aid.

[Farm and Fireside:] The chinch bug costs the farmers of the United States at least $100,000,000 a year. Various means for fighting these bugs have been devised, but their most successful enemies are the birds of the air. If the chinch bug is to be practically eradicated we must depend upon the efforts of the quail, as his home is in the brooding grounds of the chinch bug. Nowadays things that are done have a certain degree of the idea of permanency about them, hence the first steps in the permanent destruction of the chinch bug is a more complete protection of the quail that assists also in lowering the losses caused by the cotton weevil, the grasshopper, and the potato bug.

When Eunice Died.

Long hours before the evening-tide
Gathered the dusk in deeper gloom,
Before her baby-spirit sighed
And left me lonely in that room,
A shade crept o'er the country wide.

When Eunice died that day in June,
The sunshine faded from the sky,
The woodland fairies cast their shoon,
Then laid their dainty garlands by
And ceased their dancing 'neath the moon.

The breeze that wandered past my door,
Fraught with a wealth of healing balm,
That day no touch of comfort bore—
It sank into a ghostly calm,
Like waftings from the Other Shore.

When Eunice died, her little friends
All clad in white and very still (Like messengers the Savior sends
To help weak mortals bear His will
When sorrow all their heartstrings rends)—

The children came where Eunice lay
So fair, wrapped in her little shroud;
Some clasped their tiny hands to pray
Or sobbed their childish grief aloud—
While all the green fields turned to gray.

Since Eunice died the empty days
Pass like a leaden-footed dream;
Life flows along its wonted ways,
And yet the music of its stream
Was broken by grief's sad delays
When Eunice died.

Pure Food, Clean Houses and Good Water.

Summer Poultry.

SHOULD THRIVE WITH ATTENTION TO THESE CONDITION.

[Don't let your enthusiasm droop with the rise in the thermometer if you want your poultry to thrive. Fowls are like humans in many respects. They like shady places to escape from the heat; cool, clean drinking water; clean houses and good food.

It will pay you to provide these essentials, even at a little extra expense of money and energy. Read the following article to learn how.

The Light Brahmas shown herewith are the giants of the poultry world and a most interesting breed.]

IT HAS been said that with the advent of hot weather poultry enthusiasm wilts. There is a lot of truth in that. June is the beginning of the hot period, and if there is a month in the year that requires more good work than another it is June.

This is the month when the Grand Army of Lice are out in full force. They are prepared to do deadly work. There must be a strong effort made to rout them out.

Lice annually destroy more poultry life than any other agency. They weaken the stock—they put them in such a condition that sickness and death are the result. Good poultrymen are prepared in advance. They started fighting lice in January, and they have kept it up ever since. The easiest way to conquer lice is to begin fighting while they are weak.

There should be a thorough cleaning of every house at least once a week. The droppings should be gathered and a reliable coal-tar-product should be painted over the roosts, in the nest boxes and along the cracks and crevices. This will not only destroy myriads of vermin, but the fumes will kill whatever disease germs may be loitering about the premises. Disinfection is indeed an important step. Tobacco stems used for nesting material, in place of hay or straw, is invaluable as a vermicide. The heat of the hen's body sends the fumes from the tobacco up into the feathers, choking to death whatever insects come in contact with it.

Whitewash a Splendid Cleanser.

A good coat of whitewash, once or twice during the summer season, brightens up the interior of the house and is excellent both as a vermin destroyer and a disinfectant. If zenoleum or carbolic acid is added to the wash it will be still more effective.

The house made pure, and vermin destroyed, the next important step is to make the fowls comfortable, and keep them so. It is not possible to entirely prevent fowls from suffering from the heat, but an effort can be made that will save much of the discomfort. Fowls must have fresh air at night. They need it for a comfortable, healthful sleep, so necessary for gaining strength that they may be able to fulfill their duties the next day. For this purpose the scratching shed-house is a splendid acquisition. It freely admits the fresh air, and if the north, east and west walls of the house are made draft-proof, the fresh air striking the stock from the front will do a world of good. Fowls would rather roost outdoors at night than in a stuffy house, and we don't blame them. But where the house is comfortable they prefer indoors.

During the daytime there must be shady nooks—bushes or trees—where they can reach the cool air and soil, especially in the time of the day when the sun is the hottest. Where there is no natural shade provision may be made by erecting canopies or awnings of burlap, under which the fowls may gather and be sheltered.

For further comfort at night large flocks should be avoided, as they will crowd while on the roost, and the animal heat will bring about a condition of sweating. It is this sweating that rots the feathers, causing shedding during July and early August, and which beginners are very apt to mistake for molting.

Keep Drinking Vessels Clean.

The drinking vessels must not be neglected. Not only must they be kept filled with pure, fresh water, but they must be [illegible] scum; and every day, before being filled, they should have a good rinsing. All drinking vessels should be kept in the coolest possible place. Disease lurks in filthy drinking receptacles.

Strict attention must be given to the quality of the food. All articles of a heat-producing nature must be cut down in quantity. Corn or starchy matter, carbonaceous material, is necessary to a certain extent the entire year. It is required in order to properly balance the ration. But to feed carbonaceous foods in summer to excess will cause great suffering and loss. During winter fowls will need about 50 per cent. of carbonaceous matter, but during hot weather the amount must be cut down to about 25 per cent. Green food is both a medicine and a food, and should be plentifully supplied during the heated term.

When it is noticed that the ground in the runs is becoming baked by the hot sun, or that it is becoming filthy, it should be plowed—a small hand plow being useful for this purpose. If this is done in the evening, the fowls next morning will have a happy time scratching and gathering worms. It is remarkable how much a fowl finds to its liking in an upturned soil.

In feeding moist mashes during hot weather, no more should be put in the troughs than the fowls will eat up clean in about an hour. Wet food sours quickly and, it, therefore, should be a rule to visit all the flocks about an hour after feeding and remove all mash that is left in the troughs.

It is also a dangerous practice to throw all sorts of slops and table refuse into the runs. There is much of this that the fowls do not want, and in time this sours and taints the soil. Another matter worth considering is to avoid throwing cracked corn on the ground. This often mildews over night, and has been the cause of more cases of canker than any other agent. All grain food should be fed in the scratching-shed, scattered among light litter.

When the eggs are not required for hatching, the male birds should be removed from the flocks, for two reasons: First, unfertilized eggs will remain fresh twice as long as will those fertilized; and, second, the hens will be better prepared to shed their feathers in season if they are not harassed by the males. Eggs in summer should be gathered several times a day and kept in a cool place.

Broody hens should be removed to quiet, comfortable pens, where they will gradually get over the broody fever. No harsh methods should be employel in breaking up brooders, as considerable injury is often done by reckless, cruel treatment.

Scaly legs on fowls is a condition due to uncleanliness, and where there is the least sign of this trouble prompt action should be taken. Grease of any kind is a remedy—coal oil and lard, equal parts, is an old-time and reliable treatment. One scaly-legged fowl in a flock will in time communicate the disease to other members while on the roost at night.

The precautions for summer are comfortable houses, shade, pure food, clean water, freedom from lice, disinfected houses, pure soil and freedom from exposures.

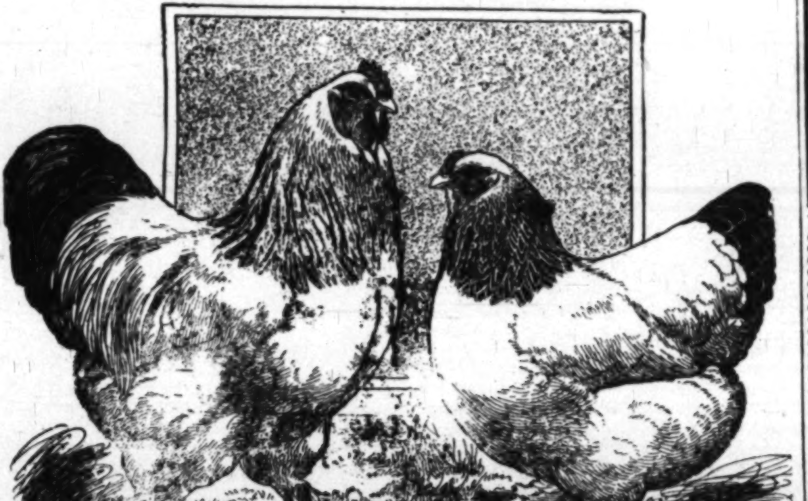
[New York Press:] If proper methods in the growing of pullets were employed much larger quantities of fresh eggs could be produced in the fall and winter, and this would assist materially in keeping the price for fresh eggs within reasonable limits at such times. The lack of a sufficient supply of fresh eggs during the fall and winter forces the public to depend upon eggs stored in the preceding spring, and storage eggs advance greatly in price because of the scarcity of fresh eggs.

[New York Press:] A poultry house should always be, if possible, placed on ground sloping slightly away from it; then in wet weather the water drains away. If the ground is quite level the water coming off from the roof shows a tendency to remain in the form of puddles. A trench should be dug to carry it away, or, better still, there should be a spout on the roof to carry the water away down to a spout connected with a surface drain. It is impor-

Light Brahmas a Mammoth Breed.



Asia again furnishes one of the most interesting of all fowls. It was in the early forties of the last century that Shanghais and Chittagongs were brought from the Orient of astonishing size and rare beauty. They could eat off the top of barrels, so large were they. From these were developed our Asiatic breeds—Cochins and Brahmas.

Their first impetus was given by George P. Burnham of Boston, in 1853, when he presented several specimens to the late Queen Victoria. They sprang into popularity at once.

In America fanciers demand that the Light Brahma cock weigh twelve pounds, cockerel, ten pounds; hen, nine and a half pounds, and pullet, eight pounds, but they more often exceed this weight. Many of the young birds will weigh pounds heavier than the weight demanded for old stock. It is the giant of poultrydom, representing probably the highest development of the Asiatic type of fowls.

Light Brahmas are big-boned and carry good flesh, and are most satisfactory for the production of large roasting chickens, being used extensively, both pure bred and as a cross, to produce the famous "soft roaster" of the Boston market.

Chicks are Rugged.

They possess rugged vitality and are thus suited to the more rigorous climates. The hens are good layers, some specimens have made enviable records. The eggs are rich, dark brown and are in great demand in big city markets. They are good layers far into the winter months.

The chicks are rapid growers, are easy to rear, but mature slowly.

Light Brahmas are clothed in the most simple and striking colors—black and white. The body is white and the tail is black, the wings black and white, and the hackle retains the black stripe. This color contrast is particularly striking, and the fowls command admiration because of their great size and striking color combination. They are the most docile and tractable of fowls, being easily confined by a low fence, and are not inclined to wander far from home.

GOLDEN HOARDS BURIED IN THE HIGH ANDES.

LAKE OF URCOS AND ITS CHAIN OF SOLID GOLD—NINETY MILLION DOLLARS' WORTH OF GOLD GOTTEN FROM CUZCO BY THE SPANIARDS—THE DOLD-PLATED TEMPLES OF THE SUN AND MOON—HOW A BABY BROUGHT ITS DADDY UNTOLD WEALTH. THE TREASURES OF THE LAKE OF THE TWO STONES AND THAT OF THE GRANITE GIANT NEAR CUENCA—INDIAN HUNCHBACK WHO SOLD HIMSELF TO THE DEVIL.

From Our Own Correspondent.

URCOS (Peru.)—Have you ever heard of Urcos? It is a little mud town on the railroad between Cuzco and Lake Titicaca. It is more than two miles above the sea, high up in the Andes and not far from Lake Urcos, in which are said to be buried treasures of the Incas worth many millions. When the Spaniards under Pizarro had killed the Inca King Atahualpa they marched upon Cuzco. The Indians knew their greed for the precious metals, and they took most of their treasures from the capital city and secretly buried them. According to tradition, they threw millions of dollars' worth of gold into this lake, and with other things the great golden chain that ran around their main plaza. This plaza remained intact until a few years ago. It was about 500 feet long and several hundred feet wide, so that the length of the chain was probably between 1000 and 2000 feet. The chain was pure gold, wrought into links about a foot long and as large around as the wrist of a man. The links were so heavy that a man could not lift more than one of them at a time, and it is said that hundreds of Indians were required to carry the chain. They took it up the valley of Cuzco and threw it into the lake, and there it is supposed to lie to this day, although many have searched for it in vain. The treasure hunters have dived into the waters and clawed over the mud near the shore. They have also dragged the lake with grappling hooks, but in places it is exceedingly deep, and so far the treasure has not been discovered. At one time a syndicate was organized to drain the lake. This syndicate had a capital of $5,000,000 and its plan was to tunnel the mountainside. But the rock was too tough and the enterprise was abandoned.

The treasures of the Incas were not confined to Cuzco. I have heard stories of buried hoards all along the Andes from Panama to Lake Titicaca. They had vast quantities of gold and silver in Quito, and at Cerro de Pasco I found a party of Americans and British who were prospecting for one of these hoards. They have already spent thousands of dollars, and are sinking more every day. While I was before the vault of the Cuzco Cathedral I was shown a golden box weighing thirty-six pounds, made of the plates that were torn from the Inca Temple of the Sun, and was told that that cathedral was largely built by Inca gold.

I understand that the treasures of gold that were stored on the holy islands of the Sun and the Moon were thrown into Lake Titicaca, and I hear other traditions of the vast amounts of gold and silver the Spaniards failed to get. That which they obtained was greater than the wealth of Croesus. The amount taken from the temples of Cuzco alone is said to have been worth more than $90,000,000, and a part of this went to Cajamarca to free the Inca Emperor Atahualpa when he was treacherously imprisoned by Pizarro. The Inca Emperor had come in friendship. He was carried to Cajamarca in a litter of massive gold covered with a cloth embroidered with the plumes of tropical birds. This cloth was studded with gold and silver plates. Atahualpa's hair was decorated with gold. He had on a golden crown, and around his neck was a collar of emeralds.

At the start Pizarro treated Atahualpa well, but a little later on charged him with treachery, and put him in a prison about fourteen feet square. The Inca king took a stone and scratched a mark on the wall as high up as he could reach, telling Pizarro that he would fill the room to that height with gold if he could only be free. This proposition was accepted, and gold in the shape of vases, utensils and plates was brought in from all parts of the empire. It was melted down by the Indians under the direction of the Spaniards. When the prison room was filled to above the mark made by Atahualpa, he was released. But he was still kept under surveillance, and a little later was accused of plotting against the Spaniards. He was given a mock trial, and was condemned to be burned, his execution being brought about largely by Friar Valverde, who was afterward made Bishop of Cuzco.

During my stay in Cuzco I visited the Temple of the Sun, upon whose foundations now stand the church and convent of the Dominicans. This was known by the Incas as "The Coricancha" or the "place of gold." It was rectangular on three sides, with a great oval at the back, and its walls were two stories high and altogether about 1200 feet long. These walls were surrounded by a thick cornice or border of gold about eight inches wide, and where the wall joined the roof there was a broad golden band. The roof was covered with gold, and the inner walls of the temple were literally plated with it, vegetables and vines of all sorts being engraved upon them.

Opposite the entrance to the temple was a mighty plate of solid gold, heavily incrusted with emeralds and precious stones. This represented a human face surrounded with rays. It was the image of the sun whom the Incas worshiped, and used gold in doing so. They considered that metal sacred to the sun, and often referred to it as the tears of that heavenly body. On both sides of the image were the embalmed bodies of the Incas of the past, each seated on a chair of solid gold.

In addition to the Temple of the Sun, the Incas had temples to the stars and moon. The traditions say that there were chapels to these heavenly bodies in the great temple at Cuzco, and it is whispered that evidences of these have recently been discovered. When I went through the church my guide was not permitted to go with me. The holy father in charge performed this duty himself; and the guide thought that it was to prevent me from learning what they had recently discovered.

All of the ornaments and utensils devoted to the religion of the Incas were made of gold or silver. In the great hall of the sun there were golden ewers which held the water used at the time of the sacrifices; and there were twelve silver jars filled with Indian corn. There was a golden llama with a golden fleece; and also golden birds and golden flowers, all of life size.

The Spaniards found a vast amount of gold in the cemeteries of the Incas. Some of those monarchs, after death, had their royal bowels filled with gold. Gold was buried with them. There is a record that one Garcia Guiterrez paid one-fifth of the treasures he found in the graveyards at Trujillo to the Spanish crown. This was only 20 per cent. of the whole, and it shows that his tant that the ground around the house, as well as the house itself, be kept dry, as fowls never do well on wet land. On no account should the roof be made of corrugated zinc. Such a house will be cold in winter and warm in summer.

[New York Sun:] Before putting away the incubator for the season it will be found an excellent plan to wash the wooden frames of the trays and other portions which have been rendered at all unclean with hot water and complete the job by drying the different parts in the hot sunshine. When the different pieces are assembled together spray the interior of the entire machine with some disinfectant. Then, when the time arrives for the next lot of eggs to be incubated in the fall months, the incubator will be found in prime condition for immediate use.

[Southern Farm Journal:] I remember seeing folks try to break up setting hens by tying long rag strings to their tails. My! how those poor old hens did run; up hill, down hill, all over the place, like something possessed. Others would tie a broody hen by the leg to a post or fence. There she would hop and struggle in vain, suffering in the hot sun, denied food or water. All this is cruel in the extreme. It is perfectly natural for a hen to become broody. It is according to the laws of nature. If you do not want her to set try this plan: Place her in a clean, dry coop. Feed her liberally, allowing plenty of fresh water; continue kind treatment for three days. I've scarcely known a failure, and soon the hen is laying again.

[Memphis Commercial Appeal:] Eggs, like milk, readily absorb odors about them. They should never be packed in musty straw nor in bad smelling boxes. They should never be allowed to get wet. Such treatment will be noticed in the flavor within a few hours. The seasons also have an influence upon the flavor and keeping quality of eggs. The March and April eggs are the best and can be kept the longest. The October and November eggs are the next best. The green grass and other things that hens eat while running at large in the summer injure the flavor, while the summer heat debilitates the hen and robs the eggs of firmness and keeping quality.

[Baltimore American:] It is quite probable that the greatest source of loss among young chicks in all sections of the country is due to the disease or, more properly, group of diseases popularly known as white diarrhoea. This trouble has long been known, but apparently it was not generally recognized as being such a scourge until about fifteen years ago. The mother hen is the original source of infection, the organism being present in the ovary. Infection can apparently be spread from adult to adult. A varying proportion of the eggs laid by infected hens carry the organism in the yolk. Chicks produced from such eggs have the disease when hatched. Infected chicks spread the disease among their normal companions through the medium of infected droppings. Chicks which survive the infection, at least the pullets, harbor the organism, which finally locates in the ovary. If such pullets are used for breeding the vicious circle is completed and the disease perpetuated in the flock in that manner.

[New York Press:] The influence of the male in a flock is more potent than is supposed. It it not difficult to find flocks in which uniformity prevails, although such birds were the offspring of a pure-bred male and hens of mixed breeding. With the use of pure-bred sires the second year the advantage is much greater, as the characteristics of the sire are more firmly fixed. If a farmer having twenty-five hens raises a hundred chicks and increases their weight two pounds each at maturity he will add $20 to their value at 10 cents a pound, and for every extra cent a pound received he gains $10. Considering the fact that the cost of a male is but a few dollars, it pays to use the pure-breds. It must also be kept in view that not only weight and quantity are secured, but quality, choice poultry bringing more in the market than inferior stock. The inbreeding of poultry on farms will also be guarded against, the fowls becoming hardier and a larger number of chicks raised. The gain from quantity and quality of poultry is not all. The egg-producing capacity of the flock will be improved and with an interest in thoroughbreds will follow better care of the poultry.

cleanliness—that is the secret of it all. I really think that epidemics did not spread as readily in those days as they do now. One day one of the proprietors of the United States Hotel came into my office. I noticed that his face was red and swollen. He asked me to come to the hotel, as somebody had let loose a lot of frogs in his room. I very quickly saw what was the trouble, told him to remain where he was, and went after his partner. The man had smallpox. The partner sent the hotel omnibus for him, and took him to a place where he could be isolated, and I could attend him. This matter disposed of, the omnibus went back into hotel service, without disinfection, carrying passengers. No one was taken with the disease."

Dr. Widney was the founder of the medical school in Los Angeles, established in 1885. It was first located on Aliso street, between Center and Lyons, opposite the brewery which stands on the site of the old Vignes vineyard. The house itself had been occupied by Vache Freres, vintners, the cellars being used to store wines, a firm still in existence now on Alameda and Commercial. The school was founded under the auspices of the University of Southern California. Dr. Widney was dean for ten years, and also filled the chair for theory and practice of medicine and medico-Latin. The school was later removed to Buena Vista street—now North Broadway, and is under the auspices of the State University. Dr. Widney donated the property and a large sum of money to its establishment. The first class was graduated in 1888.

Dr. Widney has been closely identified with the development of Los Angeles, was one of the prime movers in State division, and has written notable books. He is a man of large intellectual attainments, and is crowning his days with a wonderful philanthropic work.

"I was very fortunate when I first came to Los Angeles in February, 1868," declared Dr. Joseph Kurtz. "Dr. Den handed over to me his practice in obstetrics and midwivery. Dr. H. T. Hayes went away to his brother-in-law, who was Ambassador to Japan, and left his general practice to me. Drs. Den, Hayes and Griffin were the physicians of the city when I came, although Drs. Widney, Orme, Eichler, Stanawly, Wise, Lindley, Lasher, Brainerd, Richardson, Worthington and others followed soon after. Dr. Henry Worthington was my partner for twelve or thirteen years. We of the fraternity had nicknames for each other. There was 'Holy Gee' Brainerd—because his initials were H. G.; 'El Doctor Colorado' Den—because of Dr. Den's red hair; 'El Doctor Cito Colorado'—myself, because I also had red hair, and was short to boot.

"I discovered our first and perhaps only native case of pneumonia. Bacteria, germs, little bugs were unknown at that time. When I made my report the other doctors declared that the disease was impossible in this climate. But after I had invited them to investigate the symptoms as I had done, they found, to their astonishment, that I was right. I brought the patient through. I served as Coroner for six years. In those days it was necessary for a Coroner to be also a physician. I was asked to help in the establishment of the medical school. I was a young man, and quite shy. I shall never forget my embarrassment when I went through with my first lecture. A noted physician, Dr. Charles Bacc, and his son were seated directly in front of me. I sat down at the finish feeling that I had made a hopeless muddle of things. Judge of my surprise when this doctor shook my hand, and declared that my talk had determined him to enter his son in the college. It had been the habit of the students to go across the street for their little glass of beer after hours. This time I went with them.

"Professional fees were very much less in those days than they are now—$2.50 per visit, and $1 for each mile out of town. A $30 visit would now cost a patient some $60 or more. I was surgeon for the Matthews Guard, and also for the National Guard under Gen. Phineas Banning. He was also head of the Wilmington and Los Angeles Railroad, for which I was surgeon. He had a splendid home in Wilmington. When he or any of his family was ill, he would send a special train for me, with the message, 'Come to the aid of your gallant general!' One time, after heavy rains, my 'special' became stuck in the mud." An engine was sent post haste, and I went to my 'gallant general' in the cab.

"Eisler and I ran a drug store for a time on Commercial street between Main and Los Angeles. But it was rather embarrassing, since he had to put up my prescriptions and I had to put up his. It complicated our practice so that we were glad enough to sell out to Preuss and Heinzeman—who, by the way, established the first really first-class drug store in the city.

"Those were great days. Men trusted each other, and were worthy of trust. When I wanted to buy some lots up on the hill, on Buena Vista, I had no money. I went to my friend, Jim Hayward, of the banking house of Downey & Hayward, and told him I had bid in some lots, and had to have some money within a few days.

"'How much do you want?' he asked.

"'Eight hundred dollars,' I replied.

"'How much have you paid down?'

"'Nothing.'

"'What security do you offer?'

"'The lots themselves.'

"Hayward almost jumped out of his chair. 'Why, I might as well buy the lots myself!'

"'But you're going to let me have the money, and I'll pay it back in a couple of months,' I assured him.

"He looked at me for a moment astounded, then his face broke into a smile. 'Well, I presume you'll have to have it,' he rejoined. I bought my lots, and paid back the money through the sale of two of them, with 2 per cent. interest per month—the regular rate then—on schedule time.

"I built a home up on the hill later. The only way to get water up there was by pumping it; and every night the residents stood in line back of where the postoffice now stands, and took turns at pumping. We were called the Pumping Guard. Later on Prudent Beaudry put in a steam pumping machine. We paid $300 to connect up with it, and for the privilege of giving up $5 a month for our water—and glad to get it at that. Water came high in those days.

"Dr. MacGowan was one of the first professors in our school. Dr. S. Knopf, a lung specialist, of international fame, who received the prize from the German Emperor for the best paper on tuberculosis, was one of my students. Dr. Bradley was the best specialist on children's diseases during my days of practice."

Dr. Kurtz is hale and hearty, with a large family of lovely grandchildren, whose bright young faces and ringing laughter fill his home with sunshine.

Dr. H. Nadeau, who came in 1876, has bachelor quarters in the Hellman building. He does not engage in regular practice, although he does not refuse an urgent request, and always responds where there is no money for a fee. He is frequently called for consultations by the well-to-do, at charges commensurate with his valuable services.

"There were 12,260 inhabitants when I came," he says. "Richardson, Widney, Kurtz, Orme, Worthington, Ross and Gelcich were the physicians whom I remember upon my arrival. I was connected for three years with the medical college, and was for twenty-eight years physician for the French Hospital at the corner of Castellar and College streets. I was made Coroner in 1879, a position which I held for five years. It was not a political office in those days. The Coroner must know his business as a doctor, and be able to perform a scientific post-mortem. I have been practicing since 1862, and have celebrated the golden wedding of my marriage to my profession.

"I was struck by the fact, upon my arrival, that there were no Spanish or Mexican doctors. They came later, of course. I was not much of a mixer, and I did not understand the Spanish language. Dr. Kurtz had French, German, Spanish and English at his command.

"One time I was called as Coroner to Redondo—then Salt Work—the only place on the Pacific Coast at the time where salt was manufactured. I secured a wagon, an undertaker, a coffin, and a constable as guide, since there was no defined route to the beach. We started at 11 o'clock in the morning, and drove and drove. Darkness came, and still we drove, until I began to see that the constable was lost as well as the rest of us. I ordered a halt. I opened up the coffin, and as it was a fit, I slept very comfortably in it until daylight, when we resumed our journey. We did not find the body until 11 o'clock. I had an appointment for a big dinner that night back in Los Angeles. We did not arrive until 1 o'clock. Needless to say, I was minus a dinner."

THERE is a phrase in a French author (is it Balzac?) which the Eagle dearly loves to lay to his soul as a "flattering unction." It runs thus: "Le dindon fait troupe, l'aigle est toujours seul." In United States parlance this means, "Turkeys go in bands; the eagle is a solitary bird."

Now my fellow-creatures, dearly beloved brethren, all made by the same dear God, you humans are very much like beasts and birds and fishes. The Eagle has seen men with faces very aquiline, others with heads very leonine, still another class with beaks like hawks, some with necks like bulls, others with bodies as awkward as an old cow, many with fronts like rams, and others look like sharks or other denizens of the deep. Then there are commonplace men who are just like turkeys or geese, making an awful lot of noise about nothing, and there are some human beings that have no more courage than a dove and others with no more vitality in them than a barnyard sparrow.

The Eagle naturally likes most men of the aquiline type and loves to hear about them from the pages of history or in the current literature of the day. The Eagle has been perched on the friendly shoulders of a human companion recently looking over a book about one of the most aquiline men that ever lived, and the book is by a man of the same type. The author is known as Lord Rosebery, an Englishman, and the book concerns the last days of Napoleon a prisoner on the island of St. Helena. The story is pathetic in the extreme, and it is told in exceedingly eloquent phrase. One thing that pleased the Eagle about it is that although written by an Englishman, and although the English to this day have with few exceptions got over the awful terror that Napoleon inspired in their hearts and are generally utterly unable to do the man's memory justice, yet Lord Rosebery not only does this, but, metaphorically speaking, lays the lashes of a cat-o'-nine-tails on the backs of his countrymen of a century ago in bitter irony, biting sarcasm and fiercely eloquent invective.

The perusal of the book brought to mind the history of this aquiline man in a way that has filled the Eagle's heart and mind. He sees the little Corsican, small of stature and nothing to distinguish him very much from other men, a subaltern officer in the French army, leaning against a lamp post as the Parisian mob, beastly ignorant, devilishly vicious, miserably poor, downtrodden, in despair rising against their oppressors, royalty, nobility, hierarchy and wealth, and as he saw the diabolical actions of that wild mob the little subaltern officer shrugged his shoulders and, his face wreathed in a grim smile, said: "If I were the King of France I would turn loose a park of artillery down that street and sweep that dog kennel into the Seine."

That was when the last quarter of the seventeenth century was drawing to a close, and in one generation of men Napoleon's career outmatched anything in human history. The retreat of Xenophon and his ten thousand from Babylon to the Euxine Sea, and all the conquests of Alexander of Macedon from the beginning until he sat weeping "for more worlds to conquer" were nothing to the achievements of this little Latin man from the island of Corsica.

The Eagle can close his eyes and see him at Marengo, at the bridge of Lodi, at Austerlitz, and can follow him through the invasion of Russia, watching the Kremlin go up in flames and the whole of the Russian capital Moscow crumble into ashes. And then following the French army in the retreat from Russia, men from the warm valleys of the south and from the beautiful plains of France traveling through snow and wading icebound rivers through all the terrors of a Russian winter, including the crossing of the Beresino, with the Cossack cavalry hanging upon the flanks of the hungry, sleepless, weary, half-naked, wholly hungry French soldiers like a pack of fierce wolves hanging on the flanks of a herd of caribou up in the wilds of North America in a similar semi-arctic winter.

We can look down upon Dresden and see every crowned head in Europe prostrate at Gen. Bonaparte's feet, can see him in Paris with the Pope of Rome crowning him Emperor of the French and impatient at the slowness of the great prelate, snatching the crown out of his hands and placing it upon his own head. So we follow this Eagle-man to Elba with his empire shrunk into a little island scarcely as big as a farm, watch his escape from there, his return to Paris, and again taking the field with an army of enthusiastic followers numbering 100,000. All this was followed by the allied forces of all Europe gathering around Waterloo on the plains of Belgium where the victor of so many battles was the victim of this final one.

Then when they caught him they were afraid to let him live guarded by a regiment of soldiers in England or any other part of Europe, and sent him away to a torrid, sun-baked rock in mid-Atlantic off the coast of Africa. In the language of another: "Oh, what a fall was there, my countrymen!" Cardinal Wolsey regrets his terrible fall, and says, when a man falls as he does, "He falls like Lucifer, never to rise again." If there ever was a fall like Lucifer's it was that of Napoleon Bonaparte.

He is seen one day at Dresden with all Europe at his feet and all the crowned heads of Europe casting their diadems before him as if he were a very god. The scene changes and we see him penned on this island in its most rugged and inaccessible place, his palace a cow-house infested by rats in hundreds, his sleep disturbed by African mosquitoes in greater numbers, his retinue shrunk to two or three devoted followers of his fortunes, and several of the great powers of Europe with commissioners to watch him, guarded as he is by a regiment of soldiers, with muskets and cannon, and the island surrounded by the swiftest war vessels of the day, all Europe actually panic-stricken at one man.

He said himself: "I have made courtiers; I never tried to make friends." And his two or three attendants say that even for them he had no friendship. He was very aloof to all people, as much so as the very Eagle that wings its way through the heavens. And a cow-house for a palace, the little retinue of three faithful servants for courtiers, with all the discomfort of the rats and the mosquitoes, were not half so annoying to this Eagle-man as were his captors and guardians, cowardly as sparrows, unsympathetic as vultures, and loquacious as geese. There is no such anti-climax in all history as this successful general, this grand emperor, lodged as he was, with the surroundings that were his, and guarded by men like Sir Hudson Lowe and Lord Bathurst. No infamous ignominy could be heaped upon a man's head that they neglected to visit fallen greatness with in the person of Napoleon.

They squabbled about what title should be given him, while he insisted with firm dignity that he be addressed as Emperor and treated with imperial deference. When a letter from that horrible boor Sir Hudson Lowe was handed to him addressed to Gen. Bonaparte he returned it to the bearer with the remark full of dignified self-respect: "Ah, this, is for Gen. Bonaparte. The last time I saw him was on the battlefield of Austerlitz." This remark recalls to the English mind a remark of our own aquiline man, Gen. Washington, to whom Gen. Clinton, the English commander, sent a letter addressed to Mr. Washington, and the great American put it in his pocket unopened, with the dry remark: "Ah, Mr. Washington is a planter down in Virginia. I shall take pleasure in seeing that this letter reaches him after the war is over."

And if anyone thinks that war was all that Napoleon was capable of he had better read the Code Napoleon and study the French laws. He was not only the greatest general of his time, but also the greatest statesman.

Yours,

The Eagle
HIS MARK

THE LANCER

A READER is indignant to the point of abuse because The Lancer is getting too mild, too kindly, too amiable. He calls me a white-corpuscled creature and bemoans the fact that I haven't flayed anyone really brutally for weeks.

What is the good of a fellow trying to improve his disposition if this is the sort of appreciation he gets.

And it is no easy matter to be consistently unpleasant, brutally candid, trenchantly sarcastic. When all the world is rocked in spring sunshine and the doves of peace and mediation fill the air; when the United States runs a glorious gory war on peacefully apologetic methods and its navy gently sails on the soft blue billows off Vera Cruz providing a Turneresque seascape in natural art for the appreciative inhabitants; when the day after Home Rule has become law in Ireland Ulster absolutely disappears from the newspapers; when a woman's suffrage bill is amiably discussed in the House of Lords; with weddings in every breath of air we inhale and peaches and apricots appearing on the market, how on earth is a chap to vent his spleen, even supposing he has any spleen to vent?

The only nasty things that anyone is saying about anything just now is in connection with the little golf tournament over in Merrie England wherein ten American invaders were ushered with somewhat boisterous arrogance. We were expected to teach the Britisher a thing or two about golf and bring the world's title over to the United States. But we didn't, and a horrid lot of sarcasm boiled over on both sides of the Atlantic.

Barks and Bites.

WE MODERN dogs have raised barking to a science—we can bark louder and longer and fiercer than any dogs before. There is blood and brimstone in our mighty growl—but when it comes to deeds we act that sweet, just the prettiest little ways.

We bluster gorgeously when there is no danger, but directly there is a chance of someone getting hurt we compromise. We smile amiably and guess we were just joking. That's called being civilized—it's the great difference between us and barbarians. They dance and shout when it means war. We dance and shout when it doesn't—and call in the mediators.

That method may lack a certain heroism, a certain picturesqueness, but it's a lot more expedient, more comfortable, more civilized. And, after all, it is so very much better to work off our emotions on intense baseball. There we can be as ferocious and brutal as we like in perfect safety.

A Random Shot.

WRITING about those engaging people who touch us for little loans and little gifts with such consummate delicacy and tact a few weeks ago, I told about a variety of persons in different stations of life who managed to live largely by "touching." For journalistic purposes I conjured a figure out of my imagination—a purely mythical person—whom I showed as being given free membership at a good club, with the monthly dues waived, free entertainments, meals, etc., in fact, a concrete example of the gentlemanly sponger who pays in good-fellowship and amiability.

I knew his kind for a possible personage, but had never actually met one in the life—imagine my amusement to have half a dozen men indignantly call me up and ask me why I was rubbing it into poor dear M——, or poor dear Bill, or poor dear Jack, as the case might be. It would seem that half the clubs in town have their "touching" member and each thought I had singled him out for attack! My professional discernment was greatly flattered.

And the incident recalls the old chestnut about the practical joke in which a dozen telegrams were sent to a dozen clergymen to the effect that "Flee, all is discovered." And eleven flew.

The King and the Suffragettes.

ONE does feel that King George missed a great opportunity when he refused to receive a peaceful deputation of the suffragettes in England. Why not? There are so very few uses to which a king can be put nowadays, and it seems to me the women were paying him an unusual compliment in assuming that his influence either way would make any difference.

Even if he was scared stiff, it would have been the kingly thing to hide the fact, especially as the whole suffragette campaign is against property, not life. They will wreck an empty house (very illogical, of course,) but they have repeatedly announced their intention to respect human life, no matter how violent their militancy.

The subject's right to petition the king in cases of oppression has been established through the centuries and it would have given the monarch a genuine raison d'etre to show the world that there was still one section of his subjects who considered he had a little power. As it is, he has been at great pains to make it obvious that any subject who regards the King as the head of the realm and the fount of justice is a dangerous lunatic. Which they probably were, of course, but it wasn't a good royal policy to proclaim the fact.

Lurid Revelations.

THESE reform movements are too lurid for my taste. It is the fashion to improve our tastes by disgusting our sensibilities. So we have lurid white-slavery exposures, Chrystabel Pankhurst's book on venereal diseases, and John Galsworthy on abattoirs. Slaughtering animals for food has furnished John with a sumptuously grewsome opportunity for dramatic detail and anguish. He succeeds very effectually in making us thoroughly sick—that is to reform us all into vegetarians. The dissemination of unpleasant knowledge is a pretty little modern conceit which may or may not help to make us more highly civilized and respectable.

In fact, it seems to have been found impossible to reform us through fostering our ideals. Our ideals pined away and died under the poetic attention. So now we are to be horrified into decency in the same way that certain hell-exploiting parsons hope to scare us into piety; with the result that we just simply cut hell out of our faith, and we shall end, for comfort's sake, in absolutely declining to believe these earthly horrors.

Human nature has been endowed with a remarkable ability to disbelieve that which it doesn't want to believe. A merciful thing, as otherwise we should go mad from terror and life would be untenable.

There never was a parent yet who could make an offspring profit by his experience through expatiating upon the tribulations that befell his own mistakes. We are endowed with an abiding hope and the majority of us will all believe in the exceptional case, insist upon trying for ourselves, insist upon believing what we want to believe.

Municipal Ethics.

A FOND parent was fearfully indignant a few days ago because her small daughter came home from her cookery class in tears. It appears that the lady who presides over this branch of instruction at a school near Fiftieth street asked her pupils to draw up a menu for lunch. When it came to the beverage item most little girls declared for tea or coffee, but one original youngster decided for beer.

Consternation of cook-lady, shocked reproof for pupil!

"Disgusting!" announced the teacher; "respectable people never drink beer;" and she held forth eloquently upon the vulgarity and iniquity of such a taste. The poor little girl was mortified to anguish, and cried through her tears that they always drank beer at lunch in her home—at least, mother and father did.

Locomotive Engineers Well Paid.

[Philadelphia Record:] The best-paid locomotive engineers in Italy receive $1.64 a day, firemen 85 cents, conductors $1.28, head brakemen $1.10 and an ordinary brakeman 73 cents, after long years of service. A station guard's pay ranges between 50 and 70 cents, and a switchman, beginning at 51 cents, in eighteen years may attain a wage of 70 cents a day. In reality they all receive considerably less, for the government deducts from their pay the income tax and pension premium. It is not surprising that the men are threatening to strike for better wages. When American railroad employees contrast their own compensation with these figures they may well feel that they are the best-paid workers of their kind in the world.

This Human Body of Ours.

Plain Truths and Simple.

Eat Meat or What?

THERE has been a decided movement toward vegetarianism for a number of years, and it seems to have a very substantial foundation if one is to judge by the effect an exclusively vegetable diet has had upon its devotees. The habit of eating meat is a hard one to overcome. We have grown up to it, and whether or not we believe that the evidence of the teeth is that man was not intended for a carnivorous animal the aroma of a well-cooked steak or of roast beef is attractive and hard to turn away from. Vegetables do not have such an attraction. To become a vegetarian is to adopt a course of life from a belief that it is better, all things considered, than to remain a meat eater. It is an abstract proposition, and has to be met face to face the same as the user of morphine has to settle with himself whether he shall remain a slave to the drug or shall break away and become a man again.

As regards nutriment, meat has nothing over vegetables and grains. Experiments have demonstrated that for the growth and repair of tissues material is most readily and abundantly yielded by animal foods, but for yielding of energy for the maintenance of heat and the doing of work the material is most easily obtained from the vegetable kingdom. Putting sugar and butter aside as only adjuncts of the food, we find that rice, meat and eggs (and fish is included with meat) head the list of digestible articles, practically yielding up all the nutriment they contain to the body, the amount of waste material of either of them not exceeding 5 per cent. Of bread the amount of nutriment absorbed depends upon the fineness of the flour, 5 per cent. more being obtained from white bread than from rye bread.

The amount of tissue-forming material in beef is three ounces per pound; oatmeal, 2½; eggs, 2¼; bread, 1; milk, ¾; potatoes, 4-10; sago, nothing. On the other hand the amount of energy-yielding material in each pound practically leaves meat in the discard. Sago, which contains no tissue material, heads the list, containing 12.8 ounces per pound; oatmeal, 11.7 ounces; bread, 8.5; potatoes, 3.2; beef, .5 ounce. You can therefore build up the tissues of the body with meat, but you cannot keep up your energy on a meat diet. You can get a lot of energy from sago, but no tissue. You can get both tissue and energy from oatmeal. There is therefore no argument in favor of a ration of meat, but it is in favor of such foods as will give both tissue and energy material. The man who eats meat must combine with it a liberal quantity of vegetable foods to secure the requisite energy for his day's work. For the man who is doing little hard work, a vegetarian fare will supply all that his system requires, and if he makes a proper choice of foods he can secure all the tissue material the body will require for hard, energetic work.

The amount of energy contained in food is calculated in heat units of calories, a unit being the amount required to raise the temperature of a pint of water 4 deg. Fahrenheit. If a man rises from his chair and walks about eight feet and returns, he uses up one of these units. Even if the body is resting, some heat units are being continually consumed, it being estimated that the body is giving off heat about as rapidly as a sixteen-candle-power electric lamp. Roughly speaking the average requirement is the amount of food that will yield from 2000 to 3000 calories of heat (energy) every twenty-four hours.

The number of heat units yielded per pound by the more common articles of food is as follows: Butter, 7264; cheese, 4647; oatmeal, 4004; flour, 3936; ground rice, 3813; sugar, 3348; yolk of egg, 3423; hard boiled egg, 2383; beef (lean,) 1567; veal, 1314; potatoes, 1013; milk, 662; carrots, 527; cabbage, 434.

Enough has been said perhaps to enable you to pick out a vegetarian diet, if you wish; and if you do you will find yourself in good company, for many of the most intellectual people of today belong to that class—George Bernard Shaw, Miss Marie Corelli, August Rodin, the famous French sculptor; Mme. Rejane, Sarah Bernhardt, [illegible] Mme. Maeterlinck, Princess George of Greece, Prof. Herschel Parker of Columbia University, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Edwin Markham, Wu Ting Fang, and Senator La Follette. A vegetarian need not be ashamed of his company.

Sunlight and Tuberculosis.

You never saw a tuberculous person among the burned-brown habitues of our beach resorts. They are always vigorous persons, and one reason for their vigor is their habit of thus exposing their bodies to the direct rays of the sun. Any person afflicted with the "white plague" would do well to follow their example. It is said that the Indians in Central America treat consumption and rheumatism by having the patients lie in the bright sunlight several hours a day, and that this custom has prevailed for centuries. Eleven years ago Rollier established sanatoria near Leysin, Switzerland, at an elevation above sea level of 3800 to 4500 feet, for the treatment of surgical tuberculosis. He began his sunlight treatment by exposing his patients to the sunshine but brief periods at the start, increasing the time each day till they became brown enough to be hardly distinguished from Mexicans. The method adopted prevented any of the patients becoming blistered or even sore from the exposure.

The conditions under which this treatment was found successful are tuberculosis of the glands, especially the glands of the neck, tuberculosis of the bones and joints, and tuberculosis of the skin. Bernhard of Switzerland also uses this sunshine method in the treatment of skin cancer and old, slow-healing ulcers, wounds and frost bites. With so simple an agency as the sun it should be easy for any one to enjoy a meaure of good health, provided, of course, proper attention be paid to the food and habits.

For Sale—Blood.

Joseph Wiley, a vigorous 22-year-old resident of New York, has developed a new industry, that of producing and selling his blood to patients suffering from wasting diseases. Thirty dollars a quart is his price, and he will supply a quart at almost any time. Within four months he has allowed his blood to be transfused to the veins of sufferers five times, each time giving a quart of the life-saving fluid, and in one case he was compelled to yield three quarts to a patient within a period of two weeks. It's easy money, he says. Who's the next sufferer?

Hail the Era of Good Health.

"We are approaching an era of health, the like of which the world has never seen since the loss of Paradise," is the way Dr. Martin Friedrich, medical expert of Cleveland's city division of health, closed his annual report. Pestilential diseases are brought about by artificial life, he says, and therefore advises as close a return to nature as conditions will allow. He does not believe there are any air-borne diseases but that man is the carrier of all germs, and he declares that it is the unclean hand that does the mischief, particularly in the case of typhoid fever. "Soap and water would prevent its spread. Many an epidemic in late years has been stopped by the removal of a germ carrier from a milk depot."

Salt, the Hope of the Future.

A correspondent tells of a former Philadelphia physician who retired from practice because he saw that the giving of drugs for disease killed more people than they cured. Since his retirement this physician has been investigating the value of "earth salts" and believes that in these lies the hope of the future, especially for people afflicted with tuberculosis. Once a man has had stuffed into him all the beliefs of the medical profession in the efficacy of drugs, it is hard for him to turn away from them, as in this case.

By "earth salts" we presume that the chlorides, phosphates, carbonates, and sulphates are meant, of which the body contains about 6 per cent. They are necessary elements, and are found in about all the foods we eat, more in some than in others. The food stuffs needed by man fall into five classes of compounds as the substances composing the body—water, salts, proteids, carbo-hydrates and fats. The food must contain all the elements found in the various organs and tissues of the body, else it will not be sufficient to repair the waste going on in the body.

With the exception of meat man can obtain all the elements from plants and grains, and without any doubt a proper selection of food will restore the wasting tissues without the special addition of any earth salts, none of which can be absorbed into the system except in combinations that destroy their metallic or mineral being. The theory that earth salts are the hope of the future is like that one, recently referred to on this page, where the world was advised to eat chalk and live forever.

The Alum-Baking Powder Bugaboo.

The long-standing controversy between the baking powder manufacturers over the use of alum has been settled by government tests. Three sets of experiments were instituted, one by the Sheffield Scientific School of New Haven, one by the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania, and the third by the Northwestern University Medical School of Chicago. The experiments were conducted on healthy young men and in neither case was any deleterious effect observed.

The reports submitted to the Secretary of Agriculture declared that alum, as such, is not present in the food when eaten. In the process of baking, the alum and soda in baking powder break up and recombine into several compounds. One product is the carbonic acid gas which does the work of leavening. This gas passes off, leaving in the bread an aluminum compound and a compound called sodium sulphate. As the aluminum compounds are comparatively inert, it was decided that when mixed with foods in the small quantities actually considered necessary, they do not add a poisonous or deleterious substance, or injuriously affect the quality of the food with which they are used.

This baking-powder controversy has been on for years. Each manufacturer has endeavored to either discredit all other kinds than what he himself produces, and the public has naturally been confused as to the healthiness of either kind. As it stands now, one is as good as another, so far as the question of alum or of cream of tartar is involved.

Replacing the Alienist.

The alienist, the medical expert who testifies in court as to the sanity of individuals according to the side that employs him, may lose a portion of his occupation when the Chicago psychopathic laboratory is established in the cities of the country. At this institution the man of doubtful mental ability, lack of will, or insane tendencies, will be put through an examination that it is claimed will reveal his judgment, will power, intelligence, and the finer emotions as easily as one can measure a yard of calico or timber. Hence it is proposed that a plea of insanity or mental deficiency shall be put through the laboratory before it is admitted as evidence.

The test outside of discovering the mental alertness of the person will rest upon the revelation that may be obtained by the use of delicate instruments that will indicate changes in the nervousness of the person—his pulse rate, his sense of pain, and his muscle and nerve reactions.

It is certainly basing a good deal on the usual concealed conditions of a person, and while the results obtained will be claimed to be absolutely correct and unassailable, from the standpoint of the psychopaths, the average hard-headed jury will entertain a large suspicion as to how much reliance can be placed upon such evidence. Such examinations, taken in the absolute quiet of the examiner's office, when the person knows what he is being examined for, will show up a good deal different than they would if the "delicate instruments were attached to him and the records made while he was being subjected to the grilling cross-examination of a boisterous attorney. A jury would have more faith in the results obtained in open court than it will in the manner proposed by the psychopaths. This is an age of science, however, and the world is expected to mark time whenever the baton of the scientist is waved. Meanwhile, insanity is rapidly on the increase, not only in this country but also in Europe.

Keep the Finger Nails Clean.

The religious ascent is described in the sayings of Phineas-ben-Jair in the Talmud as follows: "The doctrines of religion are resolved into carefulness, carefulness into vigorousness, vigorousness into guiltlessness, guiltlessness into abstemiousness, abstemiousness into cleanliness, cleanliness into godliness." Hence cleanliness is next to godliness.

There is no place where uncleanliness is more apparent than in the long finger nails that are affected by some people. The nails are a refuge for bacteria of all kinds, and a scratch will sometimes cause a sore which rapidly develops into a case of virulent poisoning. Tests of the bacteria concealed by the finger nails have revealed the germs of tonsilitis, carbuncles, itches, eczemas, erysipelas and worse.

Hygienically the finger nails should not abut on the flesh, but the margins, or advancing edges of the nails, should not project beyond the end of the fingers. Indeed there should be one-eighth of an inch of finger flesh visible beyond the nail, so that when you tap upon the table or the door the skin and pulp of the finger only touch the wood. The skin is always more free of germs than the pocket of the finger nails. If you wish to be godly begin with cleanliness of the finger nails; otherwise you fly the black flag of ungodliness. There can be no better evidence of personal cleanliness than well-kept hands and nails, as they are about the first thing in evidence when in the performance of any duty.

Don't Breed Germ-Dispensing Mosquitoes.

The visit to the United States of Sir William Willcocks, the builder of the Assuan dam, on the Nile, one of the engineering marvels of the world, calls attention anew to the ease with which the pestilential mosquito can be eliminated. Good drainage is all that is necessary. It was the mosquito that made Havana a yellow fever city, and which made the Roman Campagna one of the most malarial sections of Italy. Good drainage has changed these localities to as healthy places as anywhere in the world. Khartum, on the Nile, was another favorite resort of the mosquitoes and consequently a deadly city, but, according to Sir William Willcocks, good drainage has rid the city of the pest to such an extent that if one is now found on a man's premises a fine of twelve shillings ($2.88) is imposed upon him. All the mosqnitoes in Khartum, consequently, come from up the Nile on the boats that ply back and forth on the river.

The mosquito breeds in stagnant water, and if no water is allowed to stand there will be none of these insects. The only reason why the bite of every mosquito does not produce disease, instead of a mere pimple, is that the insect has had no previous opportunity to acquire disease germs which, so far as it goes, speak well for the general condition of the community. Allow any festering, putrefying bodies to where the mosquito can reach them first and he will carry the germs to every individual he may subsequently bite. The insect loves filth the same as the fly, in fact more so. Hence not only swat the mosquito but eliminate its breeding places. If these cannot be drained an application of distillate will stop its breeding. Drainage and distillate are cheaper than disease.

Accurate Information for Children.

The importance of giving children accurate information was indicated recently by Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton of Hull House, Chicago, who told the legislative committee investigating the work of charitable organizations of a case of a child mentally defec-

Truly Immense Industries.

THERE are in the State of California seventy-five breweries, representing an investment of $50,000,000. They employ 4000 workmen, receiving salaries which amount annually to over $6,000,000. They use up in a year raw material amounting to $3,500,000, and pay to the government in excise tax more than $1,350,000, and in the State taxes amounting to $1,000,000. In the viticultural industry there is invested as much as $150,000,000, and the grapes are worked up in 700 wineries, giving employment to more than 15,000 persons. Licenses paid in California a year by saloons amount to something like $4,000,000. There are about 5000 restaurants that serve alcoholic beverages, and 5000 saloons, representing an investment of $10,000,000. They pay to the government of the State, counties and municipalities more than $3,000,000, and employ more than 22,000 persons. It is said that as many as 112,000 persons earn their living constantly in these establishments. The vineyards cover an extent of 200,000 acres.

Hurrah for Torrance!

THREE years ago crops of barley and hay were harvested where the city of Torrance now stands. The promoters of this wonderful city have now adopted the slogan, "Torrance—10,000 in 1916." It is one of the most admirably planned and admirably managed industrial cities in the world. The Llewellyn Iron Works will have there seven buildings that cost $750,000. When in operation it will add 1000 workmen to the population of the city. There will follow the Acme Brass Foundry, and then the largest enterprise will be the Pacific Electric car-building shops to employ perhaps 2000 workmen. There are four enterprises which are expected to give the town its 10,000 population, and all by the end of five years after the last barley crops were harvested.

Municipal Dock Nearly Ready.

THE last reinforced concrete piles for the big municipal dock No. 1 in the outer Los Angeles Harbor are in place, and the dock will be ready by the end of the month. It will be 2525 feet long, and will cost $450,000. There are more than 1200 great concrete piles in place to support the wharf, and 1100 sheet piles to hold the filled land back of the wharf. The dock is all to be covered with asphalt surface, and it is looked upon by shippers as the most substantial and expensive wharf in the world.

Will Pay Its Own Way.

THE great aqueduct running from the Sierras nearly 250 miles over hill and dale, through desert and valley, to Los Angeles, is practically an accomplished fact. The first sale of water to outside communities has been made, being purchased by the residents of the San Fernando Valley, and the chief engineer, William Mulholland, has assured the City Council that it will not cost the municipality a cent but will pay its own way. The city's part in the construction of this outside system is estimated at $1,500,000, of which the reservoir at Chatsworth costs about $600,000. The San Fernando people have agreed to pay $214,000, the valley's proportion of the cost of the Los Angeles trunk line. This has been built, and the water revenue is estimated to pay the rest of the expense.

Anaheim in Vanguard.

IT IS, speaking in round numbers, more than half a century since a colony of Germans settled at Anaheim and began to convert the sage-covered plain into one of the most fertile spots in the world. Between twenty-five and thirty years ago, when the first great real estate boom, a premature movement, was in full swing, the people of Anaheim resisted in every way the booming of their property. They said that their homes were there, that they had nothing to sell, and an increase in value would only result in an increase of taxes, doing harm instead of good. But the Anaheim people were always in every forward movement for the permanent benefit of their own town and California in general. It is an agricultural community for the most part, and the soil is exceedingly productive. In view of these facts it is entirely natural and in the line of what might be expected that the High School of that place is to have an elaborate agricultural course put into the studies of the senior year. The pupils are to be taught to analyze soils, the budding and culture of citrus and other fruit trees, and the extermination of insects injurious to the trees.

Good for Orange County

THE Board of Supervisors of Orange county are much gratified at the receipt of a letter from the State Board of Charities and Corrections commending the county and its Supervisors for the new cottage system at the County Farm for which $55,000 has been expended. This is a new departure in handling the indigent of a community, and a good one. The herding of the poor in barracks is a difficult operation without involving the spread of disease, and is also accompanied by other inconveniences and discomforts to the inmates. The cottage system should give the indigent of that county a more homelike life, and in the end not cost the taxpayers any more, if as much.

A Good Programme.

A NOTABLE gathering took place at Covina the other day, where at a banquet 250 orange growers from near by and far assembled to hear addresses from experts. The principal speaker was G. Harold Powell, manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, who told them that the next ten years should be devoted to working out a programme for more efficiency. The orange industry of the State is pretty well developed, and its permanence assured. Now will come the work of evolving better qualities and better graded fruit. With the tariff off, the competition with European orchards for the markets of the Eastern States of America will be sharp. This can be overcome possibly by the intelligence and energy of the American growers, vastly superior to those of the growers on the Mediterranean. Yet those Mediterranean orange and lemon growers have had long experience in the work and are exceedingly skillful in nearly every way. They had an expert American over there three years ago teaching them how to combat insect pests injurious to the citrus fruit trees. The groves are nearly all small, and most of the work is done by hand. The orange growers of Valencia, Spain, are particularly industrious and skillful, not letting a weed put its head above the ground anywhere in their orchards. The lemon growers of Sicily are less careful and more slovenly in their management of their groves. But there is no waste in the European groves of either lemons or oranges, the culls being all carefully worked up into by-products. Mr. Powell pointed out to his audience another field in this for the future development of the citrus fruit industry which it will be necessary to cultivate carefully to compete with the foreign growers.

Next Highway Work.

IN THE last three years the State of California has accomplished a marvelous work in the construction of good roads. The State never appropriated money to better purpose than the $18,000,000 secured through the instrumentality of Gov. Gillett during his incumbency of the executive office, and the county of Los Angeles never devoted money to a better purpose than the $3,000,000 put into the county good roads. By a year from now, when the great exposition is in full swing at San Francisco, visitors to the State from all over the world will find unspeakable enjoyment in bowling along the smooth highways in automobiles. It is going to be a drawing card when these tourists return home and relate their experiences. But even when the good roads are all constructed and measures taken for their permanent upkeep the work will not be done. Already down in Orange county, at Santa Ana, the County Board of Forestry is actively engaged planning the aligning of the roads with ornamental trees. In the mountainous districts the trees along the roads are to be the beautiful California live oak. It might be a good idea to plant several kinds of trees along the roads, some rapid-growing like the eucalyptus and the pepper, to be thinned out later when the slower growth develops so as to crowd. Which of us who came from the East cannot remember country lanes in villages and city streets where the magnificent trees, elms, sycamores and maples, interlaced over the highway like a cathedral roof, the branches and leaves being so thick as to defy the sun's rays to penetrate? It will add marvelously to the beauty of our roads to have the highways aligned with ornamental trees.

Between City and Sea.

IN A QUARTER of a century the developments along the western section of Los Angeles city and between there and the seaside resorts has been wonderful, marvelous, magical. Thirty years ago there was scarcely a house of any note west of Figueroa street anywhere from north of Temple street to the seaside at Santa Monica, and the houses of all classes and sizes were exceedingly few. It was but about twenty years ago that the Wilshire tract was laid out, and it was then far afield indeed. Excepting Santa Monica the seacoast was almost desolation until San Pedro was reached. The region between the Wilshire tract and the ocean front, all along the seacoast, now presents a scene of development marvelous in the growth of population and the beauty of the homes. A Los Angeles person might proudly challenge the world for a residence district more charmingly developed than that lying along Sixth street all the way from Alvarado at Westlake Park beyond Sunset Park and on out to Western avenue. Along Wilshire boulevard at many streets, notably the crossing of Vermont avenue, and charming in their surroundings. The old stage line to San Francisco forty or fifty years ago used to dive down in a hole where Westlake Park is now, and then go out to Cahuenga Pass. It was a dreary region at best. Now the seacoasts are reached by a network of interurban railroads, the finest in the world in the writer's opinion. And there are soon to be four magnificent boulevards connecting the center of Los Angeles city with the seacoast towns, being Wilshire boulevard, Pico street, Washington street and Adams street. What has been done in developing this region in the last twenty years will be more than duplicated in the next ten, and fully duplicated before the next census is taken.

Marvelous Development Indeed.

IMPERIAL county was less than ten years ago cut out of Riverside and San Diego counties. About seven years ago the county seat, El Centro, was founded, and today numbers a population of 6000, and is now growing more rapidly than ever before. During five months of the current year more than $1,000,000 has been expended on new buildings. The city boasts a fine public library, a magnificent High School, a Masonic Temple, and several churches. The assessment of the county this year runs to $17,000,000. This marvelous city lies on the Southern Pacific Railroad 218 miles southeasterly from Los Angeles. The Imperial irrigation district is to be bonded for $3,500,000, and of this amount $3,000,000 will go for purchasing the California Development Company's interest, the remaining half million to be used for an emergency fund. In the seven years of its existence El Centro has developed a metropolitan life surpassing that of many cities a century old. It has gas works, electric works, a sewer system, fine paved streets, and a number of well-developed industrial enterprises, among them a soap factory, organized at $100,000, and a bakery at $12,000. The city has an assessed valuation of $3,000,000. This development is founded upon substantial industries that promise permanence. It is a cotton-growing region, and the alfalfa fields around it furnish fat cattle and hogs in endless numbers for the Los Angeles and San Francisco markets. With many dairies in the country the skimmed milk with the alfalfa goes to produce the finest pigs, poultry and turkeys in the world, and there is no bacon or ham cured from corn-fed pigs in the West of the sweetness and hardness of the California product brought up on alfalfa and milk and finished on rolled barley with or without an admixture of corn.

"Column Forward!"

FRESH REPORTS OF PROGRESS IN THE ADVANCING SOUTHWEST.

The only really slow movement in the industrial situation all throughout the Great Southwest and all along by the Western Sea is in the building trades, and that is confined almost entirely to Los Angeles. Meantime the country is being developed rapidly. For example, down in the Imperial Valley, Niland, a town born the other day, reports that the California Land and Water Company has spent $100,000 and has received back $57,000 in sales. And the Calipatria people, almost a twin with Niland, have sold $136,000 worth in tracts of ten acres, and a total in the vicinity of $274,000. The Los Angeles Investment Company has got steam in the boiler for a big campaign founded on a loan of $800,000 on its building, corner of Eighth and Broadway.

At Santa Ana the First Baptist Church has undertaken the construction of a new house of worship which with the lot will cost $62,500.

The Maple Leaf Ranch near San Jacinto, consisting of 160 acres, has been sold at $32,000.

Around Whittier, orange and lemon groves are selling actively, one five-acre tract being sold at $1320 per acre for 3-year-old trees, while a twenty-five-acre walnut grove has been sold at $20,000.

Ramona Acres is to have a new business center at Garvey avenue and Del Mar boulevard, one big shop to be built there at a cost of $50,000.

The Middle Counties Public Service Corporation has asked the State Railroad Commission for authority to sell stock to the amount of $1,550,000.

Near Lindsay in the San Joaquin Valley new links in the highway system of a total of forty miles are planned.

The corner-stone of the Polytechnic High School at Venice was laid with elaborate ceremonies a few days since.

Around Carpinteria, between eight and ten carloads of little lemon trees were planted during the month of May.

A special election is called at Santa Monica to vote bonds to the amount of $150,000 for an auditorium.

The trustees of South Pasadena have called for bids for the construction of the second half of the sewer system, the first half having been let at $51,476.08.

The California oil companies, by the end of June, will have distributed this year in dividends more than $5,000,000.

The Tucson (Ariz.) Star finds work under way in that city which when completed will have cost $813,500.

From Porterville, a trainload of fat cattle was shipped recently to San Francisco, consisting of 300 head averaging 1450 pounds each, and bringing the owners $30,000.

With the beginning of June the Valencia orange crop in California is moving rapidly, and is estimated to run to 10,000 cars and to be worth in eastern markets $12,000,000, netting the California growers $8,000,000.

The Los Angeles County Assessor has about completed his work for the new assessment year, and reports that while no effort has been made to boom valuations but on the contrary to keep them moderate, the total valuation of the county will run over $800,000,000.

The trustees of the Whittier Union High School call for an election to vote bonds to the amount of $15,000 to purchase a tract of five acres for an athletic field for the pupils.

tive which had destroyed the minds of thirty other children. The child, she said, actually inoculated the other children with a mental poison that will probably influence them for the remainder of their lives. The child's twisted ideas, misinformation and wrong aspect of life thus created a condition that will have a permanent effect upon the community in which each of the thirty children will hereafter live. How much heredity had to do with the child's condition we do not know, but the facts of the case emphasize the importance of dealing honestly with children. When they ask information give it to them as carefully as possible, that whatever effect it may have may be for good. If the child does not obtain this at home, he will obtain it somewhere else, and it may be misinformation, so that he gets a wrong start along that line. Remember that if one's premises are wrong, the conclusion will be wrong. A child has no analysis and cannot reason out the truth or untruth of information given him. He accepts it as told him. Therefore tell him the truth, and enough of it in reply to his question so that he may understand fully what he asked about. In that way it cannot be dislodged by any subsequent statement by whoever may undertake to lead him astray.

Guarding the Sick-room Door.

[New York Press:] Every medical school in Pennsylvania is preparing for a one-third cut in its freshman class next September. The year's crop of young physicians, so far as the public is concerned, has been nipped in the bud. Not a doctor getting his degree this June will hang out his shingle.

The medical fraternity of Pennsylvania, aided by the Legislature, is nailing up the door of the sick-room against the half-baked, ill-educated, inexperienced fledgling physician. Several laws have been passed and regulations made to bring about this end. One of the most important makes a year's experience in a hospital, under competent direction, obligatory upon every graduate of a medical college. Another raises the standard in the colleges themselves. Heretofore a young man who had gone through high school could enter the freshman class in a Pennsylvania medical school without difficulty. Beginning next September he will be barred unless he has done a year's college work in natural science and biology. He can carry no conditions.

Why Butter Spoils.

The Bureau of Animal Industry in Washington has just concluded some interesting experiments showing the susceptibility of milk and its products to deterioration in quality, taste and smell by reason of the slightest contact with some ordinary metals.

Butter was made from cream to which iron had been added in the proportion of one part of iron to a million parts of the cream. It was then held at a temperature of eight degrees Fahrenheit and its qualities ascertained at regular intervals over a period of six months.

The process of churning had doubtless eliminated much of the iron and yet the butter fell off very rapidly both in quality and taste because of the infinitesimal quantity of the metal that remained in it. This, in the view of the experts, suggests an explanation of the fishy, or oily, or metallic tastes so often observed in milk or butter.

Simple contact with iron or copper is quite sufficient to impregnate milk with these metals to a degree which, even if minute, nevertheless affects the taste of its products as well as of itself. And investigators assure us that such contact is very frequent in the average dairy, where milk is often handled in vessels in which these metals are exposed by means of rust, hard usage or continuous wear.

Preserving Beauty and Symmetry.

[Philadelphia Telegraph:] "Speaking of woman's figure," said a sculptor recently, "the most wonderful woman I know is a model who has been posing continuously for the past twenty years, and her measurements are exactly the same today as they were when she posed for her first statue. Her lines are just as fine. Her flesh is just as firm. Apparently she has bid time stand still, and the old chap has obeyed.

"The secret? I only know two rules. She told me quite sincerely they were the only means she used. First, she has never neglected her regular exercise one day of those twenty years. She bends and touches the floor to keep herself supple, and she does enough stretching to keep her figure from having a chance to slump, which is the first sign of age.

"But of all the exercises, she says, rolling is the most valuable. She told me if she had only one chance she would choose rolling. Back and forth, over and over, she rolls every morning and every night on a hard floor for at least twenty minutes, and sometimes longer.

"As for her diet, she has only the rule of eating regularly, and the food that does the most good. I was particularly interested in what she told me about food, for it seems simple and practical for men and women alike."

High Heels Condemned.

[Washington Post:] That the wearing of high heels and bad habits of carriage, such as the "debutante slouch," are two factors against the attainment of perfect physical, mental, and moral poise, was the contention of Mrs. Roger Watts of England, an exponent of Greek culture, in a lecture on "The Importance of Poise in the Development of the Mind," at the Home Club of the Interior Department.

"High heels make perfect motion impossible," said Mrs. Watts, "and create a condition of almost artificial paralysis. The various poses, which are assumed variously at the dictates of style, cripple the muscles of the diaphragm, which are the center of the nerve power of the body."

Mrs. Watts also denied the power claimed by several cults, religious and lay, that the mental condition has much influence on the physical, and stated her belief that the mental condition was dependent wholly on the physical.

Barbers of the World.

[New York Sun:] The barber shops of the United States and Canada are the finest in the world and charge the highest prices. Comparatively few cities of Europe use American chairs and many of these run their barber shops in connection with men's furnishing stores.

In most European cities a haircut and a shampoo costs 6 cents, and in parts of London a shave costs four cents. In some Italian cities 1 cent is charged for a shave and 2 cents for a haircut, and in Turkey barbers take their entire pay in tips.

Many German barbers make wigs and switches while waiting for customers, and many French barbers do ladies' hair dressing. Austrian barbers are compelled to serve apprenticeships of four years, on pay beginning at 41 cents a week and ending at $1.02 a week, before they can own their shops.

Syrian barbers seat their customers in straight-backed chairs before tiny wall mirrors, and fix queer-shaped pans about their throats. Then they rub on with their fingers lather made from cheap soap.

In India your barber calls at your house and shaves you every morning for $2 a month.

In China the barbers carry stools, small tubs, razors and scissors about the streets, stopping on the sidewalks to perform their work, just as scissors grinders do in America.

Miscellaneous Suggestions.

[Baltimore American:] To clean enameled ware or granite utensils, whose contents have burned, fill with cold water, add a piece of washing soda size of an egg and heat the water to a boiling point. Then wash at once and burned parts can be easily cleaned.

Rusted ironware or sinks may be cleaned by smearing with fat or grease, then covered with quicklime and left for a few hours. Wash off with hot water, to which a large amount of common soda has been added, and use a cloth tied to the sink broom so as to avoid touching with the hands. This is a great help to persons moving into a house which has been vacant a long while and where the sink is all rusted.

A small piece of charcoal placed in your meat larder will keep the meat sweet and wholesome. Charcoal is a great disinfectant.

To clean fine laces (either black or white,) soak them for half an hour, covering so as to prevent evaporation in alcohol. Then rub in the alcohol till the lace is all clean, squeeze dry and pull out the edges very carefully. Press until dry.

For grease spots turpentine may be used, but naphtha is best for delicate fabrics, as it leaves no mark, as turpentine is liable to do.

Auto Suggestion.

HOW TO MAKE IT AND MAKE IT EFFECTIVE.

By Edward B. Warman.

WHILE the unexpressed thought may seem all-sufficient, the expressed or vocalized thought will prove much more efficient. For the same reason praying aloud is much more effective than silent prayer—more effective as far as the petitioner is concerned. We all know that a prayer may be and frequently is the unuttered desire of the heart and need not be voiced in order to be known to the Giver of all good gifts; but when one gets in a tight place he "cries aloud." There is not only a relief, but a reflex strengthening in the voiced petition or even in the prayer of thankfulness.

Ingersoll said: "One does not think of giving thanks at a banquet, but when he sits down to a crust of bread and a glass of water, he gives thanks for the bread."

The reason that oral suggestion is much more effective than silent suggestion is that by the former method you reach the objective as well as the subjective mind and you reach it more directly. It is in the objective mind that the greatest trouble lies—the holding of doubts, fears, wrong conclusions, etc.; the subjective mind is the power behind the throne. The dynamic thought-force—the energizing principle of the soul—with all its wonderful power has, nevertheless, certain limitations. This may be considered an admission of weakness, but it is, instead, an admission of facts after about thirty years of observation and experience in the field of suggestion. It is true all things—all things reasonable—are possible with God, but when He reckons with man, a free moral agent, "ay, there's the rub"—and "the rub" in this case, is that objective mind.

Another point which I wish to impress: In order to change an undesirable condition it should not be fought, but, instead, forgotten, and a different and superior condition substituted in the mind and impressed upon the subjective mind. Why? Because we give effectiveness to that which we consciously resist and oppose. While all suggestions may be objectively (consciously) considered, only those of positive value should be subjectively (subconsciously) impressed and held. The probable tendency and final effect of all suggestions and auto-suggestions should be carefully considered from all conceivable points of view before permitting them to be impressed upon the subjective mind.

The creative energies of thought act in both mind and cell structure, and create after the subjective pattern. The mind unconsciously acts in the direction of a tendency, but tendencies may be controlled by controlling desires. Desires can be created or eliminated. Controlled tendencies determine action. Ideas held in the objective mind become predominating and are the ideas most used by the creative energies.

Let us practically apply this. You desire health and strength. There must be cooperation or an agreement resulting in harmony between the objective and subjective mind; therefore, I would voice the desire, saying—HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO MY ENTIRE BODY. Say it until you believe it will be so. Mere telling the subjective mind is not sufficient. An impression must be made through feeling it must be so. Mere words are often caught in the mental machinery and never get any further. If you find yourself wavering in your faith, say: "I believe: help thou my unbelief."

When you recall the fact that thought takes form in action—especially vocalized thought—you will begin to realize what it means to say: "Health and strength to my entire body." You can stir to life and healthful action every organ of your body as you repeat those words in faith-believing.

Let me give an affirmation to use as an auto-suggestion when retiring—in addition to the foregoing one during the day. You cannot truthfully say it unless you first follow the well-known scriptural injunction: "Let not the sun go down on thy wrath."

Affirmation: I am at peace with all mankind. I shall relax and let go, knowing that power flows into relaxed nerves and muscles. Every cell in my body is being renewed and rebuilt. Every organ of my body is functioning properly and all waste is being duly eliminated.

Say it, think it, believe it, EXPECT it, but the greatest of these is—expect it.

The Ghost Laid Low.

It was an obstreperous ghost. For more than thirty years he, she or it had annoyed the residents of an English village, appearing frequently in the rectory—an old-fashioned rambling building which had been the home of many of the "quality" and the scene of many tragic deeds.

The vicar of Whetstone, a neighboring Leicestershire parish, was desirous of satisfying himself as to the presence of a ghost. He was satisfied, in fact, he was more than satisfied. On the very first occasion (so the story goes) he was awakened in the small hours of the morning by a violent tugging at the bed clothes. He held on tightly (so the story goes,) but the ghost won in the tug-o'-war. He, the vicar, lighted a candle to ascertain what manner of man—or woman—or thing dared to thus presume on his rest; but the ghost had vanished in thin air and the door was still locked (so the story goes.) The ghost was no respecter of persons; for the sister-in-law of the rector passed through a similar exciting experience.

But the ghost was finally vanquished (so the story goes.) The resident rector of the parish, in accordance with the ancient tradition, went into the haunted rooms and commanded the specter "in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost" to depart. He forthwith vamoosed (so the story goes.) He had his exercise with the one rector, but was exorcised by the other—a distinction with a decided difference.

Hands Soft and White.

[Washington Post:] Use a soap rich in oil and containing no alkali to crack and harden the skin. Castile soap is good, but there are other good soaps that are just as suitable. After the hands have been cleansed and thoroughly rinsed, a lather made from the soap should be rubbed into the hands and wrists. Continue the rubbing until all the lather has been absorbed or there is very little to wipe away. The oil feeds the skin, keeps it soft, and prevents the shriveled appearance and feeling which comes, especially to hands that are kept for long periods in hot water. Hands thus treated are soft and white. It is important to remember that the lather which is rubbed in is not the lather with which the hands are cleansed, but a fresh lather, made after the cleansing has been completed.

To Clean White Silk.

An easy way to clean white silk without using gasoline is to lay it on a sheet of soft, white tissue paper, cover it thickly with flour, lay another sheet of tissue paper on top and roll it up as tight as possible. Leave it for a few days, and then take it out and shake it well. Be sure to use white tissue paper and not colored for wrapping the silk.

Primrose Poisoning.

Devotees to this charming flower, who are sometimes bothered by an unaccountable rash, may stop to consider whether they are susceptible to this form of plant poisoning, instead of blaming the much-abused liver. It is like the strawberry, and sea-food poisons that, fortunately, affect few persons, but some of these cases are as severe as bad cases of ivy poisoning, which go through the entire system and affect every organ of secretion before they are finally eliminated.

Tobacco Habit Easily Conquered

A New Yorker of wide experience, has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily and completely banished in three days with delightful benefit. The author, Edward J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., 160 E, New York City, will mail his book free on request.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eye, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. Get rid of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette, snuff or chewing tobacco to pacify morbid desire.

This is Confiscation.

The Legislature of California in 1911 enacted a law by which the principle of eminent domain may be put into practice by communities desiring to acquire plants of quasi-public utilities. In Marin county this law is about to be enforced against a water company.

Let us see how this works. California is a place where a new town is born almost as often as Barnum chronicled the genesis of fools. In the beginning, of course, new towns are small and weak, and the people poor. Roseate promises are held out before the eyes of capitalists to induce them to come in and establish plants to supply the fledgling community with water, gas, electricity, street-car system or what you please.

These new-born California towns grow about as fast as weeds, and when, in biblical phrase, they have "waxed fat" they "kick." The kick consists in appealing to a commission composed entirely of politicians to put a value upon the plant of whatever nature it may be, and the owners are compelled to sell out at the given estimate of value.

This policy will intrench very far upon practical confiscation, and be the entering wedge of state Socialism which will split our modern system of business wide open. In practical working it is very likely to deter men with capital from listening to any "Macedonian cry" to "come over and help" any new-born community. Then public ownership will be an enforced practice upon all new communities struggling for existence, and in the end the people will suffer a good deal more than the capitalists.

O Slow of Heart!

When an army of unintelligent but loud blatant talkers went around the country two years ago clamoring about the high cost of living and laying it to the influence of the protective tariff, the story was believed by a great many American citizens who ought to have known better and didn't. We warned them of the mistake they were making, but like the sinners in the scriptures it might have been said of them: "O ye fools, when will ye understand?" Fools they were, and "slow of heart to believe."

The revised tariff has been in force for a year, or nearly so, and no American table at breakfast, lunch, dinner or supper has seen an egg, a beefsteak, a chop, a slice of bread, a bit of butter, or any other edible or potable thing sold at a fraction of a cent cheaper than under the high tariff.

The putting of raw material on the free list came with promise to stimulate American industries by importing this from abroad, and this other false prophecy has not been fulfilled in a single instance. American business has been stagnant all over the country in spite of plenty of money, good crops, and every other stimulus that might be given to business. Imports and exports are both smaller and dwindling lower and lower.

And this has always been so. Whenever American industries have been protected they have prospered. Whenever the American people have been generally employed at good wages they have bought domestic and foreign goods and kept the wheels turning at home and abroad. America is one of the most populous countries in the world, its people spend more than any other people in the world, and when they prosper all the world prospers with them, and when depression hits our shores it spreads like the plague in ever-widening circles until it embraces the world.

A Great Kentuckian.

When William O. Bradley passed out of life the other day a great son of Kentucky and a great American statesman ceased to give his services to his State and his country.

Bradley was a man of conspicuous courage and of just as conspicuous good sense. Soon after the war there was an election going on in Louisville to choose State officers for Kentucky. Feeling was running very high between the two factions, and bitter hatred separated Kentuckian from Kentuckian, involving family feuds as well as neighborhood fights. As the election proceeded a lot of unreconstructed sympathizers with the "lost cause" stood on the corner of a street opposite a polling place and cursed their brothers, fathers, neighbors and friends who voted the Republican ticket. These young hotheaded Southerners were applying unprintable epithets to those who differed from them, and a street fight was just about to break out, for there are names that no Southern man will permit to be applied to him, as they involve not only his own status, but the honor of his mother.

Bradley saw what was coming, and, unafraid, crossed the street to where the young men were standing, and without whispering rebuked them for their improper conduct. He said in substance: "You know those men are not what you call them. You know that if they are, the same epithet applies to you, for they are your brothers, neighbors and friends of just as good blood as there is in the State of Kentucky, and you know it. You are dishonoring your own families in applying such names to your cousins and other relatives, and the disgrace will fall upon yourselves, not upon those you malign unjustly. Boys, for your own honor, for the peace of this community and the good name of Kentucky, stop it and go home." It was an act of supreme courage, and was recognized as such and had its full effect.

Give Them a Kindergarten.

When our most excellent high-browed President, taking advice with his 50-cent silver Secretary of State, determined to administer the affairs of the Mexican republic as well as those of his own country, he put his head into a snare from which he has been vainly attempting during the past year to extricate himself.

Because the de facto President of Mexico would not abdicate at the command of Mr. Wilson the whole American navy was rushed to the Mexican coast at the cost of millions of dollars and followed by an army corps at the cost of more millions of dollars, and this military equipment is retained there at a large daily expense to the United States.

Vera Cruz was seized to prevent the landing of arms and munitions of war by a German ship, and then the Washington administration permitted the landing of these arms and munitions of war at another Mexican port as convenient to Huerta's headquarters as Vera Cruz.

And what a fuss this has created at Washington! The antics of the administration would disgrace a half-dozen young women trying to run a kindergarten of a few babies. First Germany was jumped on, and the German government replied that it had nothing to do with the affair, and that declaration stuck. Then a kick was directed at the company owning this German ship, and they pointed to Mr. Bryan's declaration that the ports of Mexico were wide open, and that kick only hurt the toes of the kickers. Then the clamor was raised against the German manufacturers charged with making and selling these arms and ammunition, and these people pointed out the fact that they were not "made in Germany," but in the United States, and shipped to Hamburg, where they were reshipped to Mexico. Is there any wonder that all Europe, with all civilized parts of the rest of the world, are laughing at the blundering policy pursued by the administration at Washington?

How Many Years Do You Belong in Jail?

Defection and detection are two separate propositions.

If we get down to cases and try to define the criminal we must acknowledge that he is the man who is KNOWN to be wrong.

But you realize that the jail wall does not divide the right from the wrong.

If crime were a self-manifesting disease, like the measles or smallpox, how many years would you have served in prison?

Review your life and carefully tally your violations of the law.

There is at least a glass window in every man's house; so don't be so ready to throw a stone at the luckless wight who was caught.

He may be occupying the cell to which you might have been assigned.

We are changing our minds about a great many things, including jailbirds.

Recent experiments have demonstrated that in most cases he is a different sort of bird altogether: usually a reckless, impulsive individual who did not at all mean to be bad, and who, given a chance to fulfill his duty to himself and society, would turn out as competent and reliable as yourself.

And it's by no means ridiculous to assume that he might serve us a bit more zealously because he knows the cost of error; whereas you, relying upon your past luck, are likely at any moment to overstep the bounds and trade places with him.

Give him a chance. He'd rather take it than take something that's not worth as much and which the cold shoulder of friends and the refusal of employment may lead him to appropriate in resentment against his ostracism and through lack of confidence in his ability to regain his footing.

It's cheaper to let him support himself than to pay taxes for penitentiaries and a bigger police force.

Put it on that basis if there's no charity in you. Figure it out in dollars and cents and commonsense.

Predestination to crime is an exploded theory. Of course, the offspring of diseased, weak-brained men and women are more susceptible to temptation and less likely to reason clearly than the children of educated, sound, and intelligent parents. But, if there is a natural class of criminals, all the more reason why allowance should be made for their congenital defects. Treat them for their illnesses, and, if they are misfits, consider them as irresponsible patients.

As for the others, isn't it a finer thing, and won't it average better for the good of us all, if we can by restoration to opportunity utilize thousands of competent men who generally average as high in morality as the rest of their fellows, and render them thereafter self-sufficient and decent members of the community?

When the law has stripped the striped coat from a man's back he has paid the price in full. It is not fair for YOU to put it on him again until he has legally earned it.

Besides, there is a sentence of your own which Judge Conscience inflicted, and which has not been served.

The Revenge.

CLOUDED HONEYMOON OF EUGENIO AND TERESA.

By Verne Gregory.

There was an early-morning wedding in the cathedral at Santa Fe; in fact, it was only 6 o'clock when the ceremony began, yet the building was already comfortably filled. For the past half-hour Mexican maids and matrons in gala attire, accompanied by husbands or sweethearts, had been hastening down the narrow streets in the direction of the cathedral. When the bridal party arrived in carriages and proceeded slowly up the aisle, there was a murmur of admiration from the few Americans who, inspired by curiosity, had gathered in the rear of the church. The bride, Teresa Carrillo, was evidently a descendant of patrician Spanish, slender and graceful of figure, clear of skin, and she bore herself with becoming dignity. The groom, Eugenio Leon, was shorter, darker, and less composed than his wife-to-be. At the altar he displayed considerable nervousness, and his responses were almost inaudible, while Teresa's sounded clear and distinct.

The ceremony was lengthy, and it was nearly 8 o'clock when the newly-wedded pair re-entered their carriage. They drove at once to the photograph gallery, where their pictures were taken. Once more in the street, the driver of the first carriage, containing the bridesmaids and groomsmen, started by a roundabout route through the principal residence streets to the home of Teresa. In vain Eugenio, his face flushing deeply, shouted to the man:

"The other way—the other way, I tell you!"

There was so much noise and confusion among the young people that the latter did not hear, and his steeds pranced merrily on toward the Federal building. Eugenio's driver was permitted to follow, as it would have looked odd to split up the party.

A tremor passed through the frame of the bride. Well she understood the reason for her husband's command. In a certain small adobe dwelling they must pass by this route, lived a former sweetheart of Eugenio's, Maria Ramon. How many scores of times he had entered her shabby door, which he was now so anxious to avoid. But here they were close to it, and Eugenio wondered if Maria was peeping from behind the curtain at the splendor and gaiety in which she had no part. If so, she kept herself securely hidden from the gaze of passers-by.

Eugenio's father was the owner of a second-hand furniture store, in which Maria had once acted as clerk. She was a penniless girl, while Teresa possessed a neat cottage, willed her by her father. It was here that the youthful pair began housekeeping, the place having been comfortably furnished by the senior Leon.

Two months later they were seated at the supper table in their tiny kitchen, when Eugenio announced: "Father has taken Maria back into the store."

Teresa's eyes opened widely. Eugenio was clerking there, too, and she did not exactly relish the idea of his spending most of the day in company with his first love.

"You see, since her father was crippled by falling from the bridge," Eugenio continued, "they have had nothing coming in, and the neighbors reported that they were actually going hungry. Maria and father had some words before she left, but she came and begged his pardon and asked to be taken back, so he decided to give her another trial."

Teresa was moved to pity by this recital. "Poor things! Of course it wouldn't do to let them starve." Then she remembered a wonderful pudding she had that afternoon concocted, and rushed out to the lean-to, where it had been cooling, to fetch it.

Eugenio ate a big saucerful and called for more. "Not every fellow is as lucky as I am in getting a good cook for a wife."

Teresa blushed prettily and favored him with an extra allowance of whipped cream. She washed the dishes while Eugenio read items from the evening paper, and then they went out to pick sweet peas, and to tie up the vines. Every neighbor who stopped to chat with them was given a bunch of the flowers. The bride was so happy herself she wished to share her joy with others.

After attending to her marketing, Teresa generally called at the furniture store to chat with her father-in-law, with whom she was a favorite. "My first daughter," he styled her in presenting his old friends.

One of the store's attractions for Teresa was an ice-water tank of a style already common in larger cities, but something of a novelty in Santa Fe. The water in a porcelain jar with chopped ice packed around it, tasted so much better than the supply at home that she invariably took several drinks during each visit.

"It will make you fat," Mr. Leon warned her, but she laughingly disregarded his advice.

Maria's keen eyes followed the bride's every movement. Teresa greeted her pleasantly when they met, but it was soon apparent that the former avoided the girl clerk whenever possible.

"Mrs. Leon has no reason to dislike me," Maria said to her employer's son.

"Now, Maria, don't begin to imagine things," counseled Eugenio. "Just attend to business, and we'll all get along together."

On Teresa's second visit after Maria's return, she became ill at the store and was taken home in a hack. Three days afterward there was a repetition of this occurrence. Then a doctor was summoned, as the young matron was suffering horribly. To the amazement of the Leons he pronounced her ailment due to poison.

"But who could have given her poison?" queried the father.

"Do you know if she ate or drank anything while she was out this morning?" asked the physician.

"She had ice water at the store."

"Jump into my machine with me and let us examine that ice water."

The elder Leon obeyed. Maria observed them narrowly as they approached the tank. Suddenly she seized her zarape and left the building by a rear door.

The doctor could detect nothing wrong with the water in the tank, but when Mr. Leon handed him the cup which Teresa was in the habit of using, he speedily discovered traces of a virulent poison.

"Only Maria and I were in the store while Teresa was here; the girl must have committed this deviltry." And Mr. Leon hastened to notify the police.

Maria had not gone home, but a thorough search revealed her hiding-place in the shop of a friend. At first she indignantly denied the charge against her, but after an interview with the priest she broke down and confessed that between Teresa's libations she had dropped poison into the cup.

While she was in jail awaiting her trial, some relative managed to smuggle another poison into her cell, and with this the unfortunate girl ended her life.

The remedies administered in Teresa's case had proved efficacious, and she was soon completely restored to health.

The Chamois is a Wily Animal.

[F. Kuehner, in June Scribners:] In spring the hair of the chamois has the color of the deer, in autumn it turns dark brown, and in winter almost black. Then the flocks move down from their very high pasture-grounds toward the woody regions, where they find both food and shelter under the broad branches of old pines, which keep the ground underneath free from snow. But no sooner has the snow melted far enough to allow them sufficient food above the timber line than they are off to return to their favorite abode, the high, inaccessible Alpine pastures. There they live together, in flocks of five to twenty, most gaily, as appears from their playing, sham fighting, and merry jumps. Meantime, they never fail to mount a guard, mostly an elderly roe. It seems that these are fitter for this duty than the bucks, probably because of their greater carefulness owing to their motherhood. Their scent is so acute that they detect a man at a distance of miles. As soon as the sentinel perceives something suspicious she gives a sharp, hoarse whistle. Then the whole company keeps suddenly quiet, as though petrified, and after a few seconds chase away like lightning toward some safe refuge or for a distant point of observation, where they constantly and with great attention eye the disturber. No doubt this scent, too, is the reason why even a zealous tourist so rarely sees a chamois. He does not pay any attention to the wind, which reveals his presence to the chamois long before he is near enough to see it. Strange to say, as soon as the animal has got the scent it keeps on flying much farther, as though frightened by a report. On the flight all the incredible strength and swiftness of the chamois show up to their best advantage. It clears crevasses thirteen to eighteen feet wide and jumps onto rocks fourteen feet high.

It is plain that this kind of game will not be hunted successfully by the first comer. It is not enough to be a good shot when, besides the whole hunting outfit, an animal [illegible] down from a giddy height over deceptive glaciers and brittle rocky boulders; nor is it sufficient to be a good mountain tourist who, under a safe guide, shows remarkable strength and courage. No, the hunter must combine in his person the qualities of a good shot, an excellent tourist, and a guide.

Towels and Napkins.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] Many particular housekeepers with large families are often temporarily inconvenienced by finding the supply of towels and table napkins has given weighing about sixty pounds is to be carried out before the laundry comes in. They would be greatly pleased with the result, besides the wear and tear on the linen being lessened, by reinforcing the supply with the paper towel.

Rolls of paper towels placed in the bathroom for the hands of the school children, who usually make sad havoc of the white towel, are very practical helps. A roll could also be placed in the nursery to wipe smeary little hands and faces. A roll could be used in the kitchen to replace the roller towel. A paper napkin looks very well on the table tray as a substitute for the linen napkin.

Why Man of Today Is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient

By WALTER GRIFFITH

If one were to form an opinion from the number of helpful, inspiring and informing articles one sees in the public press and magazines, the purpose of which is to increase our efficiency, he must believe that the entire American nation is striving for such an end—

And this is so.

The American Man because the race is swifter every day: competition is keener and the stronger the man the greater his capacity to win. The stronger the man the stronger his will and brain, and the greater his ability to match wits and win. The greater his confidence in himself the greater the confidence of other people in him, the keener his wit and the clearer his brain.

The American Woman because she must be competent to rear and manage the family and home, and take all the thought and responsibility from the shoulders of the man whose present-day business burdens are all that he can carry.

Now, what are we doing to secure that efficiency? Much mentally, some of us much physically, but what is the trouble?

We are not really efficient more than half the time. Half the time blue and worried—all the time nervous—some of the time really incapacitated by illness.

There is a reason for this—a practical reason, one that has been known to physicians for quite a period and will be known to the entire world ere long.

That reason is that the human system does not, and will not, rid itself of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. No matter how regular we are, the food we eat and the sedentary lives we live (even though we do get some exercise) make it impossible; just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to rid itself of clinkers.

And the waste does to us exactly what the clinkers do to the stove; make the fire burn low and inefficiently until enough clinkers have accumulated, and then prevent its burning at all.

It has been our habit, after this waste has reduced our efficiency about 75 per cent., to drug ourselves; or after we have become 100 per cent., inefficient through illness, to still further attempt to rid ourselves of it in the same way—by drugging.

If a clock is not cleaned once in a while it clogs up and stops; the same way with an engine because of the residue which it, itself, accumulates. To clean the clock, you would not put acid on the parts, though you could probably find one that would do the work, nor to clean the engine would you force a cleaner through it that would injure its parts; yet that is the process you employ when you drug the system to rid it of waste.

You would clean your clock and engine with a harmless cleanser that Nature has provided and you can do exactly the same for yourself, as I will demonstrate before I conclude.

The reason that a physician's first step in illness is to purge the system is that no medicine can take effect nor can the system work properly while the colon (large intestine) is clogged up. If the colon were not clogged up the chances are 10 to 1 that you would not have been ill at all.

It may take some time for the clogging process to reach the stage where it produces real illness, but, no matter how long it takes, while it is going on the functions are not working so as to keep us up to "concert pitch." Our livers are sluggish, we are dull and heavy—slight or severe headaches come on — our sleep does not rest us—in short, we are about 50 per cent efficient.

And if this condition progresses to where real illness develops, it is impossible to tell what form that illness will take, because—The blood is constantly circulating through the colon and, taking up by absorption the poisons in the waste which it contains, it distributes them throughout the system and weakens it so that we are subject to whatever disease is most prevalent.

The nature of the illness depends on our own little weakness and what we are the least able to resist.

These facts are all scientifically correct in every particular, and it has often surprised me that they are not more generally known and appreciated. All we have to do is to consider the treatment that we have received in illness to realize fully how it developed, and the methods used to remove it.

So you see that not only is accumulated waste directly and constantly pulling down our efficiency by making our blood poor and our intellect dull—our spirits low and our ambitions weak, but it is responsible through its weakening and infecting processes for a list of illnesses that if catalogued here would seem almost unbelievable.

It is the direct and immediate cause of that very expensive and dangerous complaint—appendicitis.

If we can successfully eliminate the waste all our functions work properly and in accord—there are no poisons being taken up by the blood, so it is pure and imparts strength to every part of the body instead of weakness—there is nothing to clog up the system and make us bilious, dull and nervously fearful.

With everything working in perfect accord and without obstruction, our brains are clear, our entire physical being is competent to respond quickly to every requirement, and we are 100 per cent. efficient.

Now this waste that I speak of cannot be thoroughly removed by drugs, but even if it could the effect of these drugs on the functions is very unnatural, and if continued become a periodical necessity.

Note the opinions on drugging of two most eminent physicians:—

Prof. Alonzo Clark, M. D. of the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, says: "All of our curative agents are poisons, and as a consequence, every dose diminishes the patient's vitality."

Prof. Joseph M. Smith, M.D., of the same school, says: "All medicines which enter the circulation, poison the blood in the same manner as do the poisons that produce disease."

Now, the internal organism can be kept as sweet and pure and clean as the external and by the same natural, sane method —bathing. By the proper system, warm water can be introduced so that the colon is perfectly cleansed and kept pure.

There is no violence in this process—it seems to be just as normal and natural as washing one's hands.

Physicians are taking it up more widely and generally every day, and it seems as though everyone should be informed thoroughly on a practice which, though so rational and simple, is revolutionary in its accomplishments.

This is rather a delicate subject to write of exhaustively in the public press, but Chas. A. Tyrrell, M. D., has prepared an interesting treatise on "Why Man of Today Is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient," which treats the subject very exhaustively, and which he will send without cost to any one addressing him at 134 West 65th Street, New York, and mentioning that they have read this article in THE LOS ANGELES TIMES.

Personally, I am enthusiastic on Internal Bathing because I have seen what it has done in illness as well as in health, and I believe that every person who wishes to keep in as near a perfect condition as is humanly possible should at least be informed on this subject; he will also probably learn something about himself which he has never known through reading the little book to which I refer.

GOOD LITTLE POEMS.

Unmasked.

He laughed at a God; and he turned his eyes
On the city's late-burned lights;
The foetid breath of sin, to him,
Seemed no more with the red than the white.
He sneered at their "faith" and he sneered at their "hope,"
And he scoffed at the "fools who pray;"
I heard him, mute, for his steel-hard look
Forbade that I doubt his say.

Came a day when the full, deep-throated spring
Gave voice to the soul to each living thing;
Flowers wandered the hills and roads along,
And the woods were reeling with joy-drunk song,
Bareheaded he stood on a grass-kissed knoll.
With his face to the rising sun—
And the God-light there in his deep-set eyes
Gave the lie, at last, to his tongue.

VIRGINIA KEATING.

Strenuous Times.

Father's in the garden,
Straining all his nerves;
Mother's in the kitchen,
Straining her preserves;
Brother's straining muscles—
But we can't rejoice,
For sister's at the organ,
Straining her poor voice.

—[Yonkers Statesman.

Vision.

"Look then in thine own heart and write,"
The maxim gives advice;
But let me add some counsel there:
"Before you write, look twice!"
For what you see at first will be
Of Truth but surface view,
But like all revelations glimpsed
'Twill look so big to you
That you'll believe naught else in earth
Or heaven can be true!
And thus are dogmatists fast born
Who give truths error-stained,
When they through crystal heart might look
To God, true seers ordained.

Paper Finger Bowls.

A very practical advance in sanitation has been adopted by the proprietor of several western hotels and railroad eating-houses, by the substitution of individual finger bowls of paraffined paper for the glass bowl used in common with other guests. An ornamental band, sustained by uprights, holds a crimpled bowl of paper made impervious by paraffin. This dainty dish may contain the conventional slice of lemon or geranium leaf floating on the water, and when once used, the paper bowl is thrown away.

Draping Mourning Toque.

[Indianapolis News:] Much of the style which many a mourning toque might have is lost because the long veil in crepe or voile or marquisette is inartistically draped. The length of filmy black should be laid in six narrow folds, slanting at either side of the toque, separating at front center to form an inverted V from the top, the crown proper being smoothly covered. When these folds reach almost to within two inches of the back center of the brim, they are allowed to fall loosely, and the remaining length of material becomes a single, flowing scarf, which should be drawn forward over the right shoulder. The long mourning veil flowing loose over the back of the costume is absolutely out of fashion.

[New York Sun:] Changing the ration too quickly has disorganized many a flock and spoiled the egg record. It's all right to try out feeds and formulae, but this should be done with a few hens and thus the risk is small. While the popularity of the hen's egg, compared to the duck's, is ascribed to the fact that she always advertises it by loud cackling, this is not the whole truth in an egg shell. There is a Rip Van Winkle prejudice against the quack's egg that declares it is stringy and unpalatable. Those who have dined on the modern duck egg call this all quackery.

Pagliacci.

Child of those lovers, mortal mirth and woe,
Poor Pagliaccio, fool and lover both,
How often have I laughed, and left you loath,
Not dreaming that your play was mingled so
With prayers and creeping dread; or that the show
Of gaudy silks could hide so red a heart,
A mind so tantalized and torn apart,
A soul so taunted of the powers below.
And look! the laugh, the kiss, the sudden blow,
The flaring lights, and frightened faces round
A stained and sinking form! Oh, sure I know
That rising, ringing cry! The knife has found
A lovely sheath! Aha, Pagliaccio!
Your heart was breaking then; I know that sound.

—[Douglas Duer, in June Century.

The Last Shrine.

Not all my treasure hath the bandit Time
Locked in his glimmering caverns of the past:
Fair women dead, and friendships of old rhyme,
And noble dreams that had to end at last.
Ah, these indeed, and from youth's sacristy
Full many a holy relic hath he torn,
Vessels of mystic faith God filled for me,
Holding them up to Him in life's young morn.
All these are mine no more; Time hath them all—
Time and his adamantine jailer Death.
Despoilure vast; yet seemeth it but small
When unto thee I turn, thy bloom and breath.
Filling with light and incense the last shrine,
Innermost, inaccessible—yea, thine!

—[Richard Le Gallienne, in June Century.

Profitable Volcano.

[Unidentified:] The republic of Salvador is the only government on earth that collects lighthouse fees on account of a volcano that it owns—and without the slightest cost of upkeep!

The volcanic beacon is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla, and its pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night is visible for many miles out at sea. It bursts forth every seven minutes, and is just as accurate as any revolving light that warns mariners of danger in any part of the world. Every vessel that puts in at Acajutla has to pay its lighthouse fee. There is no other lighthouse than the volcano, but that is a sufficient excuse for the government of Salvador to make the regulation charge for its gratuitous services.

Tango Straps.

It has been proved that leather traps are much more comfortable for tangoing than laces, because they give more support to the instep.

If ribbons are tied too tight they make the feet swell, and if they are too loose they slip down. After many experiments in both high boots and low slippers the low shoes with cross straps seems to give most satisfaction. The high boot, unless it has a brocade upper, is usually laced or strapped its full height, allowing the fancy stocking to show. When the upper is of cloth, it usually matches or corresponds with the gown with which it is worn.

Modern Spirit.

The young man edged himself diffidently into the presence of the old man.

"What can I do for you, sir?" asked the elder.

"I shall come directly to the point," said the younger. "I wish to marry your daughter."

This was the old gentleman's cue to get out his handkerchief, and he did it.

"Alas!" he wept, "how shall I ever spare her? Her mother is dead and she is all I have left. And I am an old man—not long for this world."

"You interest me strangely," put in the suitor, cheerfully. "What other recommendations has she?"—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HUMOR.

[Fliegende Blaetter:] "However did you hear such dreadful things about Mrs. Huber?"

"You forget she was once my dearest friend."

[New York Evening Post:] The Prima's husband: I see a stock exchange seat has sold for $50,000.

The Prima: My! How I'd like to sing in that house.

[Boston Transcript:] Fewscadds: I tell you frankly that I shall not be able to pay for this suit until next year.

Tailor: All right, sir.

F.: When will it be ready.

T.: Next year.

[St. Louis Republic:] "My wife is always complaining she has nothing to wear."

"Great Scott, fellow! What on earth is she kicking about. Go to her quick and tell her she's right in style and does not know it."

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] The Seeress: You will soon marry a man with loads of money who will give you a princely allowance. Two dollars, please.

Customer: I'll pay you out of the allowance. Good-by.

[Louisville Courier-Journal:] "It is said that a worm will eat twenty times its own weight from sunrise to sunset."

"Then what's the use of being an early bird? Better ketch the worm at the end of the day."

[Detroit Free Press:] "Why does Miss Smith, dancing the tango, remind you of a constellation of stars?"

"She doesn't. Why does she remind you?"

"Because she's a greatdipper."

[Brooklyn Eagle:] Officer: What's the matter with that soup you're turning up your nose at?

Private: It's full of sand and grit, sir.

Officer: Now look here, my man, did you come to camp to grumble or to serve our country?

Private: Well, I did come to serve my country, sir; but not to eat it.

[Life:] He: There's no use introducing me to anyone. I can't dance.

She: What nonsense! I saw you dancing with Miss James the other night.

"Yes, but she hasn't spoken to me since."

[Kansas City Journal:] "Why does that lady grin so every time she sees you?"

"She knows I'm only getting $10 a week."

"But why the grain?"

"I was engaged to her once and broke it off, and she afterward married a millionaire.

[Buffalo Commercial:] "My husband sees pink elephants when he drinks."

"Mine has a worse delusion than that. He sees green dogs. It's very expensive, too."

"How's that?"

"Why, he goes and buys licenses for 'em."

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] The lawyer was endeavoring to pump some free advice out of the doctor.

"Which side is the best to lie on, doc?"

"The side that pays you the retainer."

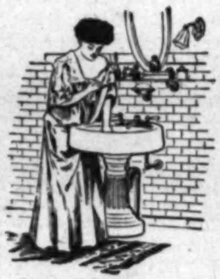
The Home as a Basis

Rightly considered, the home is seen to be the vital factor in life—the steadying, guiding influence which extended by outside means results in well balanced, healthy, ambitious people.

But, if an unhomelike home, its depressing surroundings enervate.

"Once Upon A Time"

Once people were content with the wooden washtub and "dishpan," not realizing the economy of modern bathroom equipment. They now, in some cases, still not realizing, lag behind progress and are content with ordinary equipment when ideal sanitary equipment of beautiful pattern can be had at such little additional cost.



"Standard" "Copley" Lavatory

You want more than convenience and sanitation. You want convenience and sanitation made beautiful. You want to be proud of your home. You want your children to have every facility and inducement that a good home offers to make the most of themselves.

Considered in this manner, can you afford to do less than carefully consider the matter? We will gladly show you hundreds of artistic "Standard" designs and explain how our planning with you saves you money. We assure you complete satisfaction.
